SMOKE STARTS STAMPEDE

Youngest Children, Two Only 2 Years Old, Borne Down by Surging Mass.

OWNERS AND JANITOR HELD

Manslaughter Charge Preferred for Admitting Minors Without Guardians.

VICTIMS WERE FOREIGNERS

No Fire, but Crowd Ran When Smoke Poured Up from Furnace.

The sight and smell of smoke leaking up through holes in the floor from the basement where the furnace fire was being started caused a panic in which six children were killed and ten injured at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the New Catharine Moving Picture Theatre at 76 Catharine Street, near Cherry Street.

The killed and injured children were all rolled downstairs, trampled on and piled up in a heap at the bottom of an exit staircase from the gallery, in which 100 spectators had been sitting, nearly all children. The 200 downstairs escaped with little difficulty.

Unable to make speed with their short legs down the flight of seventeen steps, the little children became obstacles in the path of the panic-stricken older children and men and women. Bowled over by the knees and feet of those plunging down the stairs in long, frightened strides, the children rolled and fell headlong to be trodden to death against the lower steps and the bottom of the staircase.

The crushed layer of little bodies formed a pad which saved the lives of the other children, who, in their turn, fell and were trampled on.

Those physically able to take care of themselves waded through, dived and wriggled over the heap of dead and living babies and youngsters. Among the six killed were Tessie Guidica, 12 years old, of 37 Oliver Street, and her two-year-old charge, Dominick Manscolla, an orphan who was adopted by her parents. Another of the dead was Joseph Lombarda, 2 years old, of 140 Cherry Street.

Dead and Injured in a Mass.

The first rescuers found nearly all the dead and injured children with their arms, legs, heads and bodies so interlocked and dovetailed that the mass seemed to be solid. Peter Romano of 24 Madison Street, a chauffeur, who was one of the first to arrive, said that he tried to pull a boy from the top of the wailing and crying mass. Seizing him by the shoulders, he dragged the boy about a foot, and he found that three or four other little victims were so involved with the boy that they were dragged along too. At the next pull, he gained nothing, so solidly were the four children embedded among the others, and they began to scream with the pain involved in the attempt to rescue them.

Gradually children whose limbs were all near the surface of the heap, were lifted from the bodies beneath and the disentanglement began. According to Romano and others who arrived first, the bodies lay six deep, while the women, shouting in many languages, screaming and fighting to get into the theatre, made it necessary for the rescuers to fight for elbow room in which to save lives.

The staircase was a long straight one, between four and five feet wide, with a wooden landing eight feet long between the bottom step and an inner metal door, which was opened. It was on the bottom step and on this landing that the children were trodden to death.

Outside Door Locked.

The outside door, which is about five feet from the inner door, was locked, which officials said last night was a violation of the law. Its being locked may have slowed up the flight of the panic-stricken crowd from the gallery and increased the horror at the landing. There were two swinging doors adjoining it, however, through which the survivors of the staircase made their way to the street. According to some of the first to arrive, the swinging doors were partly covered wooden billboards covered with scenes in color from the reels being shown during the week.

Because of the suspected violations of the law, Bernard Weinberg and Max Schwartz, the two proprietors, the furnace man and the operator of the moving-picture projector were arrested shortly before midnight on a charge of manslaughter by order of Assistant District Attorney Benedict Dineen, on the ground that they admitted children unaccompanied by parents or guardians. Deputy Chief "Smoky" Joe Martin, after looking over the place, said there

Manslaughter Charge Against Proprietors For Admitting Children Without Parents

Bernard Weinberg and Max Schwartz, proprietors of the New Catharine Theatre, and Joseph Pollvani, the janitor, were arrested last night on charges of manslaughter by order of Assistant District Attorney Benedict Dineen, as a result of the death of six children in a panic in the theatre. Mr. Dineen charged that the three men were guilty of a misdemeanor resulting in manslaughter by admitting children to the theatre without parents or guardians.

Pollvani was taking tickets at the door a short time before the panic occurred. All three were held without bail for examination today. The action was taken following the statement of Theresa Lombardo, 14 years old, of 140 Cherry Street, whose 2-year-old brother was killed in the panic. The girl said she bought the tickets of admission for herself and small brother and was allowed to enter the theatre, though unaccompanied.

2 ACTRESSES DEAD IN A CHICAGO PARK

New York Girls, Inquest Decides, Were Victims of Alcoholism and Exposure.

MALE COMPANIONS SOUGHT

Police Believe Auto Party Ended in Tragedy—Hold Two Men in Jane Cowl Company.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—The bodies of two young women were found today beside the roadway that fringes the lake in Grant Park. Life had been extinct about five hours. Investigation established the victims' identity, but the authorities are still searching for the young women's male companions on a wild automobile party, which they believe ended in the tragedy. According to the Coroner's physician, death was due to alcoholism and exposure.

The young women were Miss Maree Ramey, also known as Rhodes, and Miss Lillian Thompson, both New York actresses. They resided at 509 North Dearborn Street. Robert McCarthy and James Meeks, electricians, of the Jane Cowl company, now playing "Smiling Through" at the Cort Theatre, also resided there.

McCarthy and Meeks identified the bodies. They were taken into custody pending the inquest. Sylvia and Pietro Citti, delicatessen and wine merchants at 309 West Illinois Street, are also being held.

Shortly before 9 o'clock this morning a man dressed in a black overcoat and black derby hat walked into the Insurance Exchange Building.

"Take me up to the fourteenth floor," he ordered Tony Yanley, the elevator man, according to Yanley's story.

Tells Police of Girls' Death.

When the elevator stopped the man left and walked west toward the offices of Conkling, Price & Webb, insurance men.

Two minutes later a tiny red light showed on the switchboard of the Wabash Telephone Exchange. It came from No. 1225, a private 'phone of the Conkling concern.

"Give me Main 13," a male voice responded to the operator's "Number, please?"

The signal on the phone board at the Central Police Bureau buzzed a warning. The police operator answered.

"If you'll go down to the foot of Jackson Street in Grant Park, at the lake front, you'll find a couple of dead women," a man's voice said. "I was driving by there with my wife and daughter and saw them."

The call was traced back immediately to the office of Conkling, Price & Webb, according to telephone officials.

From that time the man in the black overcoat and derby hat had disappeared. The police would like to talk to him.

Train Thieves Take Registered Mail from San Francisco-New York Express.

MINT GOLD LOSS DENIED

Robbers Throw Sacks Out of Window as Train Nears Council Bluffs.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Nov. 14.—Train robbers last night between Omaha and Council Bluffs looted the treasure car of the through fast mail from San Francisco to New York. While the exact amount stolen will not be known for perhaps a month, it is put at least at $20,000. It was first reported that the robbers had obtained a large gold shipment from the San Francisco Mint to the Treasury in Washington and that their plunder in gold, currency, bonds and jewels amounted to $10,000,000 or $12,000,000. Official denial was made, however, that the train carried a gold shipment.

Today the police of Omaha and Council Bluffs, Sheriffs of each county, Postal Inspectors and detectives are hunting for the robbers, who seem to have disappeared completely, taking the loot with them.

"Somebody connected with the Department, some one on the inside, was in the plot," said Marshall Eberstein, Chief of Police of Omaha.

The car was made up in San Francisco last Wednesday and consisted of shipments of money, stocks and bonds and other registered valuables from many different California towns and cities, addressed to banks and persons in all of the cities of the Atlantic Coast as well as in Chicago. Until complaints from shippers or consignees begin to arrive, the department has no way of checking up the different shipments.

The treasure car came into Omaha on a Union Pacific train and was transferred to the Burlington at this place. It was placed in the centre of the Burlington fast mail. When the car left Omaha it was securely locked and bolted. The train stopped at the Union Pacific transfer between Omaha and Council Bluffs. Up to that time the treasure car was still intact.

When the train stopped at the city station in Council Bluffs about half an hour after leaving the Union Station in Omaha, a postal clerk attempted to pass through the car to the front of the train. He found the door chained on the inside. He summoned other clerks and the door was broken down.

The inside of the car was in disorder. A large number of sacks of valuables were missing. A window on the south side had been broken open and the registered mail sacks had been thrown out while the train was in motion. The robbers are supposed to have leaped through the window as, passing between the transfer and the station, the train runs not more than five miles an hour.

An hour was required to organize pursuit and search the route which the fast mail had traversed. In that time all the loot had been transferred to

Standard Oil Cuts the Price of Gasoline; Down One Cent a Gallon in Wagon Supply

Tank wagon prices of gasoline will be reduced one cent a gallon tomorrow in States in which the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana operate, it was announced here last night by Walter C. Teagle, President of the New Jersey company.

States in which the reduction will be effective include New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and the District of Columbia, in which the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey operates, and in Louisiana, Tennessee and Arkansas, in which the Louisiana company operates.

The reduction in price is not the result of lower costs, either of crude oil or labor, Mr. Teagle said, but is a movement on the part of the company to aid in the lowering of prices as part of the general commercial adjustment.

Announcement of the reduction in Louisiana was accompanied by the following statement:

"While there has been no material release from any of the conditions which brought the rise in the price of petroleum products, the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana believes that the process of readjustment now under way in the business world must eventually contribute to lower costs of producing and refining oil.

"Up to date there has been no lowering of labor costs for crude oil prices nor recessions in the demand for gasoline. Reductions which have already taken place in many of the principal items entering into the cost of living have for the most part not reached the ultimate consumer, but it is inevitable that before long lower prices will be brought about by new quotations now prevailing in primary markets."

Prices of tank wagon gasoline, under the reduction, will vary in the different States, it was explained, owing to differences in freight costs. The effect upon the retail price generally was not predicted by company officials. In New Orleans the price will be reduced to 28½ cents tomorrow. The present New Jersey price is from 31 to 33 cents.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A further series of skirmishes between the forces of the Crown and the Sinn Feiners during the week-end resulted in five police being killed and nine wounded. The Sinn Feiners lost five wounded and two prisoners.

On Saturday night a party of seven police were ordered to a farmer's house at Knockbonnee, County Kildare, which had been fired into. As they approached the building fifteen men emerged and flashing a lamp on the officers fired at them. In the fight which ensued two of the civilians were wounded and five others were captured, the injured men escaping. There were no police casualties.

A police motor truck with a patrol party of seven men was ambushed at Lisvernane, near Tipperary, on Saturday and two constables were murdered. Another died of his wounds. Three were injured and one escaped unhurt.

In another ambush near Bambia, County Clare, a bomb was thrown into a motor truck. The police and their assailants exchanged shots and two constables were killed and four wounded. Two more constables of a party of eleven were wounded by civilians who lay in wait for their car near Geashill, King's County.

DUBLIN, Nov. 14.—Called upon to halt by a military patrol in Albert Place last evening, a number of civilians ran away. A shot was fired by the patrol and passed through the chest of a twelve-year-old girl and entered the arm of another girl, aged 5. The first child died.

Notices terminating the engagements of the weekly employes all over the Midland Great Western Railway system came into operation today, but the men will be continued in employment from day to day until the line is compelled to close, which may be within a week.

LOOT WHISKY TRAIN; BATTLE WITH POLICE

Rum Thieves Kidnap Guard and Get Away with $65,000 Worth of Liquor.

ONE HUNDRED SHOTS FIRED

Officer Overpowered and Carried 100 Miles—Plunder Hauled Away in 7 Stolen Trucks.

After kidnapping a special policeman who was guarding $250,000 worth of whisky and alcohol in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards at Newark, a gang of twenty rum thieves early yesterday carted away three carloads of loot valued at more than $65,000 and abandoned their plans only after a pistol fight with police. More than 100 shots were fired, but all the thieves escaped.

Police believe that three or four gangs of rum thieves combined for one stupendous theft after they had learned that about fifteen cars of whisky and alcohol were in the South Broad Street yards awaiting unloading by dealers operating under Federal permits. Detectives following clues found that the robbers had laid their plans carefully so there would be little trace for police to work on.

Beginning on a careful plan on Saturday evening, detachments were sent from the rendezvous to steal motor trucks to cart away the loot. Two of seven trucks, believed to have been stolen, were abandoned by the robbers when the police surprised the gang at work. A report of the theft of one of the trucks already had been made to Newark Police Headquarters.

The next step in the robbers' plans was to kidnap the special policeman who was guarding the whisky train and to post pickets to keep away other special patrolmen who were in other parts of the railroad yards. Policeman James Gregory was overcome before he had suspected the ruse of five thieves.

Policeman Carried Away.

Gregory was patrolling Pioneer Street near the freight yards when a black touring car drew up and the driver shouted through the darkness:

"Which is the road to Atlantic City?"

Before the special policeman could utter a word, a man sprang suddenly from the rear seat, seized the patrolman by the neck and hurled him to the ground. Four other men sprang into the heap, disarmed the policeman, put a sack over his head and piled him quickly into their automobile.

After a half hour's ride they took the sack off, told him they would kill him if he made an outcry, and proceeded to give him a 100-mile ride through Elizabeth, Springfield, Bernardsville, and other towns. At daylight they hurled him from the car in Singas, near Paterson, and told him to lie prostrate on the ground until the automobile was out of hearing. Not knowing where he was, Gregory hurried along the road to find a telephone so that he could notify the headquarters of the railroad police in Jersey City.

While the guard was taking his ride the thieves had six hours' uninterrupted work. They had cleaned out three cars of whisky and alcohol before a switch engine raced through the yards, and then the leader of the gang reached for another trick in the craft of thieves. It didn't work.

"Say," said he to the engineer, "me and my men have a lot of early deliveries to make today and we're having one hard time getting at our cars. Couldn't you pull this train out of the yards for us so we could back up our trucks to the doors and work fast? Here, take a case for your crew."

At first the engineer was inclined to aid the glib young man, who looked like a clerk, with overalls, a pencil behind his ear and a sheaf of yellow bills of lading in his hand. But the talk about free whisky scared him off.

"Yes," he replied. "I'll come back and move those cars for you, but right now I've got a hurry call to move some refrigerators down at the other end of the yard. I'll be right back inside of ten minutes."

And he was—with a flat car loaded with twenty railroad police and with some patrolmen from the Newark forces. As the locomotive drew up opposite the whisky train the policemen leaped off and rushed at the gang of workers, who dropped their tools, drew pistols and fled, firing as they ran. Some climbed to the tops of cars and ran along the trains, shooting at the police, who returned the fire as dark figures on the

HARDING SHIVERS FOR HOURS IN TRAIN

Tries to Leave Gale-Swept Point Isabel, but "Special" Stalls and Returns.

COVERED ONLY TWO MILES

Storm Sweeps Through Windows Into Unheated Car—Mrs. Harding Serves Sandwiches.

POINT ISABEL, Texas, Nov. 14.—Failing in an adventurous attempt to quit storm-swept Point Isabel and conclude his vacation in more comfortable quarters in Brownsville, President-elect Harding returned here tonight after being marooned for four hours on an uninhabited stretch of Texas prairie, and decided to postpone his moving until tomorrow.

The failure to reach Brownsville was due to a breakdown of the narrow-gauge gasoline-propelled railway train on which the President-elect and his party had started away early in the afternoon.

After being informed that automobile traffic between the places was impossible because of the storm that disrupted the party's vacation plans, they returned at 7 o'clock in the evening, without having been more than two miles away from the Point.

Another attempt to move into Brownsville will be made tomorrow morning, but it is uncertain whether Mr. Harding will choose the railway or the winding, rain-soaked trail that leads into town through the monotonous expanse of cactus and mesquite. Late tonight there were some indications that possibilities of a passage by motor were improving, but the special train was held for his use if he should want it.

Bore Up Good-Naturedly.

The adventures of the President-elect in his unsuccessful effort to get away from Point Isabel had many humorous and melodramatic touches. But both Mr. Harding and his guests bore their misfortunes good-naturedly and came back smiling, to unpack their baggage and spend another night at this seashore resort, of which they had taken leave five hours before.

It was early in the day that Senator Harding decided he no longer could hope to be comfortable in his little frame cottage overlooking Laguna Madre, apparently a special target during the last three days of the cold, wet Gulf coast norther that overturned his ambitions for tarpon fishing and golf. He asked about the automobile facilities for the trip to Brownsville, but abandoned that avenue of departure when he learned by telephone that some members of his party who started to motor in last night had arrived after daylight and had walked almost all of the way. So he appealed to the narrow gauge.

It was an eventful day in the history of the Rio Grande Railway. Hauling Presidents is a novelty, for ordinarily its train makes but one trip to Point Isabel and back, bringing out mail and provisions during the morning and taking in a load of fish late in the day. It usually moves leisurely, two or three hours being given over by the Mexican train crew to a safe and sane journey over the twenty miles.

Today it taxed its facilities to accommodate the party of thirty-five. Railway officials decided to supply two trains, and one of them came out before noon and sidetracked in the patio waiting for orders. The other was not so fortunate. Half way out it was derailed and at 2 o'clock, the hour fixed for departure, the second train was not yet in sight nor was there any word from it.

Because there is only a single track train officials waited nearly an hour for the second section of the Presidential special. But the President-elect and the Senators and his guests were on board and the driver grew impatient, cranked up his engine, and started.

Party Unable to Keep Warm.

The train consisted of the motor, an old style narrow gauge baggage car and a passenger coach of similar proportions, having the general characteristics of a small-town street car. The seats ran lengthwise, instead of across the car, and a small stove in the centre of the aisle vomited smoke and sparks as it struggled valiantly against the icy gale. But its work was handicapped by the absence of several window panes, and the members of the party bundled themselves up in their

30,000 KILLED, 40,000 CAPTURED IN BATTLE WHEN REDS CRUSH WRANGEL'S ARMY; SEVERAL GENERALS KILL THEMSELVES

Joffe, Bolshevist Agent, Accuses Poland and Makes Threats at Riga Peace Conference

RIGA, Nov. 13.—The Polish peace delegation headed by M. Dombski and including Vice Minister of Trade and Industry Strassburger, M. Vasilevski, Ambassador to Esthonia, and MM. Lekhovstch and Kauzik arrived here today. M. Dombski will have his first meeting with Adolph Joffe, President of the Russian Soviet Government delegation, tonight.

M. Joffe, in the course of a conference with M. Vasilevski, Vice President of the Polish delegation, accused Poland of a breach of the preliminary peace treaty by maintaining an army within her frontiers and allowing on her territory the belligerent forces of Generals Petlura and Balakovitch, who are fighting the Bolsheviki.

M. Joffe asked that the Warsaw Government be warned that the Soviet troops would be reinforced and that retaliatory measures were contemplated.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS MEETS TEST TODAY

Lord Robert Cecil Confident It Will Prove Its Worth from the Start.

SMOOTH ASSEMBLY'S WAY

Conferences Deal with Subjects to Come Up—Council Leaves Places for Americans.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Nov. 14 (by telephone to Paris).—Lord Robert Cecil, the foremost British advocate of the League of Nations, believes that the first meeting tomorrow of the Assembly will be the turning point of the League's history. He is convinced that such progress will be made in Geneva that the League will be recognized everywhere, even in America, as a powerful, working organization.

Chosen delegate for South Africa to the Geneva Assembly against the wishes of the British Government and over the protests of the French and the criticism of other nations, Cecil promises to be the outstanding figure of the Geneva Assembly. He also promises to be its stormy petrel. Nominated by General Smuts after Lloyd George had refused him as a British delegate, Cecil, whose ideas at the peace conference were not those of Lloyd George, is understood to be bringing to Geneva proposals that may not be approved by the British delegates. France opposed him, but he is here.

He received me and another American correspondent this afternoon in the Beau Rivage Hotel. With his lanky form deep in an armchair before a window overlooking the beautiful lake with the silhouette of Mont Blanc in the distance, Lord Robert talked long and interestingly. He declined to discuss for publication the relations between the League of Nations and the United States. However, it was easy to deduce from his confidence in the League's future that he does not believe the American plan for a separate association will become a reality. He seems rather to think that America will enter the League with reservations and changes. He said: "This meeting is the turning point of the League's history. From the papers I have examined as a delegate and conversations with other delegates here, I am convinced that the forty-one nations assembled for this meeting come with the honest desire to establish the League on a firm and durable basis. There is no exception to that. I am sure we will make important progress."

Hope for American Membership.

He expressed regret that America was not represented, but hoped that in the not too distant future the United States would be present with moral and material support.

The general opinion here is that the first move regarding America must come from Washington. While no members of the important delegations were prepared to discuss the United States, I am able to state that nothing is likely to be done—at this meeting at any rate—toward officially getting the adhesion of America to the League. At the present moment the matter cannot be taken up officially with Senator Harding. Moreover, no one here yet knows what the United States really wants. It is likely that the whole subject will be postponed with a view to the next meeting of the Assembly, which will probably take place in May. It is thought that by that time the new Administration will have made public its plans.

Germany is a great interrogation mark to the present Assembly. She has not applied for admission and her Foreign Minister says she will not apply. It is possible that one of the other members may apply for her. I think such a request would fail to command an affirmative vote because, although Germany might get acceptance on her own request, there is a strong feeling that the League should not spontaneously ask Germany to enter. The reason is that this might involve international complications. Germany must ask for admis-

GOVERNMENT NIPS HUNGARIAN PLOT

Arrests Conspirators Who Planned a Revolt Against Ratification of Peace.

ASSEMBLY ACCEPTS TREATY

Deputies Vote in Tears and Wearing Mourning Insignia—Many Quit the Chamber.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Nov. 13.—The Hungarian Government has just come into possession of plans for its overthrow by a more or less secret political society in Budapest—plans, too, which almost inevitably mean a challenge to the Allies. These plans were discovered apparently just in the nick of time.

The Hungarian National Assembly passed a bill today for the ratification of the Peace Treaty of Trianon, but this secret political society was prepared, according to the documents discovered, to prevent by force the meeting of the Assembly and to proclaim a new Government. A list of members of the proposed new Cabinet was seized. Among the names are those of several anti-Semitic leaders.

If this political revolt had succeeded it would have inevitably led to the immediate restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy, this being one of the articles in the creed of the secret society.

The whole story as it reaches here is strange and far from clear, but it explains many things which have been hitherto dark and unfathomable in the recent history of Budapest. As the result of the recent murder of a policeman by terrorists, the Government was forced by the police to undertake a search more thorough than any which had followed other murders. Members of a terrorist gang of officers living at the Hotel Britannia were arrested, while steps were taken to dissolve the political society Awakening Hungary, known to be reactionary.

Plans for the coup d'état were found in possession of this society, which worked apparently in close co-operation with the officers in the Hotel Britannia. Several murders which lately startled and puzzled Budapest have been traced to the activities of this organization, and it has been disclosed that it has been maintaining an elaborate system of espionage, many women having been employed as spies. Already a good many of these spies have been arrested.

The situation is complicated by the fact that, after all, these various societies pursue the same policy as that of the Government, on the whole. Should the inquiry be pursued too far the Government will be forced to pursue its own friends, as difference between these societies and the Government is one of temper, not of principle.

Meanwhile, however, a bill has been introduced into the Assembly for the proclamation of martial law. All public meetings have already been forbidden, with the exception of those of members of the National Assembly, while indefinite leave has been granted the military commandant of Budapest, since he is thought to be compromised. The Government, after all, seems to be vigorously pursuing its inquiries. Some 800 arrests have been made in or connected with the Hotel Britannia.

The ratification of the Treaty by the Assembly was marked by a certain solemnity, as the long time which has elapsed between the signing and the ratification has by no means reconciled the Hungarians to the peace terms. All the members of the Assembly attended in mourning garb, and the closing speeches were delivered in tones appropriate to the sombre dress of the Assembly.

The Prime Minister, Count Teleky, announced that he would take the responsibility for the making of peace, and urged all members of the Cabinet to make a declaration that they also assumed their share. This gratuitous shouldering of an onus from which, after all, there was no escape failed to impress certain intransigeants in the Assembly, who rose and walked out, wishing to take no part in what they considered the final humiliation. The remaining members of the Assembly then

FOE AT SEBASTOPOL GATES

Three Divisions Held 22 at Bay in Score of Assaults

REDS ADMIT HUGE LOSSES

YALTA AND EUPATORIA FALL

French Said to Have Obtained Eight Days for Evacuation of Crimea by Population.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 14 (Associated Press).—The army of General Wrangel, the anti-Bolshevist leader in South Russia, has been wiped out, and a number of his Generals have committed suicide.

The Bolsheviki have taken both Yalta and Eupatoria, and their cavalry is approaching Sebastopol, according to the latest advices received here. A mob in Sebastopol has pillaged the American Red Cross stocks.

The fighting at Perekop was of the most desperate character. The Bolsheviki, according to latest advices, admit they had 30,000 men killed. They claim to have taken 40,000 prisoners. They owe their success largely to the use of poison gas.

Withstood Twenty-two Assaults.

The Reds broke through the defenses on the isthmus, according to the best reports obtainable here, by concentrating twenty divisions against three divisions of the White Army. Wrangel's men, although greatly outnumbered, withstood twenty-two assaults before Perekop, but finally were beaten. The commanders of most of Wrangel's units were killed, and the losses in men also were very large.

Premier Krivochin of General Wrangel's Government, who arrived here yesterday to arrange for the transport of women, children and wounded, said that Wrangel's forces were exhausted by the incessant attacks. The Reds took no heed of losses. Three or four columns attacked en masse, often being annihilated, but fresh troops were constantly brought up.

The success of the Bolsheviki is attributed largely to the excellence of its high command, which is said to be directed by a foreigner.

It is stated that at the request of the French representative attached to Wrangel's headquarters eight days have been granted for evacuation of the Crimea. This is going on under great difficulties. It is a problem how the refugees can be cared for in Constantinople, as this city already is overpopulated. The Allied authorities here are requisitioning all available buildings along the Bosporus and the shelters and barracks on Princes' Islands in the Sea of Marmora to house the refugees.

The American torpedo boat destroyers at Sebastopol are evacuating officers and their families. The American destroyer Humphreys went to Yalta to take off the Red Cross supplies.

Report of Mutiny in Wrangel Army.

SEBASTOPOL, Nov. 14.—Mutinies in General Wrangel's army brought about his sudden defeat, it was learned here today.

The French warship Waldeck-Rousseau is in port ready to embark General Wrangel, who is here.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—General Wrangel's army, thoroughly beaten, is continuing to retreat southward, according to information received by the French Foreign Office today, pursued by a well commanded Bolshevist army of twenty-seven divisions. General Wrangel has suffered great losses and many of his officers have been killed.

General Wrangel has gone aboard one of the French warships in Sebastopol, but the vessel is still remaining in port, says the advices. The evacuation is continuing but there is inadequate shipping for the number of persons seeking to flee.

Wrangel's troops are declared to have fought splendidly in the battle of their defeat, which began with the loss of Perekop and soon developed into a wild retreat toward headquarters at Sebastopol.

The United States transport Faraly has arrived here with 300 sick and wounded, who were cared for by the American Red Cross. It is said that the Reds were joined by some Ukrainians in spreading terror among the populace in the Crimea.

The Bolsheviki did not storm the Perekop lines, but by an enveloping movement of their left wing invaded the Crimea. They crossed over the ice-frozen Putrid Sea and attacked the main body of General Wrangel's troops, which then were still holding the Perekop defenses, from the rear.

General Wrangel decided not to attempt guerrilla warfare in the Crimea, the information adds, owing to the overwhelming Bolshevist forces converging on the peninsula, which are variously estimated at between 150,000 and 200,000 men.

Other dispatches received at the Foreign Ministry assert that there have been no mutinies. On the contrary, they praise the courage of the White Army and the sacrifices of their officers. The dispatches say that the White Army inflicted heavy losses on the Bolsheviki, but that they were overwhelmed by the Reds, who are reported to be well organized and led. Some of their officers are said to be Germans.

Makno's Desertion Doomed Army.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 15.—Some days ago it was announced that Trotzky in person was directing the Red army's advance against General Wrangel, which is only explainable on the hypothesis that final success was hoped for.

One of the most serious blows suffered by Wrangel at the height of his successes against the Bolsheviki was the defection some weeks ago of General Makno, the Ukranian peasant leader, whose forces were operating in conjunction with Wrangel's army in the region to northeast of Crimea. He went over to the Reds and took command of a section of the front against the volunteer army.

The Daily Chronicle's military correspondent, discussing the collapse of Wrangel's army, says:

"Wrangel's idea was that the volunteer army should as far as possible seek to fight on a narrow front, utilizing large rivers and other natural obstacles to protect its flanks against the numerically superior Bolsheviki.

"When he succeeded Denikin in command of his army, or rather of such relics as survived Denikin's collapse, he set to work upon these theories, always handicapped, however, by very inadequate numbers and resources. He planned to use the Crimea as a base, as a sort of Torres Vedras with sea communications open behind him to the French and the narrow isthmuses of the peninsula heavily fortified against attack.

"During the Summer, while the Bolshevist armies were busy with the Poles, he sallied forth on to the mainland and gained considerable successes, which, however, he was careful to exploit with great prudence, always bearing in mind the probability of another retreat to the Crimea.

"After the Bolsheviki signed peace with Poland this need soon arose. Very large Bolshevist forces were concentrated against him, but he seemed without any crushing loss to have made good his retreat and to stand firm on the isthmuses. By an unexpected ruse the Bolshevist cavalry succeeded in outflanking him. Favored by hard frost, they crossed the shallows of the so-called Putrid Sea and took the isthmus defenses in the rear. The result seems to have been rapid and irremediable collapse.

"It should be added that Wrangel differed from his predecessor not only on strategy but on politics. Denikin's political administration during his advance last year developed on frankly reactionary lines and hopelessly antagonized the peasants. Wrangel, on the other hand, enlisting the services of such men as Krivochin, the famous ex-Minister of Agriculture, and Struve, the Constitutional Democrat leader worked out a land program which was genuinely popular with the peasants. This, however, was much disliked by many of the reactionary officers in his force and their discontent may have contributed to the final breakdown."

The Chronicle in an editorial says that if three years of government by Lenin and his associates prove anything it is that they are not to be ousted by arms—neither by foreigners, nor by White Russians.

"Fighting has only strengthened them," it says, "and peace may have the opposite effect. Whether or not that be so, peace ought to come. We hope that French statesmen may now be led around to what has throughout the present year been the conviction of British statesmenship on this subject. If so, we may see not only considerable simplification and strengthening of relations between the two allied pillars of Western Europe, but a vital advance toward an economic resettlement of the continent as a whole.

"Nor is the true interest of Russia different. If Bolshevism is a disease, as we suppose, it is by nursing and tonics, not by fresh surgical operations, that the Russian body politic is likeliest to be enabled to shake it off."

AMERICANS AID EVACUATION.

Wild Panic in Crimea Where Looting Has Already Started.

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 14.—Admiral Bristol today dispatched the United States cruiser St. Louis and the destroyers Overton, Humphreys, Fox, Whipple, Long and John D. Edwards to Sebastopol to assist in the evacuation of the Crimea, Gen. Wrangel's last defense, which is overrun by Reds. The allied missions with Gen. Wrangel's staff officially have been notified to be aboard the vessels tonight.

Crimea is in wild panic. Looting already has started and the people are expecting a great Red muthny or descent upon one city of 10 000 anti-Wrangle troops from the Crimean mountains, where they have been hiding.

American merchants have lost thousands of dollars in goods stolen from warehouses and loading is being carried on under cover of armed men to prevent further theft.

Rumors say that the French intend to take the remnants of the Wrangel army to Morocco, but it is also reported that they will join General Balakovitch on the Ukrainian front.

Several Russian warships and merchant ships, as well as twenty allied merchant vessels, are loading refugees at the points of evacuation.

Despite immigration restrictions at Constantinople, some refugees already are arriving here. Constantinople already is overpopulated with thousands of Russian, Greek and Armenian refugees.

Details of the fighting during Wrangel's last stand show that Crimea's history of the gallant British Light Brigade has repeated itself in Wrangel's movement.

In the defense of Perekop the Koutepof Division, which had suffered heavily while retreating from Taurida, was totally wiped out before the Reds smashed their way through. During the fighting the brave defenders repulsed twenty-two separate attacks, and even counterattacked frequently, recovering lost positions, until they were overcome by sheer numbers.

M. Krivochin, the South Russian Premier, in an appeal to the American press today, stated that unless the Americans would assist the thousands of Russian refugees aboard twenty Russian, allied and American merchant and war vessels, they were bound to perish.

More than 80,000 refugees, including many women, children and wounded soldiers, are trying desperately to leave Crimea, but less than half that number probably will escape, and even those placed on vessels may perish if not helped.

M. Krivochin said: "We have no way to assist them and can only appeal to the Americans, whose Red Cross has done untold good among the Crimean sick, wounded and poor. Help is a matter of life or death. America will never regret whatever help she gives us, as we could never forget."

rose and sang the Hungarian national anthem as a last shout of defiance before ratification.

BUDAPEST, Nov. 13.—When the Peace Treaty between Hungary and the Entente Allies came up in the National Assembly today the Deputies rose and sang the national anthem, and then voted for ratification amid absolute silence. The Christian Nationalists, Slovaks, Croats, Germans, Western Hungarians and members of the Extreme Left departed from the Chamber. It was ordered that the black flag of mourning should fly over public buildings during the application of the treaty.

In an address lamenting the crushing weight of the terms imposed, Karl Hussar, former Premier, brought tears to the eyes of many of his hearers. Count Paul Teleky, the Premier, proposed that he be tried for his part in negotiating and ratifying the treaty, but the Deputies voted unanimously their refusal to such a step.

D'ANNUNZIO STARTS SEIZING SLAV LANDS

Also Announces That His Troops Will March on Spalato —His Fleet Sets Sail.

GIOLITTI RELIES ON MILLO

All Italian Parties Except Extreme Nationalists Express Great Satisfaction with Treaty.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Nov. 14.—The historic peace treaty between Italy and Jugoslavia, which was signed by candlelight toward Friday midnight at the Villa Spinola in Rapallo, evokes almost unanimous expression of intensive satisfaction among all classes of people. Almost unanimous, I say, for a small but noisy group of nationalists and imperialists remain unappeased. Their organs, the Idea Nazionale of Rome and the Milan Popolo d'Italia, utter sinister warnings that the last word has not yet been spoken, and as I write serious news is beginning to pour in in reply to the universal query: "What will d'Annunzio and his confederates do now?"

The Italian special correspondents wire from Fiume that at the very hour when Premiers Giolitti and Vesnitch were signing the solemn treaty, the dictator of Fiume summoned the population to the square fronting the commander's palace and announced that the next dawn his legionaries would seize the Islands of Arbe and Vegalia in the Quarnero Gulf, while by Sunday his volunteers would have disembarked for the march on Spalato and beyond.

Not only were these islands seized but while a battalion of bersaglieri under d'Annunzio's orders captured Mount Luban, east of Fiume, his legionaries advanced toward Castua and occupied all the villages in the crescent assigned to Jugoslavia with the sole exception of Podagrec, where a patrol was forced to retire in the face of heavy resistance. The Jugoslav suburb of Sussak, across the river from Fiume, also is under occupation, and an invading column has wrenched down the Croat ensigns.

At d'Annunzio's behest a powerful fleet of war vessels, headed by the battleship Dante Alighieri, weighed anchor yesterday and steamed from the Gulf of Quarnero for an unknown destination.

Signor Sechi, Italian Minister of Marine, reassured the Rome Chamber last night that Admiral Millo's loyalty to the crown might be relied upon and indeed it would seem incredible that Giolitti, who lately called him for an urgent conference in Rome, would have consented to his return to the provisional governorship in Dalmatia had not explicit pledges been forthcoming in that sense. The Fiume correspondents nevertheless cable that d'Annunzio and Millo are about to meet to renew the pact they sealed last year, while a leading article in the usually well informed Corriere della Sera betrays considerable anxiety on the subject.

The provisional government at Fiume has published a proclamation declaring the Rapallo treaty is absolutely unacceptable. It states the regency of the Quarnero was established simply as a preliminary step toward annexation by Italy, that the eastern frontier line must extend to Bitoral, thence right down to the shoal of St. Mark, that the lower course of the River Regina cannot form the Fiume boundary because in that case the sources of the city light and water power would remain in Jugoslav territory, and that since it refuses any neighbourliness with the Jugoslavs it will not tolerate their hold upon Tersatan and Sussak.

This morning's press manifests sharp irritation at Dictator d'Annunzio's fantastic recklessness. The only two points in the pact of London which Italy has ceded, it is pointed out, are in regard to Castua and Sebenico, the former district being yielded because, as things are, Italy is already incorporating nearly half a million Slavs, whereas Sebanico is the price of Fiume's salvation from Croatia, whose natural right Baron Sonnino had recognized in the original London treaty. But d'Annunzio wants the whole of Dalmatia and much more that saner Italians ever dreamed of claiming.

Even Baron Sonnino's partisans have applauded the Rapallo settlement and the Socialist Parliamentary members plainly intimated in the Chamber today that no disastrous military adventure or dictatorship would be tolerated by the Italian proletariat.

GIOLITTI WELCOMES PEACE.

Italy and Jugoslavia Have Need of Each Other, He Says.

RAPALLO, Italy, Nov. 12.—Belief that the settlement of the Adriatic issue reached by Italy and Jugoslavia would be received with satisfaction abroad was expressed by Premier Giolitti to The Associated Press today.

"The understanding eliminates one of the most acute causes of friction and consolidates European peace, which is so deeply needed and desired by all countries," said the Premier.

"Italo-Jugoslav antagonism is folly, as the two countries need each other and have the greatest interest to live, trade and work in peace.

"Serbia, Croatia and Jugoslavia find in Italy the best and most profitable market for their agricultural products and timber, while Italy can export to those countries all of her industrial goods, also using Serbia as a bridge for her commerce throughout the Balkan states."

Count Sforza, Minister of Foreign Affairs, said:

"At last we can say that the keys to our house are in our pocket, as the Alps are now entirely in our possession."

D'ANNUNZIO TO BE A MONK?

Friend Believes Fiume Dictator Will Retire to a Monastery.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The Excelsior today publishes a photograph of San Eufemia monastery, to which d'Annunzio's friend, Achille Richard, who arrived in Paris recently, says he believes d'Annunzio will retire.

D'Annunzio once offered the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Fiume to M. Richard.

$8,500,000 FOOD SALE.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILAPELHIA, Nov. 14.—The American Stores Company, which operates 1,400 retail grocery and meat stores in Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, will begin tomorrow morning, according to an announcement given out today, selling at cost its entire stock of foodstuffs, inventoried at $8,500,000.

The move, according to the company's President, Thomas P. Hunter, is to get down to bed rock on food prices and enable the company to buy huge quantities of new canned goods, groceries, bottled pickles and other lines of merchandise at a figure which will put the stores on a permanent price basis, so far as is possible.

One feature of the reduction is that bread will be sold at eight cents for a sixteen-ounce loaf, approximately what bread was selling for before the war. This will be a large cut under the retail prices of the big bakeries operating in this territory. The American Stores Company operates its own bakeries.

$93,000 PAYROLL GONE.

Stolen from Registered Mail Bag on Way to Weirton.

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, Nov. 14.—The payroll of the Weirton Steel Company at Weirton, W. Va., amounting to $93,000, was stolen from a registered mail bag some time yesterday, it became known here tonight.

The currency was taken from a Pittsburgh bank to the Post Office there, placed in a registered mail bag, and shipped to Weirton from the Pennsylvania Railroad station, according to officers. When the bag arrived at Weirton it was found to contain bundles of paper instead of the money.

40TH WALL STREET DEATH.

Bergenfields, N. J., Man, Hurt in Explosion, Dies.

With the death of Francis B. Stoba, 34 years old, of Bergenfields, N. J., at the Broad Street Hospital, yesterday, the toll of death in the Wall Street explosion was increased to forty.

Stoba was passing the Assay Office when the explosion occurred, and suffered severe injuries. He had been employed by the Corporation Trust Company, 37-39 Wall Street. He made his home in Bergenfields, N. J., with his wife and two young children.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS MEETS TEST TODAY

sion and by so doing accept the obligations that would imply, notably the promise to keep the obligations of the Treaty of Versailles.

Another question is: Will the strong Japanese delegation demand racial equality? They have not filed notice of such a demand, and without this notice a majority vote is required to insure its consideration. This would be difficult to attain, for no one here wants to antagonize the United States. Many believe that if later the United States proposes changes or reservations the Japanese will be heard from then.

League Councils Named.

The League Council held a long meeting this morning. They appointed a permanent financial Council of France, Great Britain, Spain, Holland, Japan, Czechoslovakia, South Africa, Argentina, Italy, Sweden, Belgium and the United States if the last wants to be represented. They appointed an economic council of Brazil, Switzerland, Italy, Japan, France and Great Britain and a permanent mandate commission chosen from seven Powers with mandates and eight without mandates.

There was a stormy scene at the Danzig discussion today. Paderewski, representing Poland, demanded that Poland be given a military hold over Danzig, as the port had been assigned to Poland by the Peace Treaty, and yet when the Poles were at war with Russia the local council at Danzig stopped much needed munitions. Without military control, he contended, Poland could never have full use of the port as authorized by the treaty.

He was opposed by Oberburgomeister Sahms of Danzig. Sahms was Military Governor of Warsaw during the German occupation and his name figures at the head of the Polish list of war criminals for extortions and outrages. He spoke in German, the first time that language has been heard at a League meeting. The Poles protested against its use but were overruled. Sahms made a long argument based on Danzig's right to autonomy. The council decided that both parties should present their cases in writing.

Prayers for the League.

GENEVA, Nov. 14 (Associated Press).—The League of Nations Assembly will begin work here, supported by the prayers of all Geneva. Special services were held in all the churches today and were largely attended by the delegations.

The representatives of Great Britain and her dominions went to Holy Trinity Church, where George Nicoll Barnes read the first part of the service, and Lord Robert Cecil the second part. The Bishop of Worcester, who came to Geneva expressly for the purpose, delivered a sermon on Christ as the originator of the idea of international good fellowship.

The principal delegations held conferences during the day. The British, with the dominion representatives, continued talks begun in London on the policy to be followed on the floor of the Assembly, and it is hoped in League circles that these preliminary conferences will diminish the chances of friction, which it is desired to avoid, in this first meeting.

The leading delegations will go into the sessions with a well-defined policy and surprises can come only from the smaller States, whose delegations are expected to exercise care not to assume the responsibility of provoking a conflict.

Japan Won't Raise Race Issue.

Baron Gonsuke Hayashi, head of the Japanese delegation, told the Associated Press this morning there was no chance of any dangerous question being raised by Japan. He declared unfounded a report from Tokio that the delegates had prepared propositions on racial equality. "It is useless," he said, "to introduce such a sensational matter to the Assembly. There is nothing to it."

The Council of the League decided this afternoon to leave a place open on the Financial Commission for a representative of the United States in case it is decided later by Washington to accept a place on it. The remainder of the commission will be composed of M. Avenal of France, Basil B. Blackett of Great Britain, Manuel Figueras of Spain, Dr. Ter-Meulen of Holland, Kogo Mori of Japan, M. Pospisil of Czechoslovakia, Colonel Theunis of Belgium, Senor Torquist of Argentina, Signor Bulzarotti of Italy and Marcus Wallenberg of Sweden.

The commission was named chiefly to carry out the recommendations of the financial conference at Brussels. It is not yet determined whether it will proceed to the organization of an international credits institution or whether it will continue to study the question, leaving the actual organization to be new international conference to be held next year. Most of the members of the commission were delegates at the Brussels conference.

Six members of the Economic Commission were named—Carreiro, Brazil; Herr, Switzerland; Della Torre, Italy; Sekiba, Japan; Servys, France, and Llewellyn Smith, Great Britain. Six places were left open, one of which may eventually be filled by an American.

The guarantee of the rights of minorities in the Balkans also came up for discussion by the council. Arthur J. Balfour, who is not expected to join the British delegation until next week, was replaced on the council by H. A. L. Fisher.

The latest arrivals today complete nearly all the other delegations and swell the foreign press representatives to over 200, of which a score are Germans and several are Japanese and Chinese.

The delegates are very modest in their forecasts of the work of the assembly generally, saying it cannot be expected that anything will be accomplished that will make a brilliant showing to the general public, as only after the lapse of considerable time can the effects of the deliberations be felt. They hope, however, to fix definitely a system of disarmament and decide upon the organization of an economic blockade so as to make it an effective arm against aggressive nations.

The attitude toward the United States is that the League of Nations must go on whether the United States comes in or not, but that it must be developed in a way that will not close the door for entry when means are found to make that possible.

FIND LEAGUE'S PERIL IN AMERICA'S STAND

Delegates Arriving Feel That a Heavy Burden Is Imposed on a Weakened Structure.

A RESTRAINED GATHERING

Lack of Full Agreement Between Britain and France Robs the League of Strong Leadership.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Nov. 14.—It is in remarkable quietude that the clans are gathering for the opening of the great World Parliament here tomorrow. More than a thousand individuals, if we include the Headquarters Staff of the League, have come from the ends of the earth, including many leading statesmen. Yet there are no demonstrations, no outward stir. Geneva, of course, is not a Winter holiday centre and a part of the city is asleep until next Summer. Doubtless also Geneva is anxious on behalf of France.

But there is a deeper reason than this for restraint both in the public mind and in the conscience of the delegations. The League of Nations is passing through an acute crisis and some of its stoutest friends ask if it can emerge alive. The covenant makes for it enormous pretensions and pins it to a program which could only fully be realized if the League could claim the loyalty at least of practically all the white nations of the globe. In fact, however, a great majority of the white peoples, 400,000,000 of them, stand outside the League and therefore give it no loyalty.

This is the grave peril which results from the defection of the United States and it is impossible any longer to camouflage it. It is not only that the forty-one countries here represented include only a minority of the white population of the world. The British Dominions, a dozen States of South America and, for instance, the Scandinavian States are only interested or can only be counted upon for certain purposes. The lesser European members are too badly crippled to be regarded as sources of strength for the present.

If France and Great Britain were in full and resolute agreement, the League as it stands would at least have definite and worthy leadership. All we can say is that they have patched up a compromise on the indemnity question.

Viewed from this point, the prospect is indeed alarming. Those who seem to know best say that so far as any serious political responsibility in Europe is concerned there is no likelihood of the American people soon changing their mind, and while it is unnecessary today to imagine a Russo-German combination, the only combination that could successfully defy an allied blockade, who knows what may happen within the next year or two? A relatively small combination of Bolsheviki and Nationalist Turks is now wiping out the independent State of Armenia and the League stands by helpless. What can be expected in a sterner test?

Thoughts like these are in the minds and the private talk of the most far-sighted delegates to this first meeting of League Assembly.

The sober letter in which Austria asks for admission is generally welcomed, and I think it certain a favorable response will be made both to her and to Bulgaria. Inevitably the case of Germany is more difficult. The general opinion of the British and others is undoubtedly expressed by the manifesto of Lord Selborne, Viscount Grey and Mr. Barnes, and by the bold phrase in the admirable sermon preached at Holy Trinity Church here this morning by the Bishop of Worcester:

"I do not know whose future is darker, the country which would come in and cannot or the country which can come in and won't."

If it were as simple a matter for the nations to vote each other down as for parties in a national parliament, the affair would therefore speedily be settled, but the German Government has been first and wisely to recognize that that is not the case.

"Undoubtedly there is the the requisite two-thirds majority in favor of Germany's admission. France is the only great power resolutely opposed, but Leygues apparently goes so far as to threaten that if she is voted down at Geneva on this matter France will withdraw from the Assembly altogether. There is one, and so far as I can find only one, plausible ground for this extreme decision—the indemnity is not yet fixed. It should be fixed and the peace settlement completed in the next few months so that next year the Assembly will have a clear test of whether Germany gives the 'effective guarantees of its sincere intention to observe its international obligations' required by the covenant.

"That this exacting attitude constitutes a grave embarrassment to France's chief partner is evident, and it gives Berlin an air of superior dignity and sobriety. Expanding the recent statement of Dr. von Simons in the Reichstag, Dr. Muller says that while his country would accept an invitation from the Assembly it will not now formally ask for admission.

"Such a demand would provoke a discussion that would not be without danger to the League itself. It would risk a conflict that might be prejudicial to its development. The German Government does not regard the League as perfect in its present form. How could it be when universality is a condition of its existence? But it is a beginning and Germany will be happy to work to perfect it. For reasons I have indicated we shall not take any step to secure immediate admission."

The first sitting of the Assembly will take place tomorrow. It is expected that for about ten days there will be a discussion of the twenty-nine points on the agenda at the open sittings each afternoon, that another ten days will be occupied with the working out of reports and proposals in six large commissions, and that these will be voted upon in the final series of open sessions.

them in a twenty-foot circle were pools of blood. One, the Ramey girl, was lying face downward, one hand stretched ahead, one hand, covered with blood, trailing behind. Examination showed that her hand had been deeply cut between the fourth and fifth fingers.

The Thompson girl lay face up, a heavy fur-trimmed cape thrown over her head. She was unmarked.

The bodies were still warm, but life had gone. It was found that the Ramey girl had dragged herself ten feet northward before she died. Her face was cut and scratched from the cinders in the road and her nose had bled profusely.

There were few clues for identification. There were no pocketbooks, no money, no papers. A black velvet hat, with a bedraggled imitation of a Bird of Paradise feather and trimmed with silver, had been purchased from the millinery shop of Gaby Gay, 361 Grand Street, New York City.

The shoes of the Thompson girl were purchased from the Packard shoe store, 835 Eighth Avenue, New York. They carried the Nos. "450-1087." Her wedding ring, a 22-karat circlet, made by Lukens of New York, bore the wording, "From B. M. H. to L. T., 9-19-19."

The Ramey girl had a wrist watch and also wore an old-fashioned brooch, with two tiny gold tassels and another brooch, a cameo of the Goddess of Liberty.

The police learned that about 11 o'clock last night McCarthy and Meeks arrived home from work at the Cort Theatre. They found their companions gone. They made inquiries and learned that the girls had been seen going toward the delicatessen of Sylvia and Pietro Citti, at 309 West Illinois Street.

Sylvia Citti said that the women came into his place about 9 o'clock, made some purchases of olive oil and chestnuts, and that he gave them a couple of drinks of wine. When they left they were sober.

Police officials evolved the theory that the two women had accepted an invitation for an automobile ride with a party of men, and that, intoxicated, perhaps drugged, they were thrown out of the car on the lake front and died of exposure. Both had considerable money when they left their rooms. They had none when found.

Another theory advanced is that they had met a gang of crooks, who drugged them, robbed them, and left them to die. The missing money would indicate this. Both McCarthy and Meeks declared they knew of no one who might have committed the crime.

"I met Miss Thompson last April in a hotel in New York," Meeks said. "We became friends. Then I went out on the road for a month or so and came back and met her again.

"Just four weeks ago I came to town to be with the Jane Cowl show. I got a wire saying she was coming. Mac (referring to McCarthy) met Lil and Maree at the station.

"The following Wednesday we moved up to the Geneva.

"We were pretty happy until last week. Then I was prowling over Lil's stuff and found her album. In it was the notice of her marriage. We had a battle then and there. I told her I would not have had anything to do with her if I'd known about her being married. But I made up my mind we'd have to make the best of it.

"Saturday I gave her $11 the money I had and told her to go away somewhere and get a divorce. I told her I'd put up the money. She and Maree started out to get the groceries, and that was the last we saw of them. Each of them had a purse. They must have had $40 or $50 apiece. We did not see them again until we identified them."

Meek's home is in Salt Lake City. He has been cowpuncher, sheep herder, deckhand and electrician.

Both Girls Have Friends Here.

Maree Ramey and Lillian Thompson, found dead in Chicago, left this city on Oct. 21, expecting to reach Chicago in time for the arrival of Jane Cowl's "Smiling Through" Company. Miss Ramey, according to friends in this city, planned to marry Robert McCarthy, an electrician with the "Smiling Through" company, whom she had met through Miss Thompson.

Miss Thompson, whose father owns a hardware store in a small town near Boston, came to New York about a year ago. She planned to go on the stage, but had been unable to get an engagement. While touring the agencies she met McCarthy, whom she had known in Boston. Beyond these facts, persons mentioned as knowing the two girls could give no further information.

Concerning Miss Ramey, however, more was obtainable. Miss May Williams, an actress in burlesque and vaudeville, living at 152 West Forty-fifth Street, declared last night that she had received a letter a week ago from Miss Ramey. This letter, according to Miss Williams, was written from 101 North Pine Street, Altoona, Pa.

Miss Williams said that she had met the girl about eleven years ago while appearing in an act billed over the Orpheum circuit as Knapp, Ramey and Knapp. Miss Ramey was appearing in a song act with a man, and had a pet bulldog called "Clown," which had been tained to join in and "sing."

Inquiry at the New York Hippodrome, where, it was said, Miss Thompson's father was employed as chief hydraulic engineer, indicated that the John Thompson mentioned was another man. The Hippodrome reported that a John Thompson had been employed there in a minor capacity about three years ago, but that he had no daughter. Other friends of the dead girl also contradicted the statement that the Hippodrome engineer was the father of the dead girl.

Surprised at Hearing of Marriage.

Gus Ihrig, proprietor of a café at 772 Eighth Avenue, said that he remembered that both girls had visited his place a day or two before they left for Chicago. He said Miss Ramey had told him of her approaching marriage, and he had been surprised because he had understood she had been married to James McCauley, a burlesque actor. At 780 Eighth Avenue, the address at which Ihrig said McCauley had lived for eight years, no one remembered him.

Another theatrical associate who remembered the girls, especially Miss Ramey, was Frank Kamplain of the vaudeville team of Kamplain, Bell and Kamplain. He lives at 234 West Fifty-second Street.

"I've known Maree Ramey," he said, "for about five years. Her home is in Altoona, Pa., where she lived with her mother. Her father, I understood, died about two years ago. He was employed in some mill out there. I met the girl while we were playing an engagement in a theatre in West 181st Street, near Broadway. Maree was married to 'Jim' McCauley and they were on the same bill with us. They were living in the Edmonds, an apartment house at 780 Eighth Avenue at the time."

A Subject for the Consideration of Bankers

ANOTHER daylight hold-up is added to the daily list of "Surprises." Your Bank may be next!

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Four men in an automobile attacked Thomas Grace, former policeman and now messenger for the Hyde Park State Bank, in the Illinois Central Station in Hyde Park, shot him in the hand, knocked him into the street and escaped with a bag containing $40,000 in checks, $10,000 in currency and $6,000 in Liberty Bonds.

M. B. Cottrill, who went to the assistance of Grace, was shot in the leg. The robbery was enacted in the presence of more than fifty persons who were awaiting a suburban train. Grace was on his way to a downtown bank. Three months ago bandits obtained a sack containing $100,000 in currency in the same spot when it was shunted from a train.

COMMUNISTS ORDER DRASTIC PARTY TEST

Third Internationale Announces Bar on All but Extreme Elements.

HILLQUIT AS 'OPPORTUNIST'

National Laws to Be Defied, Armies Undermined and Press Rigidly Controlled.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—A statement of the official conditions for entrance into the Third or Communist Internationale has been received in Washington from Europe. "Compromise" or "opportunist" groups of the Communist organization will not be permitted to participate in the Third Internationale. Propaganda among troops, "legally or illegally," must be carried on. "National laws must be set at defiance in the accomplishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat." There must be a "complete breach" with reformism.

The Communist press "must be completely under the control of the Executive Committee of the party." The reformist and "centre" elements must be dismissed from every organization before it will be admitted to the Third Internationale. All parties which wish to belong to the Internationale must change their names; each will be known hereafter as "Communist Party of America" or whatever the country may be.

These are the conditions for entrance to the Third Internationale, as set forth in the official communication of the Communist Party:

"3. All propaganda and agitation must bear a really Communist character and correspond to the program and the decision of the Third Internationale. All press organs of the party must be directed by reliable Communists who have proved their devotion to the cause of the proletariat. The dictatorship of the proletariat must not be simply spoken of in a conventional prepared formula, but it must be so propagated that its necessity becomes intelligible to every simple workman, working woman, soldier and peasant from the facts of daily life, which must be systematically observed and exploited day by day by our press.

Demands Complete Press Control.

"The periodical and non-periodical press, as well as all party publications, must be completely under the control of the Executive Committee of the party, without reference to the question whether the whole party is legal or illegal at the moment concerned. It is inadmissible that the publishing offices of the party should misuse their autonomy and carry on a policy which does not entirely correspond to the policy of the party.

"In the columns of the press, in popular assemblies, in the trades unions, in consumers' associations — everywhere where the supporters of the Third Internationale can gain admission it is necessary systematically and unmercifully to brand not only the bourgeoisie, but also their accomplices, the reformists of all shades.

"2. Every organization which desires to join the Communist Internationale must consistently and systematically dismiss the reformist and centre elements from all more or less responsible posts of the labor movement (party organizations, editorial staffs, trade unions, parliamentary fractions, co-operative societies, community administrations) and suppiant them by tried Communists, without taking offense if, especially at the beginning, simple workers from the masses gain the places of the 'experienced' opportunists.

"3. In almost all countries of Europe and America the class struggle is entering the phase of civil war. Under such conditions the Communists can have no confidence in bourgeois laws. It is their duty to create everywhere a parallel legal apparatus of organization which will be of aid to the party in the decisive moment to fulfill its duty toward the revolution. In all the countries where the Communists, as a result of the state of siege and of exceptional laws, have no possibility of carrying on their work legally, the combination of the legal with the illegal activity is unconditionally necessary.

Illegal Agitation in Armies.

"4. The duty of spreading Communist ideas includes the special obligation of an emphasized, systematic propaganda in the army. Where this agitation is impeded by exceptional laws, it must be carried out illegally. The giving up of such work would signify treason to the revolutionary duty and be incompatible with membership in the Third Internationale.

"5. A systematic agitation according to a definite plan is necessary in the rural districts. The working classes will not be able to win if they have not behind them the country proletariat and at least part of the poorest peasants, and if they have not secured by their policy the neutrality of a part of the remaining village population. The Communist work is now gaining prominent significance in the rural districts. It must be carried forward especially with the help of the revolutionary Communist workmen of town and country who have connections with the rural districts. The renunciation of this work or its transfer into undependable, semi-reformist hands is equivalent to a renunciation of the proletarian revolution.

"6. It is the duty of every party which wishes to belong to the Third Internationale to expose not only open social patriotism, but also the insincerity and hypocrisy of social pacifism; to keep systematically before the eyes of workmen the fact that without a revolutionary overthrow of capitalism no international courts of arbitration, no agreements regarding limitation of armaments, no 'democratic' renovation of the League of Nations, will be able to avert new imperialist wars.

Hillquit Barred as Opportunist.

"7. It is the duty of parties which wish to belong to the Communist Internationale to acknowledge the complete break with reformism and with the policy of the 'Centre,' and to propagate this breach in the widest circles of the party membership. Without this a consequent Communist policy is impossible.

"The Communist Internationale demands unconditionally and peremptorily the accomplishment of this breach within the shortest possible time. The Communist Internationale cannot allow that notorious opportunists, such as Turati, Kautsky, Hilferding, Hilliquit, Longuet, MacDonald, Modigliani, &c., should have the right to become members of the Third Internationale. That could only lead to a situation in which the Third International would in a great degree become similar to the broken-up Second Internationale.

"8. In the question of colonies and of oppressed nations a specially prominent and clear position is necessary on the part of the parties of those countries whose bourgeoisie are in possession of colonies and oppress other nations. Every party which wishes to belong to the Third Internationale is obliged to unmask the tricks of 'its' imperialists in the colonies, to support every movement for freedom in the colonies, not only in words, but also in deeds, to demand the expulsion of its native imperialists from these colonies, to create in the hearts of the workmen of their country a really brotherly relation to the working population of the colonies and to the oppressed nations and to carry on among the troops of their country a systematic agitation against any sort of oppression of the Colonial peoples.

"9. Every party which desires to join the Communist Internationale must systematically and constantly develop a communist activity within the trades unions, the workmen's and factory councils, the consumers' societies and other mass organizations of the workmen. Within these organizations it is necessary to organize Communist 'cells,' which by constant, perseverant work shall win the trades unions, &c., over to the cause of Communism. The 'cells' are obliged in their daily work to unmask everywhere the treason of the social-patriots and the fickleness of the 'Centre.' The Communist 'cells' must be completely subordinated to the whole party.

"10. Every party belonging to the Third Internationale is obliged to wage a stubborn war against the Amsterdam 'Internationale' of the yellow trade unions. They must most emphatically propagate among the unions of organized workmen the necessity of a breach with the yellow Amsterdam Internationale. They must support by all means the rising international unification of red trade unions which join the Communist Internationale.

"11. Parties which wish to belong to the Third Internationale are obliged to subject to a revision the personnel of the parliamentary fraction, to eliminate from it all independable elements, to subordinate these fractions not only in words but in fact to the party Executive Committee, by demanding of every single Communist Member of Parliament that he subordinate his whole activity to the interests of a really revolutionary propaganda and agitation.

"12. The parties belonging to the Communist Internationale must be developed on the basis of the principle of democratic decentralism. In the present epoch of intensified civil war the Communist Party will only be in a position to carry out its duty if it is organized in the most centralized manner possible, if iron discipline rules in it, and if its party leaders, supported by the confidence of the party membership, are furnished with the most complete power, authority and competences.

"13. The Communist Parties of all countries in which the Communists carry on their work in a legal manner must from time to time undertake purgings (new registrations) of the personnel of their party organizations, in order systematically to cleanse the party of all small-bourgeois elements which insinuate themselves in the party.

Must Give Help to Soviets.

"14. Every party which wishes to join the Communist Internationale is obliged to give unlimited assistance to any Soviet republic in its fight against the counter-revolutionary forces. The Communist Parties must carry on an unequivocal propaganda for the hindrance of the transport of war munitions to enemies of the Soviet Republic; furthermore, they must by all possible means carry on propaganda, legally or illegally, among the troops sent to strangle the workmen's republics, &c.

"15—Parties which have hitherto still held to their old social democratic program are now obliged within the shortest possible time to change these programs and, corresponding to the special conditions of their country, to work out a new communist program in the spirit of the decisions of the Communist Internationale. As a rule, the program of every party belonging to the Communist Internationale must be approved by the ordinary congress of the Communist Internationale or by the executive committee. In the case of nonapproval of the program of one or another party by the executive committee of the Communist Internationale the party concerned may appeal to the congress of the Communist Internationale.

"16—All decisions of the congress of the Communist Internationale, as well as the decisions of the executive committee, are binding on all parties belonging to the Communist Internationale. The Communist Internationale, active in conditions of intensified civil war, must be far more centrally organized than was the case of the Second Internationale. In this connection the Communist Internationale and its executive committee must naturally take into account in its activities the diversified circumstances under which the various parties must fight and work, and shall take decisions of general application only in such cases as admit of such decisions.

Requires Change of Party Names.

"17—In this connection all parties which wish to belong to the Communist Internationale must change their names. Every party which desires to become a member of the Communist Internationale must bear the name Communist Party of such and such country (Section of the Third Communist Internationale). The question of the name is not only a formal one but in great measure a political question of great importance. The Communist Internationale has declared war on the whole bourgeois world and on all yellow social democratic parties. It is necessary that to every simple operative the differences be clear between the Communist parties and the old official 'Social Democratic' and 'Socialist' parties, which have betrayed the banner of the working classes.

"18. All leading press organs of the parties of all countries are obliged to reprint all important official documents of the Executive Committee of the Communist Internationale.

"19. All parties which belong to the Communist Internationale, or have presented a request for admission, are obliged as soon as possible, but at the latest four months after the second congress of the Communist Internationale, to call an extraordinary congress to decide all these conditions. In this connection, the central committees must take care that the decisions of the second congress of the Communist Internationale are known to all local organizations.

"20. Those parties which now wish to enter the Third Internationale, but have not radically changed their previous tactics, must before their entrance into the Third Internationale take care that not less than two-thirds of the members of their central committees and of all important central institutions consist of comrades who before the second congress of the Communist Internationale publicly express themselves unequivocally in favor of the entrance of the party into the Third Internationale. Exceptions are permissible with the approval of the Executive Committee of the Third Internationale. The Executive Committee of the Communist Internationale has the right also to make exceptions for the representatives of the 'Centre' policy named in Paragraph 7.

"21. Those members of the party who fundamentally reject the conditions and principles laid down by the Communist Internationale are to be expelled from the party. The same holds good especially for delegates to the extraordinary party convention."

automobiles and carried away.

"The plot was well organized and well executed," said Chief Eberstein. "It was the work of professionals, assisted by some one on the inside. The thieves knew just what they were looking for. They knew which of the six cars carried registered mail and lost no time bothering other cars which carried only regular mail."

At midnight the combined officers of Omaha and Council Bluffs had not secured a clue to the robbers. All underworld resorts were either raided or visited without result. Burlington Railroad officials tonight said that $20,000 was near the correct figure of the loss and denied there were any boxes of gold in the treasure car.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Reports that large shipments of money were obtained by robbers who entered a registered mail car in Council Bluffs last night and escaped with several sacks of mail were denied tonight by Charles Woods, chief clerk of Railway Mail District No. 1, and E. P. Bracken, general manager of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.

"There were no treasury shipments in the car and the loss canont exceed $20,000," Mr. Woods said. "Nothing but registered mail was taken, and we won't be able to check on the exact amount stolen for a month."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Assistant Secretary Gilbert of the Treasury was engaged tonight in trying to run down the report that $10,000,000 from the United States mint in San Francisco had been stolen last night from a mail train near Council Bluffs, Ia. Mr. Gilbert said at his office in the Treasury Building just before midnight that he had heard the report unofficially and had been endeavoring to ascertain whether it had any foundation, but without success.

Mr. Gilbert did not believe an amount so large had been shipped from the San Francisco Mint. If gold had been stolen, he said, the loss was covered by insurance.

Theatre Seats All Filled.

The 300 seats were filled at the time of the panic. On the first floor there are twenty rows of five each on each side of the aisle. The high gallery has seats for about eighty in a block of seats just in front of the moving picture projector at the rear of the house. There are also single rows of seats that run along narrow galleries which run along the east and west walls from the back of the house to the wall where the pictures are shown.

At every glance the patron of the place is reminded of the danger of fire, and there was a permanent odor of smoke in the air, which had been noticed by those who had visited it long before the fire. There was every reason for an audience to be predisposed to nervousness over the fire danger before smoke began to curl up from the floor and cast faint, twisting shadows on the illuminated screen.

There are several big red exit lights in the rear of the main floor, one on the side and two in the gallery. The walls look almost like a museum of fire-fighting apparatus with their collection of red buckets, long spears with hooks on the side, metal fire-extinguisher tanks and red-painted axes. There are four or five shelves, each carrying two or three red fire-buckets. Two or three pieces of fire apparatus enter the field of vision at a look in any given direction, so concentrated is the equipment on the walls, intended for protection and reassurance, but probably calculated at the same time to keep the nerves of an audience overtrained on the subject of fire.

Then, on the ceiling in the back of the house, is a great smudge, extending about 30 feet forward from the moving-picture projecting machine, possibly a relic of an explosion or the burning of a film at some time in the past.

Audience Mostly Foreigners.

The audience included Italians, Greeks, Jews, Japanese, Chinese, Poles and others. There were few men among them, and not a great many women. The great majority were children.

Just below the screen there is an open crack between the flooring of wood and a concrete base on which are placed an ordinary piano and an electric piano. The crack is from a quarter of an inch to an inch in width, and five or six feet in length. There are two large holes bored in the wooden flooring in front of the first row of seats and two or three small cracks. The furnace is almost directly underneath these.

About 5 o'clock Joseph Poinal, 31 years old, of 41 First Street, the furnace man, started to shake up the ashes and add coal to the furnace. He made a lot of smoke. It was soon smelt throughout the house. Then faint crooked shadows began to climb upward in front of the moving pictures.

A few women began to move discreetly toward the aisles, in no great alarm at the moment, but suspicious of danger and eager to be on the safe side with their children. Others with the same suspicions instantly imitated them. Then there was a general uprising from the seats, in a second there was a mad rush for the exits and screams of "Fire!" There were shrieks and shouts in many languages and dialects.

There were exits on the front, rear and west side downstairs, and on the front and rear upstairs, besides several other doors which offered a possibility of escape, though not intended to be exits. The currents of the panic set in several directions. Women with flocks of children had them yanked forward from their left hand and backward from their right as they were caught in the vortex of the twisting crowd.

Proprietors Unable to Calm Crowd.

The two proprietors, who bought the place only three days ago, tried to shout that there was no danger, but they could not make themselves heard, and were swirled away in the mob.

Downstairs the rear exits and the exit on the west side easily took care of the crowd. No one was seriously hurt, though a few were knocked down and trampled on.

In the gallery the situation was different. There were two exits, the front and the rear, both on the east side. It would be necessary, however, for nearly every one in the gallery who wished to reach the front exit—that is, the one at the end of the house where the screen is—to run about forty feet along a narrow gallery. Further than that, it would seem that they were running in the direction of the supposed fire, as the smoke was rising just in front of the front seats. At that moment, it looked like a suicidal act of running into the part of the house where the fire was imagined to be raging.

Therefore the whole gallery took the handiest exit, which led down into the vestibule in Catharine Street. From appearance afterward, the children first to reach the stairs and ordinarily having the best chance of escape were those who were killed. Agile and quicker in getting started than the bigger people, their length of leg did not enable them to take more than a step at a time, and in the long and ill-lighted staircase they were overrun, bumped off their balance and sent headlong.

The violence of the panic in the gallery was shown by the fact that seats were found broken from the floor and the backs smashed afterwards. The aisles here are on the east and west sides. The seats are from eight to ten in a row. Apparently the spectators seated here lost their heads and all or most of them forced their way to the east, plunging forward into the jams ahead of them with such force as to break the woodwork. One of the freaks of the panic was that the only seat completely dislodged from its fastenings on the floor was in almost the exact centre of the block of gallery seats.

Increasing in mass and in panic from second to second, the crowd gained in momentum and speed down the stairs. The little ones and the leaders with only air in front of them were sent flying. Those further back, with bodies before and behind them, were in no danger of falling forward themselves and plunged ahead, forgetting that the front ranks had to watch their steps or lose their balance.

Mrs. Josephine De Rosa of 116 Cherry Street, who was on the first floor in one of the front seats with her eight-year-old son, said:

"I was with my boy and another lady and her child. I saw the smoke coming up from the floor a minute before the panic. I went over and spoke to a man connected with the house. He said there was no danger, that it only came from the furnace.

"But it was still coming up, when I got back and I did not like it. I said to the woman who was with me:

"'I think we had better go.'

"We got up and started. Just as we were walking up the aisle, it seemed as if everyone in the place started up. They were quiet for a second, and then began to shout and run for the exits.

"I tried to hold on to the boy, but he broke away from me. I thought he was killed. I got out of the place after most of the other people had and then went back for my boy. I could not find him. I thought for a while he was with the poor children who are dead. Then I found him on the street."

All Terrified at Once.

Camilla Alviso, 14 years old, of 68 Oliver Street, who was on the first floor with his five-year-old brother Salvatore, said that he saw the smoke crawling out of the floor and that he and every one else in the place seemed to become frightened at the same time.

"Somebody yelled 'Fire' and then everybody ran until they got in each other's way," he said. "The place was full of children screaming and crying. When I got into the aisle, I was hit and bumped from every direction. I threw my little brother on the floor, clenched my legs around him and hung on to the side of the seat until everybody was out except a few women who had fainted and one or two children. Then we got out safely."

Within a minute after the panic, news of it had swept the neighborhood and every mother, whose children were not all within the range of her eye, rushed for the place. The narrow street was filled with women shrieking the names of hundreds of children, names from a score of nationalities, and shrieking in every dialect of the quarter for a chance to get into the picture house.

The mothers of the neighborhood, hysterical and weeping, filled the building almost as soon as it was emptied of its audience by the panic. Detectives O'Neill and Josephs, who were among the first to arrive and begin taking apart the corded bodies at the bottom of the staircase exit, found their work impeded by the frantic mothers.

Police reserves from the Oak Street and other stations made a stand against them for a time, but the younger and more vigorous of the desperate women dodged and swarmed past them as fast as they could draw the police lines.

In the meantime thousands and thousands invaded Catharine and Cherry Streets, making, so dense a mob that most of the children who escaped from the moving picture house and most of the others missing from homes nearby were swallowed up in it. Two hours passed before it began to break up, and it was 8 o'clock before the survivors of the panic and mere truants were reunited to their worried mothers.

Crowds also flocked to the Oak Street Station, where the bodies were taken, and identified by their parents and relatives. Great crowds flocked to the hospitals, and were cheered by the news that most of the injured were suffering only from bruises and having the breath knocked out of them.

Many of those in the gallery turned back when they found they could not escape from the exit into Catharine Street, where the deaths occurred, and they finally ran back to the exit at the south end of the gallery near the moving picture screen. This fire escape leads into a courtyard.

Peter Giroffo, who lives in a tenement whose kitchen window is a few feet from the fire escape, climbed into the theatre by the fire escape on hearing the cries inside. Finding that fear of running into the imaginary fire kept the frightened crowd at the head of the stairs from using it, he ran to them and assured them it was safe.

Neighbor Saves Thirty Children.

"After I got them started," he said, "I passed them across the space between the fire escape and my kitchen window into the arms of my wife. We got about thirty children out that way."

Within an hour after the panic a large number of city officials had visited the spot, including Mayor Hylan and Fire Commissioner Drennan. One of the first things brought to their attention was the fact that the spectators were nearly all children, many of them very young, and that there had probably been a wholesale violation of the law which forbids a child from going to a moving picture house without being accompanied by its parents or guardians.

Talk of further moving picture regulations to prevent a recurrence of such a tragedy started as soon as the work of rescue was over. It was admitted that children are admitted daily in nearly every moving picture house in the city in violation of the law that forbids the admission of children unaccompanied by parents or guardians. The practice of children in stopping men and woman to say, "Please take me in with you," makes it difficult to prevent such violation of the law, it was said. Evasion in this way had been so successful for so long a period, it was said, that many proprietors regarded the law as a dead letter and did not even insist on the formality that children be accompanied by an alleged parent.

All Mothers and Babies Escape.

One of the lucky features of the panic was the escape of all mothers and infants in arms. Over the floor were scattered nursing bottles, babies' caps, ribbons and occasional sweaters, but apparently all mothers with babies retained the intelligence to keep out of the crowd and to take their chances with the fire rather than with the panic.

The police removed the padlock from the glass-panelled street door, which had been locked, in apparent violation of the law against closing exits. Not only was it padlocked, but a flat iron coal door, covering a hole in the sidewalk, projected above the level of the pavement just in front of the door, and prevented its being opened, even after the padlock had been removed. The padlock was held as evidence.

A person leaving the picture house by the stairs, where the tragedy occurred, would find this barred door directly in front of him after he reached the landing and crossed the vestibule in a straight line. This fact may have contributed to the panic, as the excited people who reached it may have believed themselves locked in and attempted to make their way back again. On the other hand, there were two glass-paneled swinging doors beside the one that was locked, and these were open. Most of those who escaped did make their way through these. Fire Commissioner Drennan said of this:

"The fastening of any door in such a way as to bar quick exit is a violation of the fire laws."

Bernstein and Schwartz, the present proprietors of the house, admitted last night to Assistant District Attorney Dineen that they had no license to run the place. They said they had purchased it only Friday for $6,000, of which $5,000 was paid down, and did not have time to get new licenses.

"So far as I know," said Mr. Dineen, "these licenses are not transferable, nor can a theatre be operated under a license belonging to any other parties than the owners."

John Lenoie, 8 years old, of 55 Oak Street, said children were permitted to enter the theatre without guardians, and that he and his brother, Louis, 3 years old, went to the theatre on Saturday, and by haggling with the ticket-taker obtained admission for 10 cents, though the rate for children is 7 seven apiece. Tickets for adults are 11 cents.

The padlocked door was alleged by the new owners to have been locked when they took the place. This precaution is supposed to have been taken by the previous owner in order to prevent children from slipping in through this exit, which is too far removed to be covered by the eye of the ticket-taker.

Peter Romano of 24 Madison Street, with five friends, was sitting in his automobile at Catharine and Oak Streets shortly after 5 o'clock when he heard screams from the theatre, fifty yards away.

"We ran down to the theatre," Romano declared, "and pulled a sign away from the door, admitting to the stairs and pulled the door open. The stairs and the passageway was piled up with children. The passageway at the bottom was blocked with children piled 5 feet high, and the stairs were blocked in the same fashion all the way up. The children were wedged in so tightly that when we tried to pull them out of the heap we found we had to start at the top of the pile."

One of the rescuers, Jim Lombardi, discovered the lifeless body of his 2-year-old brother, Joseph, near the bottom of the stairs after the bodies of several other children had been carried away.

NOV. 13 TO 20

Every dealer knows this last—a live Tan Goodyear Welt Shoe—called "Pep". It has sold in $8, $9, $10 and $11 grades—the same grades now priced at $6, $6.50, $7 $7.50 and $8.

WHEREVER you see this sign, you can be sure, that there is a reliable shoe dealer selling reliable shoes, backed by honest and permanent service, at rock-bottom prices. Legitimate dealers in every part of the city are showing it.

DOLLARS LESS THAN YOU PAID FOR SHOES A FEW MONTHS AGO

You will find when you enter these stores that your hopes for lower prices have been realized. Legitimate merchants exhibiting this sign have reduced their price far below normal margins. These dealers are offering shoes at—

Men's . . . $2 to $3 less
Women's . $2 to $3 less
Children's . $1 to $2 less than you paid three months ago.

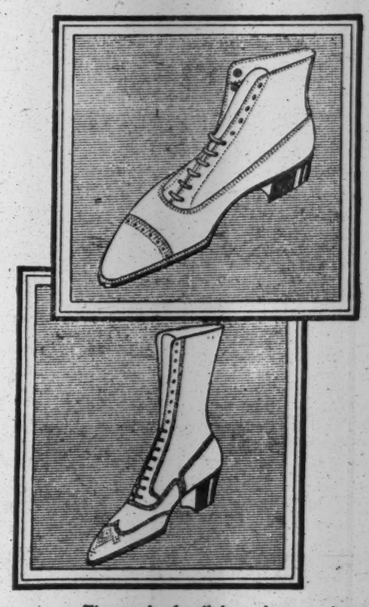
This is their contribution to restoring normal conditions in the present period of deflation.

But low as these prices seem, remember that these are reliable merchants backing their sales with permanent service. Look for the sign. It marks a live, legitimate, reliable store. Buy there—at once.



Thousands of well dressed women have put on this "Mode" model walking boot—they have paid $9 and $10. The same grades today are $7 and $8.

PRICE AND QUALITY

Everybody wants lower prices. Nobody wants them more than CHILDS. But not at the expense of quality.

CHILDS prices are low, considering the quality, and will automatically go lower as costs decrease.

But whatever the price may be, the quality will always justify it.

For the CHILDS policy is to provide the best of food, service and sanitation at a reasonable price.

Fresh country sausage, baked apple and griddle cakes—a quality combination as wholesome as it is delicious.

BELIEVED CASE OF MURDER

Tracks In Sand Indicate Victim Was Dragged From Water's Edge to Place of Concealment.

Concealed under a pile of driftwood and brush on the beach near the southern angle of Fort Wadsworth, on the Staten Island side of the Narrows, the body of a sailor, who the police and medical examiner believe was murdered, was found yesterday. Joseph Gray, a private at the fort, investigating what seemed to him a peculiar looking heap of rubbish, shoved aside some of the top covering and disclosed a human arm and then the body, which had been stripped of clothing.

There was a clearly marked trail in the sand of the beach indicating that the body had been dragged from the water to its place of concealment. The back of the body was plastered with sand, but the skin otherwise was dry and there was no evidence that the body had been in the water. Hidden under a smaller brush heap, 200 feet distant, Gray found a sailor's kit bag, containing clothing that apparently fitted the dead man.

In it was a passport, which read: "Cristosano Balles, Catenica, Italy, sailor, age 19, steamship Amerika."

Dr. George P. Mond, Deputy Medical Examiner, could not determine the cause of death from a superficial examination. He sent the body to the County Morgue for an autopsy today. There were no visible wounds that would have caused death. The trail over which the body was dragged, marked with blood spots and showing the footprints of at least one person, extended from a cluster of rocks at the water to a point 150 feet upward on the beach, and was made at low tide.

Dr. Mond said the body had been brought ashore about the time the man died, which he estimated to be two hours before it was found at 11:45 o'clock. Those who disposed of the body worked in full sight of the fort and also in view of any one who happened to be looking from among the 3,000 passengers on the steamship Imperator, which was anchored at Quarantine, a half mile distant.

Police Captain Wagner of the Staten Island Detective Bureau asked the Police Harbor Patrol to examine every foreign vessel in port for a clue to the missing man's assailants, as it was concluded he was the victim of some sort of an attack. A search was made at Hoboken, where the Amerika was reported to have docked, but this report was found untrue. It is believed he had formerly been a member of the crew of this ship, but recently had been on another steamer.

Held Up in a Poolroom.

Frank Leese, 33, of 266 Nassau Street, Brooklyn, employed in a poolroom at 2,115 Church Avenue, was held up by two men early yesterday while working in the place. They knocked him unconscious by hitting him on the head with a bowling ball, and stole his overcoat, gold watch and chain and $21. The hold-up occurred a block and a half from the Flatbush Police Station.

car tops were here and there silhouetted against arc lamps in the yards.

Another locomotive was rushed to Jersey City for more police, and when they arrived a thorough search of the yards was made, but the thieves had escaped. They left behind them two five-ton trucks, one partly loaded with whisky, and a beaten road leading from the train showed that they had made several successful trips from the yards with loot. The police also found hammers, chisels and other tools, two overcoats and two caps.

The cars were sealed, padlocked and also nailed tight with about fifty heavy nails in each door so that it was at least an hour's work for two men to open them. It was also necessary to saw out heavy cradling that had been put around the heavy alcohol barrels to hold them tightly in place. Police were not able to understand why the noise had not attracted attention.

Dry Agents Intercept 500 Cases En Route to New York in Trucks.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 14.—Five hundred cases of bonded whisky, valued at $50,000, en route from a distillery in Cheswick, this county, to a concern in New York, were confiscated late yesterday by prohibition agents under direction of Agent Harry J. Labrum of Philadelphia. Seven men in charge of the trucks were arrested and the liquor was placed under Government seal. It will be held pending an investigation into the regularity of the permit through which the whisky was withdrawn from bond.

According to Labrum, the whisky was taken from a bonded warehouse of the Penwick Distilling Company, in Cheswick, under a Government permit purporting to have been issued by the New York State Prohibition Director. It was to have been delivered, Labrum says, to the Standard Drug Company, 48 West Thirty-fourth Street, New York.

There is no Standard Drug Company, nor any other drug company, at 48 West Thirty-fourth Street. That address is part of the Hotel McAlpin property.

A Downward Revision of Clothing Prices

SLACKENED public demand was the prime factor in lowering prices—costs of woolens, trimmings, labor, etc., were ignored—prices tumbled because the public didn't buy.

We are in hearty accord with the drop from a level which was too high for comfort.

And we're showing our agreement by decidedly lowering our prices despite a great shading of profits in the original prices. Revising our prices downward means a great loss.

But woolen dealers, manufacturers and cotton converters have all taken their losses—it is now up to us, as retailers, to do the same.

The result of losses taken at original sources has not reached us—nor will it until Spring. But to get into step with conditions, we're revising our prices.

Our stocks are no larger than we can sell easily without the stimulus of reductions. But as a matter of policy, so that the public may share in a lowered price level which, though it prevails, has not reached us, we shall reduce our prices.

It is now time for the public to consume at liquidating prices. Low prices have gone too far for our national well being. To go on at the present rate will mean demoralization of industry resulting in untold unemployment.

We operate differently than most clothiers—buy our own woolens, style our own models for a distinctly New York clientele, have our clothing made under our own direct supervision according to our own rigid specifications.

We have never gone into the market and bought regular or residue stock for regular or "sale" purposes—we will not now average our losses by buying mongrel stock, as many clothiers do.

We value your confidence and our reputation too highly to ever deviate from our standard.

Lowered prices begin tomorrow morning in all our clothing stores. Tomorrow's papers will carry an announcement of the details.

REVIEW YEAR'S WORK FOR JEWISH RELIEF

IMPROVEMENT IN RUMANIA

President Louis Marshall and Other Officers of American Committee Are Re-elected.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee, organized in 1906 to combat the discrimination against Jews and to oppose the denial to them of rights, was held at the Hotel Astor yesterday. President Louis Marshall presented the annual report of the Executive Committee, which dealt with endeavors to obtain improvement of the condition of the Jews in Poland, the Ukraine, Hungary and Rumania. The committee reiterated its decision adopted in 1918 to aid in the realization of the objects of the Balfour declaration respecting Palestine.

With regard to the Jews of Poland, the report said that their condition was just as pitiable as it was during and following the World War. Representations have been made to Prince Lubomirski that the Jews of the United States are not and have not been hostile to the people of Poland, but, on the contrary, have every desire to see Poland prosperous and happy, but that they have begun to believe the Polish Government is unwilling to carry out the spirit of its treaty obligation to give the Jew the rights to which he is entitled as a citizen and a human being. The Polish Ambassador, the report said, had given assurances that his Government had already taken steps to suppress violence and indignities against Jews and to prevent provocative and inflammatory anti-Jewish articles in Polish newspapers, and that the Government has conducted a series of conferences with Jewish leaders in Poland for the purpose of restoring harmony between the various elements of the Polish population.

Conditions in Lithuania were described as good, and as to greater Rumania, which now has a Jewish population of 1,000,000, the report said that the condition of the Jews there is considerably better than it has been since the Treaty of Berlin, 1878, and that "Rumania is rapidly taking its place beside the great liberal nations of the West."

A report was presented respecting the progress of the work of the Office of Jewish War Records. There are on file in this office the verified records of 180,000 American Jews who served during the World War, and on the basis of reliable data it is estimated that the total number in the forces was from 225,000 to 250,000.

The following officers were re-elected: President, Louis Marshall; Vice Presidents, Dr. Cyrus Adler of Philadelphia and Julius Rosenwald of Chicago; Treasurer, Isaac W. Bernheim of Louisville. Colonel Isaac M. Ullman of New Haven was elected a member of the Executive Committee to succeed the late Colonel Harry Cutler. No successor was chosen to the late Jacob H. Schiff on the committee. Judge Mayer Sulzberger of Philadelphia, the first President of the committee, was elected an honorary member of the committee and Judge Horace Stern of Philadelphia was elected his successor.

The afternoon session was devoted to a conference to which representatives of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, Central Conference of American Rabbis, the United Synagogue of America and the Provisional Committee for an American Jewish Congress had been invited to deal with the question of the spread of anti-Jewish propaganda in the United States through the medium of various publications.

winter apparel in an unsuccesful effort to keep warm.

Less than two miles out on the prairie the driver sighted the delayed second section coming toward him and threw his own motor in reverse to come back into Point Isabel. Then the tragedy of the day occurred. The load was too great for a reversed engine, and the crankshaft and one of the springs under the car gave way simultaneously.

Night came on during the long wait, while the Mexican trainmen worked and swore and the wind whistled through the Presidential car. Newly-made friends in Point Isabel heard of the accident through Mexicans who walked back along the track, and at nightfall a basket of sandwiches and several bottles of coffee were brought out to the marooned passengers. Mrs. Harding served, sitting on a suitcase in the aisle and laughing at her troubles.

Car Was Unlighted.

Presidential dignity and isolation went by the boards. Mr. Harding himself was one of the most active and cheerful members of the group. His car was unlighted and was also overcrowded, as the unguarded presence of celebrity always is, and as the overcoated passengers went up and down the aisle the red-hot stove took its unfailing toll and kept the enclosure pungent with the smell of scorching cloth.

It was more than three hours after the accident and well after dark when the train crew finally pronounced their engine in working order. To combine the forces of the two engines a railway tie had been roped in place between them and it caused another delay because it had to be removed to permit the chauffeur to the Presidential motor to crank up. But after much sputtering and the use of much Spanish profanity the entire caravan rolled slowly away in the direction of Point Isabel.

It was not until after the arrival here of Mr. Harding and his advisers that it was decided to remain over night. There are several long trestles between here and Brownsville and the rains have softened the roadbed so as to inject elements of chance into the carrying heavy loads. There are no intervening stations in the twenty miles, and indeed virtually no house standing in sight of the right of way.

When Mr. Harding reaches Brownsville tomorrow he will probably go to the home of R. B. Creager, a Brownsville attorney, whose Summer cottage he has occupied here. He will remain until Wednesday morning, the time previously set for concluding his vacation and for departing for New Orleans to take ship for Panama.

—pertinent facts about present costs of dependable clothing, which every man can well afford to weigh!

WITH sales of clothing on every hand and as many different reasons given for their existence, the average man is at a loss to tell what is a fair price for a Winter Suit. Saks & Company knew that prices had to recede from war levels, but neither they nor anyone knew when the recession would come. Saks & Company make their clothing, make it in advance, and this year at the highest costs ever known. Anyone who made clothing at a lesser cost made poorer merchandise. But prices have come down and Saks & Company, according to an established policy are giving to their clientele now the benefit of reductions that many houses will not put into effect until later. For instance:

The very Suits we made this season to sell up to $110 are now priced no higher than $78

Right down through our stocks, our prices have been revised regardless of costs to us. Many would have taken advantage of a situation of this kind and announced a sale, but under present conditions we believe the action we have taken in revising prices to be a plain duty to our clientele. 2 KILLED, 9 INJURED, IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Policeman and Harvard Club Porter Lose Lives—Two Believed Fatally Hurt.

ONE DEATH CAR ESCAPES

Touring Machine Containing Women Flees, Eluding Small Motor Which Gives Chase.

Two persons were killed, two critically injured and seven less seriously injured in automobile accidents in New York City yesterday. The most serious accident took place in the evening at Metropolitan and Continental Avenues, Forest Hills, when an automobile containing four men was overturned, causing the death of James J. A. Gannon, 35 years old, of 332 East Seventeenth Street, Manhattan, a policeman attached to the East Fifty-first Street Station. Gannon died immediately after being taken to St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica.

John F. Daly, an undertaker, 50 years old, of 501 East Fourteenth Street, another occupant of the car, was taken to the same hospital, where he was reported to be dying of a fractured skull. Charles Riley, 46 years old, of 14 Hancock Street, Woodside, L. I., also was in a critical condition at the Jamaica Hospital with a fractured skull and concussion of the brain. Police Lieutenant Thomas Kelley, 48 years old, of 608 West 184th Street, who is attached to the Butler Street Station, Brooklyn, was the least seriously injured and escaped with several bruises.

The cause of the accident could not be ascertained. Kelley, the only one who was conscious, said that all he knew was that the automobile, which was owned and driven by Riley, was suddenly overturned and went into the ditch, pinning its occupants beneath it. He said he did not know whether the car skidded or was struck by another automobile. There was a procession of automobiles returning to the city at the time and the motorists lifted the Riley automobile and extricated those beneath it.

Gannon was a veteran of the war and a member of the General Lafayette Police Post of the American Legion, and Lieutenant Kelley said they were returning from Central Islip, L. I., where they had been to attend a dedication of a monument to those of that section who had fallen in the war.

The other fatal accident took place shortly after 6 o'clock in the evening at Eighth Avenue and Forty-second Street, where a large automobile ran down and killed John Novelli, 48 years old, of 341 West Forty-seventh Street, as he was crossing the street. Four persons, two of them women, were in the automobile, which was of the limousine type. The driver fled after the accident and escaped, although he was chased for more than half a mile by the driver of another automobile.

Novelli, who is employed as a porter at the Harvard Club, was on his way home when he was run down. William Kinkelo of 443 West Fifty-second Street, who was driving a smaller automobile, gave chase when he saw that the driver of the larger car did not stop. The latter, followed by Kinkelo, went north in Eighth Avenue to Forty-seventh Street and, turning west, passed the police station. According to Kinkelo, the speed of the larger automobile proved too great, and he abandoned the chase after he saw it turn south in Eleventh Avenue.

Novelli was taken to Roosevelt Hospital in another automobile which stopped at the time of the accident. He died on the operating table of a fracture of the skull and internal injuries.

John Schaub, nine years old, of 152 West Sixty-sixth Street, was run down in front of his home by an automobile owned by William B. Schmidt of 2,869 Grand Concourse, the Bronx, and slightly injured. The driver continued on his way after the accident, and the automobile was later found abandoned at Sixty-first Street and West End Avenue. Mr. Schmidt told the police that he had left the automobile in front of the Hotel Marie Antoinette, Sixty-seventh Street and Broadway, and that it had been stolen.

John Hooey, 36 years old, of 998 Grant Avenue, the Bronx, received injuries to his skull when hit by an automobile at East 161st Street and Morris Avenue. He was taken to Lincoln Hospital.

Joseph Lafunte of 32 Eighth Avenue was run down at Fourteenth Street and Eighth Avenue. His most serious injury was a sprained ankle.

Augustus P. Smith, 58 years old, of 57 West Fifty-eighth Street, had his left leg fractured when a bicycle he was riding was struck by an automobile at Seventh Avenue and West 110th Street.

Vivian Heppia, 5 years old, of 240 Creston Avenue, the Bronx, was hit by an automobile at 184th Street and Creston Avenue, and was taken to Fordham Hospital for treatment for cuts and bruises.

Samuel Parkman, 49 years old of 2,900 Briggs Avenue, the Bronx, was knocked down by an automobile owned and driven by Alfred Fridenberg of Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., at 198th Street and the Grand Concourse. He was taken to Fordham Hospital with injuries of the skull and concussion of the brain.

Anton Vanzo, 30 years old, of 429 East Seventy-second Street, and George Collins, 32 years old, of 227 Hollister Avenue, Bridgeport, Conn., were injured when the motorcycle they were riding collided with an automobile at Avenue D and East Seventy-second Street. Both were cut and bruised, Vanzo the more seriously.

VETERANS PARADE IN MEMORY OF DEAD

Seventeen Hundred National Guardsmen March Up 5th Av. in Honor of 27th Division.

MANY WOUNDED IN THE LINE

Father Duffy Delivers Eulogy on Fallen Heroes—Services in Central Park.

As church bells tolled the summons for Armistice Sunday services, 1,700 soldiers of the New York National Guard, many of them wounded war veterans, marched up Fifth Avenue yesterday morning in solemn tribute to their 2,000 comrades of the Twenty-seventh Division who perished in the service. Afterward, amid closely packed military squares that were pressed by more than 7,000 civilians, Father Duffy, war chaplain of the 165th Infantry, conducted memorial services in Central Park.

In a short eulogy of the dead that brought tears to the eyes of his audience, Father Duffy declared that those who made sacrifices short of death might find satisfaction through the remainder of life in telling of the pleasure of making those sacrifices for the country.

"But for those who are dead, who fell in battle, all is ended," he added. "Theirs was the supreme sacrifice. The glory of their lives was death, but they shall remain forever living in the memories of a grateful people and a grateful nation, with signs of gratitude that shall increase with the passing years."

Thousands who thronged Fifth Avenue in the expectation of seeing these picked men of the National Guard march up alertly to be reviewed by their commanding officers saw something more than military drill, something more than flag-decked review. They saw a solemn and slow-moving pageant, a military funeral with the memories of 2,000 fallen comrades borne along on symbolical flag-draped caisson.

Muffled Drums and Tolling Bells.

The instruments of the Fifteenth Regiment Band, famous for their lively marching music, were turned to the sounding of funeral requiems, and the slow music resounded up and down the avenue with the heavy and measured tread of marching feet. As the pageant moved up the avenue to the roll of muffled drums the church bells began their slow tolling and kept it up until the troops had passed.

The chimes of St. Patrick's sounded over the drums and music of the band, which played "Onward, Christian Soldiers," in passing the cathedral, and then the great bell in the tower tolled its deep notes of mourning for the fallen soldiers. Then the bells of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas and St. Thomas's joined in the slow chorus, with St. Bartholomew's and other churches east of Fifth Avenue. So impressive were the sights and sounds of this tribute to the dead that those who watched it removed their hats and stood at attention with bowed heads until the pageant had passed.

Heavy mists were over the avenue as the troops started on their march from Madison Square, but the morning sun lifted them, and the bright rays glinted off polished bayonets and the gold of wound and service stripes on the swinging arms of the veterans. In the sharpness of the November air, these veterans did not march hurriedly as on ordinary review, but slowly and with tense faces as if going again up to the Hindenburg line and Bullecourt tunnel, where fell so many of their comrades whose memories they were honoring on this Armistice Sunday.

In the meadows in Central Park all was sunshine and deep silence as the Provisional regiment of guardsmen, with attendant cavalry and artillery, drew up in squares for the memorial services to the dead. The flag on the staff there was at half mast, and before Father Duffy's stand was drawn up the flag-draped caisson symbolizing the sacrifice of the dead.

Father Duffy on Youth in War.

Praising the valor of the Twenty-seventh Division and other units from this city, Father Duffy spoke of the quick response of the regiments here to the call for service in the war, and continued:

"Nothing was so impressive as the quick response of youth to the call of duty. They rushed to the nation's arms in time of need, and theirs be the praise and glory."

After the band had ended the memorial service by sounding taps, Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, commanding the First Division at Camp Dix, who reviewed the troops in Fifth Avenue, marched around the ranks on inspection. He stopped several times to praise individual veterans for their service.

General Summerall, who represented Major Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff of the army, was accompanied by Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, commanding the New York National Guard; Major Gen. Daniel Appleton, for many years commander of the Seventh Regiment; Colonel William Weigel, chief of staff at Governor's Island; Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt; Lieut. Col. Edward Olmsted, chief of staff for General O'Ryan; Major Allan L. Reagan, adjutant of the Twenty-seventh, and other officers from army, navy and State militia.

Other ceremonies in memory of the fallen soldiers of units of the Twenty-seventh Division were held in armories throughout the city yesterday. Company I of the Seventh Regiment unveiled a tablet in the officers' room of the armory at Park Avenue and Sixty-sixth Street in memory of Captain Percy Hall and sixty-five members of the company. Captain Hall and most of those on the casualty list of the unit fell in the Hindenburg line engagement on Sept. 29, 1918. Tablets also were put up on the lockers of all the fallen soldiers who were members of the regiment before the war.

The West Side Y. M. C. A. also unveiled a tablet yesterday in the lobby of their building in West Fifty-seventh Street in memory of the members who were killed in the war. The presentation was made by Gilbert Colgate and acceptance by William M. Kingsley.

The Sixty-ninth Regiment yesterday aided in the dedication of a stone gateway erected at Fordham University as a memorial to the thirty-six students who perished in the war, and, with hundreds of other veterans, was reviewed by General O'Ryan and other officers and Chaplains of the National Guard. Father Duffy and fifteen other priests, some of them war Chaplains, marched at the head of the regiment in the review.

The Rev. Joseph A. McCaffery, during the war Chaplain with the Second Division, presented the memorial archway to the Institution on behalf of the alumni before a crowd of about 10,000 persons.

In another service in the Bronx, members of the Bronx County American Legion placed memorial wreaths in Poe Park, at 103d Street and the Grand Concourse, and then marched to the Fordham exercises.

The Norwegian Captain says it is not wise to take many chances in shallow waters or narrow channels, especially in hazy weather.

Just off to the left near Newport News is one of the big war steamships that has keeled over on her side and taken fire. The little tug beside her is just arriving with a score of men for her relief.

To take even one chance is one too many for anybody, but especially for credulous and all believing women, either in buying properties or investing money in shares of stock. Buy only of people of established reputation who could not afford to mislead you.

AU QUATRIEME

$100,000 Antiques at Half Price

That antiques should partake in a sale at half price is undoubtedly an unusual event. It is hardly to be expected that such a thing should happen nowadays, since the war has made inroads upon the world's supply of antiques, which is, of course, limited, and since fine old things are constantly increasing in value. Au Quatrieme enters for the first time into the Stewart Week Sale in order to make room for a new collection of antiques expected from Italy—the contents of an entire Venetian Palace—that we have been fortunate enough to purchase.

The auction sales going on in the city during the coming week will be best proof of how very low our Stewart Week prices are.

The collection includes—all at Half Price

FAVORS VOTE COUNT DAY AFTER ELECTION

Talley Proposes Change in System in Interest of Accuracy.

MEANS 24 HOURS OF DOUBT

Instances at Recent Polls Cited—Would Use Teachers and Expert Accountants.

Legislation to reform the method of counting ballots was advocated by Chief Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley in a statement issued last night. Mr. Talley said his investigation of the count at the recent election showed there had been a complete breakdown of the machinery in this city. He suggested that, instead of beginning the count immediately after the close of the polls, as at present, the ballot boxes should be sealed and the count begun by competent canvassers the next day.

Mr. Talley said he realized that this method was open to the objection that knowledge of the result of the election would be delayed, but said this would be more than compensated by the insurance of accuracy. He said in part:

"After listening to the numerous reports that have come to this office since last election, showing a complete breakdown in the machinery for counting the ballots, I have become convinced that the next Legislature will have no more important task than that of legislation which should revolutionize the present crude, antiquated and inaccurate provisions for counting the vote.

"I am informed that the count of the vote in the last election began at about 6 o'clock. The size of the vote cast was unprecedented. They had to count the Presidential ballots, then the ballots for State officers and examine the crossmarks for the judicial candidates, numbering approximately twenty names. The count for the important office of Supreme Court Justice and for the City Court and the Court of General Sessions seems in every instance to have been left for the last.

"The count went on all during the night. In some districts the count was not completed until the afternoon of the following day. After 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, at a time when the canvassers had been at work for seven or eight hours, some of them informed me that the eye-strain and fatigue were so great that they were actually unable to see the marks on the ballots they were supposed to count. Many of them had to work all night by candle or lamp light in crowded, stuffy, smokey surroundings. As morning came on, many of them realized that they had to be at their own work in their regular occupations at 7 or 8 o'clock. In one instance, one of them had absolutely refused to work and was threatened with arrest unless he would continue, although he was physically unable to do so.

"I am convinced that the only way this situation can be remedied would be by closing the polls at 5 or 6 o'clock in the evening, removing the ballot boxes under lock and seal to the nearest police stations and kept there during the night. On the following day, regularly appointed canvassers of responsibility and training could then be put to work on the count.

"Instead of these canvassers being picked up haphazard in the various election districts, school teachers and accountants should be employed and given the aid of counting machines and all the appliances of modern accountancy, which would be a help toward both speed and accuracy. The stipend of $6 a night this year failed to attract to the job, as a rule, people who were really capable. If New York would lead the way in this needed reform, I am certain every State in the Union would follow."

Broadhurst Plans Changed.

A change of plans by the Shuberts will bring "When We Are Young" to the Broadhurst Theatre a week from tonight instead of Robert Warwick in "The Spider." "When We Are Young" is a comedy by Kate L. McLaurin, with a cast headed by Henry Hull, Alma Tell and George Marion. "The Spider" will be continued on tour, and will come to New York later in the season.

Awaken, Men!

Awaken to the greatest good clothes values since the fond, full dollar days of 1914

WHEN we decided to open the doors of our wholesale plant at retail in New York City, an advertising expert said to us—

"You've got a wonderful plan—the greatest value-giving plan I ever heard of.

"But will New York believe it? New York is fair minded—but it is hard boiled when it comes to fine sounding claims. Can you make New York see the great merit back of your 'maker to wearer' plan?

"You can do it—if you let New York see your clothes. That's your best advertisement.

"Get 5000 of these real custom-tailored clothes on the backs of New York men as quickly as you can.

"Let them see that they're better than ready-mades—in quality and style—to say nothing of the better fit that 'made to measure' always implies.

"Do this quickly—no matter what it costs."

T·R·T

And we've decided to do that very thing—no matter what it costs.

Yes—even if we have to donate part of the cost of these demonstration suits and overcoats.

Hence, our remarkable offer to the next 5000 men, on and after November 8th, who order Royal Clothes.

A suit or overcoat to order—at bone cost of production and delivery.

Will you be one of the lucky 5000 to have your suit made to your special order on these extraordinary terms?

If so, you'll enjoy the smartest good clothes deal you ever put over—anywhere.

TO BUILD UP THIRD PARTY.

Committee of 48 to Be Ready for 1924, Says Chairman Hopkins.

The Committee of Forty-eight will continue its effort to build up a new third party, according to a statement yesterday by J. A. H. Hopkins, Chairman of its Executive Committee. Mr. Hopkins said that the result of the election demonstrated the necessity of creating a real opposition party. The Republican Party was swept into power by an overwhelming majority, he said, not because of any confidence in the leadership of that party but because of the determination of the voters to register their disapproval of the Democratic Party.

Mr. Hopkins predicted a similar rebuff for the Republican Party in 1924, and said the Committee of Forty-eight intended to begin at once to crystallize sentiment in time to put a new opposition party in the field for the next Presidential election.

HIKE TO ROOSEVELT GRAVE.

Boy Scouts to Make Memorial Pilgrimage on Nov. 26.

Boy Scouts within fifty miles of New York will make a memorial pilgrimage to the grave of Theodore Roosevelt on Nov. 26, the day after Thanksgiving. Each Boy Scout council in the territory will select a delegation, either of individual Scouts or troops, and several thousand are expected to make the pilgrimage.

Daniel Carter Beard, National Scout Commissioner, will lead the Scouts. The boys will be carried to Oyster Bay in automobiles, trains and by boat. After they have mabilized they will hike to the Roosevelt grave at Sagamore Hill, where several memorial addresses will be made, one by Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

THE STEINWAY DUO-ART REPRODUCING PIANO

THE Steinway Duo-Art Reproducing Piano reflects the skill, experience and resources of the two leading houses of the music industry. It is a pianoforte of highest standing, and a Duo-Art Pianola—the supreme achievement of The Aeolian Company.

As a piano for hand-playing, it is the superb product of Messrs. Steinway & Sons. Further comment as to the artistic quality of the instrument as a piano would be superfluous.

It is, in addition, a Pianola of the most advanced type with all the advantages for artistic self-playing and interpretation that this is recognized as implying.

This instrument's latest and most impressive function, however, is its ability to reproduce the actual performances of pianists with absolute and startling fidelity.

The greatest pianists of the world are collaborating with The Aeolian Company in developing this extraordinary feature. Paderewski, Hofmann, Busoni, Grainger, Novaes, Ganz, Gabrilowitsch, Alfred Cortot, the great French pianist, Cyril Scott, the noted English composer-pianist, are among the host of masters of the keyboard who record their art exclusively for the Duo-Art.

Dance music, popular piano pieces and accompaniments are also recorded by specialists in these lines for the Duo-Art music libraries.

To possess a Duo-Art Pianola Piano is to enjoy the privilege of listening at will to the most brilliant piano playing of the present age.

You are sincerely invited to hear the Steinway or other models of the Duo-Art at any time. It is our pleasure to demonstrate the marvels of this great instrument to every lover of music.

Price Guarantee

THE prices of the Duo-Art Pianos are guaranteed until July 1, 1921. Should they be reduced by us before that date, we will refund the full amount of such reduction.

The Duo-Art is also presented in the Steck, the Wheelock, the Stroud and famous Weber Duo-Art Pianos—Grands and Uprights

THE AEOLIAN COMPANY

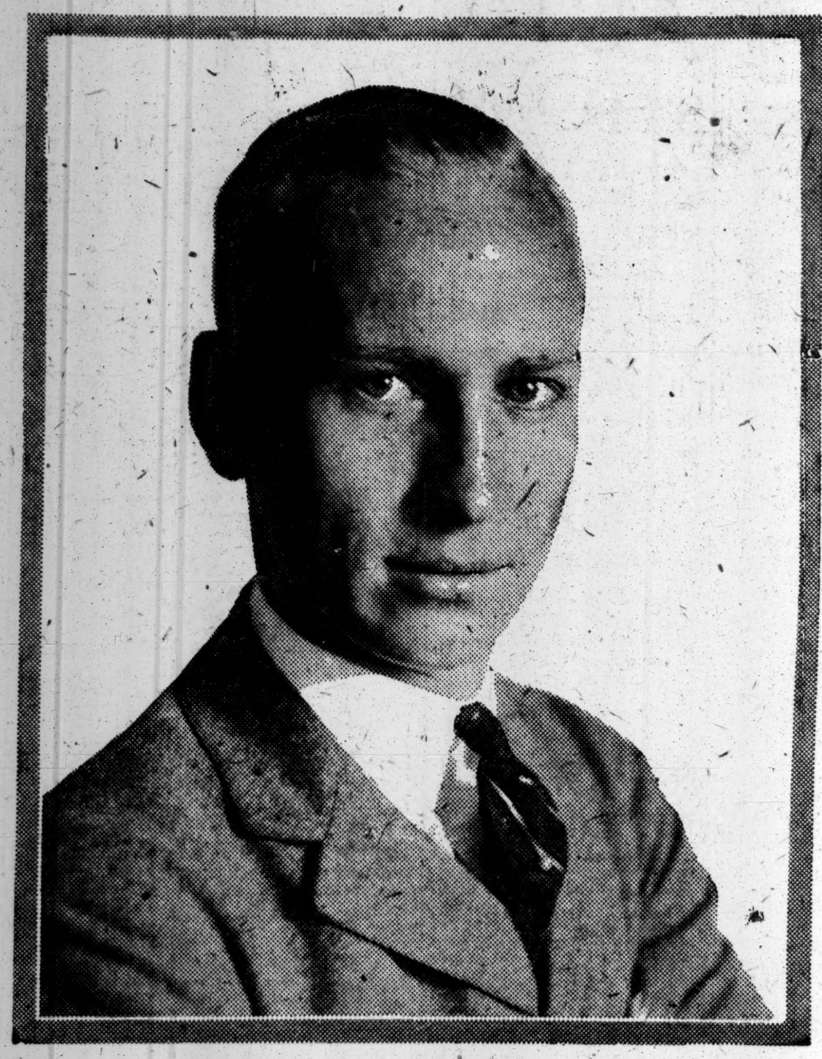
AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK



Laurence M. Lloyd, President of the Edward A. Cassidy Company, largest specialized selling organization in the United States devoted exclusively to the marketing of automobile accessories.

Mr. Lloyd's intimate connection with big business concerns makes his opinion of the modern Printer of interest to all buyers of printing.

The Cassidy organization buys printing not only for their own needs, but also for the seven concerns whose products they distribute. The appropriation of these concerns for magazine advertising and printed matter runs into hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

Costs reduced 52% by a printer's recommendation

Laurence M. Lloyd, President of the Edward A. Cassidy Company, tells how an unnecessary expense was eliminated

First of a series of interviews with business executives on the purchase of printing and the development of the Printing Industry

"ONE kind of printing we purchase every year consists of page inserts displaying our products, for the loose-leaf catalogs of jobbers' salesmen. This work runs into many thousands of dollars annually, and as the catalogs are of different sizes, there was at one time great duplication of effort—an obvious waste.

"One day our Printer came to us with this suggestion: 'Why not have all the inserts you will need for a year printed at one time? The text can be printed comparatively small on large size paper, and the copies can then be trimmed down to the various catalog sizes required.'

"This method of standardization we adopted at once, and have followed since then, saving more than half of what we originally spent.

"This little incident illustrates an important principle. If our Printer had not known what our needs would be, if he had not had a thorough understanding of our business from beginning to end, the suggestion probably would not have occurred to him.

"No man would think of calling in several physicians and having them compete for the job of making him well. No man would explain a legal case to several lawyers and then give it to the man who promised to do the work for the least money. Neither can a man, we believe, profitably ask Printers to compete on the basis of price.

"In our organization we consider ourselves a client of our Printer, and have found that this attitude has yielded us big dividends in service and savings."

Cassidy salesmen call on 30,000 dealers a year. Ten million pieces of printed mailing matter leave the Cassidy mailing department annually.

New attitude toward the Printer among business executives

BUYERS of printing all over the country—advertising managers, purchasing agents, business executives—now realize that the Printer* of today is a man to be consulted in the bigger phases of printing. The Printer is no longer an order chaser. Neither is he merely content to follow instructions blindly. The Printer is being regarded as a creative force in business—giving thought primarily to producing results for the customer.

The United Typothetae of America, the National Association of Stationers and the National Lithographers' Association have taken the lead in this movement toward better service. Recently the U. T. A. came out for standardization as a move in the direction of better values. At its last meeting in St. Louis, it unanimously passed a Resolution: "That national organizations of paper merchants, paper manufacturers and printing machinery manufacturers be requested to severally appoint committees to join with a special committee representing the United Typothetae of America, in an effort to analyze the needs, reduce the number of sizes, weights, colors and grades of paper, standardize machinery sizes, investigate methods of increasing paper production and determine a reduction to the minimum of the number of watermarks in commercial paper."

A great example of industrial co-operation

The U. T. A. has 105 local branches, each branch with a high-grade paid secretary in charge. The 4,800 Printers who are members do a total annual volume of, roughly, $500,000,000. More than 6,000 students are studying its courses in cost finding, estimating, selling, advertising, and the broader phases of printing.

The American Writing Paper Company wishes to take the lead in endorsing this work. We believe that the combined work that the U. T .A., the National Lithographers' Association, and the National Association of Stationers are doing is one of the most important forces for good in modern business. All parties benefit—the Buyer, the Printer, the Paper Merchant and the Paper Maker.

The trademark of the association of employing printers, one of the greatest organizations of its kind in the world.

Our recommendations to all buyers

This Company has therefore decided upon the policy of giving the support of its entire organization and its institutional backing to the movement for better service. To all buyers of printing we make these recommendations:

Do not get four or five competitive bids from as many Printers and give the work to the man with the lowest estimate.

Select your Printer—Lithographer, Engraver, or Stationer—on the basis of service rather than price. Give him the facts about your business policies and methods. Furnish him with the basis for constructive suggestions. Maintain a permanent relationship with him.

Let your Printer co-operate and work WITH you rather than merely work FOR you. Be open-minded to your Printer's advice.

Your Printer is the one best qualified to select the right paper for each job. He is in a position to help you effect real economies—improve quality—bring RESULTS.

NOTE: In general where we use the term "Printer" in this announcement, it refers not only to the printer who does flat bed and rotary work, but also to the offset printer, the lithographer, the engraver and the stationer.*

MUSIC

By Richard Aldrich

The Society of the Friends of Music.

The Society of the Friends of Music, having given its regular concerts ever since it started them in the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, has been obliged by the increasing size of its audiences to transfer them to a larger place. It began it season yesterday afternoon in the Cort Theatre, a place for several reasons less agreeable than the other; but the audience was one that filled it.

The society has given very few more delightful concerts than this, and none that went further to justify its existence and its work. The program was devoted to harpsichord music transcribed for the piano by Harold Bauer. It began with pieces by some of the earliest writers for the harpsichord and ended with a fantasia and fugue in A minor by Bach, originally for harpsichord with a pedal keyboard, arranged by Mr. Bauer for two pianos, and the concerto by Bach in D for harpsichord, flute and violin, accompanied by a small string orchestra.

The older pieces were among those that Mr. Bauer played at a certain historical concert that he gave in New York some three years ago. They began with a toccata by Claudio Merulo, a sixteenth century composer who was organist and chapelmaster at St. Mark's, Venice, and who shows in this piece the characteristic early attempts toward an instrumental style; a piece that, notwithstanding its wholly archaic quality, has dignity and charm. There was a capriccio by Frescobaldi, an early seventeenth century man, written with ingenuity in the cohtrapuntal and harmonic resources of the day around the cuckoo's call; perhaps one of the earliest cases of a contrivance that had later much popularity, and here used not only with ingenuity, but with a real poetic suggestiveness.

There was a stout toccata by Frescobaldi's pupil, Froberger, and an absorbingly interesting "sonata" by Johann Kuhnau, the predecessor of Bach in Leipzig, one of a set of "Biblical sonatas" depicting various Biblical scenes and incidents, this one being the story of David and Goliath. The eight movements, being among the earliest attempts at "program music," describe pictorially the combat, culminating in a glissando followed by some solemn chords, representing the trajectory of the stone from David's sling, the fall and death of the giant. The piece has numerous curious and interesting effects, as the section showing "the terror of the Israelites and their prayer to God at the sight of the terrible enemy," where there is a faint-hearted, descending passage in repeated notes beneath a well-known German chorale, the making in all a delightful bit of color.

The whole is, of course, naif, and in a way amusing; but those who heard it and were amused by it might well have asked themselves if it is a bit more naif in any of the productions in program music that have followed it, down to the latest of Strauss's.

In the fantasia and fugue by Bach Mr. Bauer had the assistance of Ernest Hoffmann, who played the second part on a "spinet grand" piano, probably the one that Gustav Mahler used to play on in Mozart operas and in Bach orchestral pieces when he conducted at the Philharmonic Society. It makes a fairly good suggestion of the harpsichord tone in its upper register, though the bass strings are too short to give much resonance, the piano being a very small one. The fantasia and fugue are fine music and the sonority was most characteristic.

The last number on the program had to wait till the string instrument players and George Barrère arrived from the concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra in Aeolian Hall. So Mr. Bauer came out and said that in order to lighten the burden of the artist he would, with the kind permission of the audience, play a partita of Bach. The audience kindly permitting, he played it in a most fascinating way.

Like the rest of the music on the program, Mr. Bauer has given it such retouching as may more strikingly recall the quality of sound of the harpsichord, particularly in adding octaves to suggest the use of the harpsichord's various couplers, and sometimes in changing the register of certain passages. But we are fain to think that the harpsichord was represented in Mr. Bauer's playing of this and the other pieces on the program even more by his wonderful command of tonal color on the piano, the variety of quality that he can suggest and actually produce.

The orchestral players having come, Bach's concerto in D for harpsichord, flute and violin was presented with Mr. Bauer, Mr. Barrère and Mr. Samuel Gardner playing the solo instruments, Mr. René Pollain conducting the little orchestra and Mr. Hoffmann playing on the "spinet grand," the "continuo," for harpsichord that was an invariable constitutent of the orchestra of Bach's time.

This performance was indeed the climax and crown of the afternoon's music, so delightful was it in the spirit of Bach, so beautiful in the ensemble and the blending of the tones of the solo instruments with each other and with the orchestra.

RUFFO SINGS TO THRONG.

Werrenrath and Others Give Recitals—Vidas with Symphony.

Titta Ruffo, baritone of the Chicago Opera, sang in a benefit for the Navy Club last evening at the Hippodrome, his familiar manner of bold dramatic appeal giving popular effect to the factotum air from "The Barber" and the prologue to "Pagliacci," cheered by 1,000 hearers. He also sang an air from Massenet's Le Roi de Lahore, while an assisting soprano, Nina Morgana, was heard in French and English songs, including several by American composers—Eddy Brown, Mana Zucca, Vanderpool and Cadman.

Reinald Werrenrath, reappearing for the first time since his tour of Europe, was greeted by a crowded house at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon. His artistic interpretations ranged from old Italian airs to modern French, such as a "Lied Maritime," by d'Indy, and to the "Songs of the Hebrides" collected by Mrs. Kennedy-Frazer. The admired baritone pleased his house with spoken interludes, telling the origin of the ancient Gaelic pieces, "which are so good," he said, "that it wouldn't be right not to let you in on them."

Flora Jewel, a young soprano of agreeable voice and presence, gave a debut recital at the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon, assisted by C. V. Bos, in airs of Handel and songs of Fourdrain, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Cyril Scott, Courtlandt Palmer and Alexander Lee.

Idelle Patterson, who sang with the Society of America Singers a season ago, appeared in recital last evening at Carnegie Hall. Hallett Gliberte accompanied a group of his songs, and Walter Golde assisted in airs of Mozart, Delcroze, Kramer, Nevin and La Forge.

The Symphony Society's third Sunday matinée in Aeolian Hall, with a sold-out subscription, presented a program in part heard at its concerts afield during the week. Raoul Vidas repeated Haydn's C-major concerto for violin. Brahms's second symphony was again played, this time in full, and Mr. Vidas was heard also in an "Intermezzo" by Lalo.

THE SCREEN

"The Penalty," an altogether incredible melodrama that, by its excesses, mocks even the friendliest spectator's love of life as it is often fictitiously created on the screen, is at the Capitol this week. It is from a story by Gouverneur Morris, which, if it is anything like its motion picture version, must have taxed the author's rampant imagination, and also sent him, now and then, when original ideas failed, to the reserve cabinet of familiar devices from which a novelist may render first aid to a plot in difficulty.

If its plot, then, were everything in "The Penalty," its adherents would probably be few. As it is, however, it will undoubtedly win the active interest, and even the regard, of many—because of Lon Chaney in the principal rôle, and the direction of Wallace Worsley. In the midst of a purely mechanistic arrangement of incidents, and surrounded chiefly by puppets, Chaney creates a character. The repellant "Frog" of "The Miracle Man," the villainous Ricardo of "Victory," and the likable hero of "Nomads of the North," has another vivid impersonation to his credit.

When they saw "The Miracle Man" some were struck at first by Chaney's ability to make himself seem a hopeless cripple, but before the picture was finished they forgot his stunt as such and their interest was all in the person he seemed to be. Likewise, when Chaney appears in "The Penalty" with both of his legs apparently sawed off above the knees, some will exclaim, "How in the world can he do that?"; but after they have followed his acting a while, and felt the force of his presence on the screen, they will take it as just a part of his rôle that his legs are missing. And, as a matter of fact, his physical appearance is one of the least persuasive things about his performance, because, in several side views, the outline of his legs strapped up behind him is evident. But in all that he does, the man he is supposed to be is present.

This man is Blizzard, a ruler of San Francisco's underworld, who uses his extraordinary mind and personality in entirely evil pursuits. He exercises autocratic power in his sphere and builds a gigantic plan to loot the city, and, incidentally, to take revenge against the surgeon who had needlessly amputated his legs years before. He is also obsessed with the idea of obtaining a pair of new legs by grafting, and it is when he submits to an anesthetic for this operation that the doctor, who knows that he has suffered an injury to his brain, operates on his head instead and restores his mental balance. Upon recovering, his reformation is complete, but this turn in the story is saved from utter banality when Blizzard pays the penalty for his past life, dying by the hand of one of his former followers.

It is through all of this unreality that Mr. Chaney takes a real character, largely by his own efforts, but aided by the director, and even by the story itself at times, as, for example, in the scenes in which he plays the piano and is momentarily transformed by its music. One forgets the nature of the melodrama when the vicious Blizzard cannot kill a girl whom he knows to be a government spy because she works so well the pedals his stumps of legs cannot reach.

Director Worsley has set his production effectively, and the cast without being able to do anything distinctive, is nevertheless adequate for the story.

Also on the Capitol program is a Hy Mayer Travelaugh, "In the Land of Fancy."

The version of "Kismet," at the Strand this week, is not the "Kismet" of the stage. The sound and color that made the latter are missing. Not even as much of it has been reproduced as might have been brought to the screen by the magic of lighting, setting and costuming which some directors have at their command. Although Louis J. Gasnier has staged his production lavishly, he has not succeeded in putting into the film the tones and shades and variety that "Kismet" ought to have. Much more colorful pictures, much less pretentiously advanced, have been seen on Broadway. Many of the scenes of the photoplay at the Strand, despite the richness they probably had in the studio, are flat.

The presence of Otis Skinner in his stage part, however, does much to redeem the production. Mr. Skinner [illegible] same tempestuous character he made him on the stage, and although his voice is not heard, his appearance and manner carry him far. His performance is worth seeing. Also some of the others in the cast add life to the picture, and in several scenes the illusion of Bagdad one thousand years ago is attained.

Taken in comparison with the average program photoplay, "Kismet" has value. It is different. Its story is pleasantly fantastic, in spite of its murders; it is a relief from the regular run of unreality parading itself as true to life. But when one considers what might have been done with this spectacle, even without the aid of natural colors on the screen, he is bound to be disappointed. And, incidentally, "Kismet" is a photoplay that cries for the perfection of color photography.

George Fitzmaurice's latest production, "Idols of Clay," with Mae Murray and David Powell in the leading rôles, has come to the Criterion, while "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," with Thomas Meighan, has moved from the Rialto to the Rivoli, and "Always Audacious," with Wallace Reid, from the Rivoli to the Rialto.

In Federation There Is Power to Move the World

A VITAL MESSAGE TO BUSINESS AMERICA

This is the time for every brain and hand to utilize every atom of energy, every constructive thought, every helpful suggestion that will furnish more power to the business motor.

This is the time when the generals of business must take off their coats, roll up their sleeves, spit on their hands and re-vim every department, inside and out. 100% management must register 110% and more.

This is the time when raw material men must join forces with manufacturers, without fear or favor, to keep production on an even keel, with both hands on the wheel.

This is the time when manufacturers must co-ordinate their interests with wholesalers in a will to win by working together.

This is the time when wholesalers must co-operate to the fullest extent with retailers by the suggestion of better selling methods. Showing a merchant how to sell more is to show him how to buy more.

This is the time when the entire sales organization should be on the road selling prosperity, and star salesmen should not ignore the one-night stands. Beating the brush for business is more profitable than killing time at home.

This is the time when retailers must take advantage of every legitimate means of inducing business by catering to the public needs at equitable prices for dependable goods. Business may be encouraged when it cannot be forced.

This is the time for the salespeople behind the counter to remember that truth, courtesy and smiling service are the three great assets of personal success.

This is the time when the business whiner should be ostracized, the grouch banished, the discouraged inspired.

Inertia begets inertia; every complaint imagines another.

Super-effort in the sanctum, office, factory, on the road, behind the counter, will do more to blow away the clouds of uncertainty and put business on a soundly economic basis than all the theories that ever have been or ever will be expounded.

This is the time—let's all go to work for the new era of real prosperity.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

A trifle late, M. BOURGEOIS, President of the Council of the League of Nations, expresses regret that a recent utterance of his was made use of in the American Presidential campaign. That water has flowed under the bridge. The main thing now is that M. BOURGEOIS takes occasion of the meeting of the League in Geneva to emphasize in the strongest way the need of American representation. Without the United States the League is an organization manqué. And without the League the United States is a nation confused and hesitant as regards both its duties and its interests.

There is a vacant chair at Geneva, declares M. BOURGEOIS, which America ought to make haste to occupy. He professes himself mystified by our failure to fill it. The chief trouble was that American politicians were for months giving all their thoughts to another chair to be filled—one at Washington. They could not see the empty seat at Geneva for looking so intently at the one to become empty in the White House. Well, provision has now been made for the Presidential chair. The only question is how soon its coming occupant, and the political party that placed him in it, will lift up their eyes and see the necessity of joining the League of Nations. We belong in it as a peace-loving people, and we ought to be in it in order to live up to our reputation as a shrewd, Yankee nation. For out of the international entanglemen, into which we have fallen there is no other way of safely and profitably extricating ourselves. Good business demands, if the moral argument does not suffice, that as speedily as possible we take the chair left vacant for us at Geneva.

COMPULSORY LABOR FOR CAPITAL

The Kansas Industrial Court has summoned seven flour milling concerns of Topeka to answer a charge of "curtailing production in an essential industry to influence prices." For all we know their reply may be that they could not get wheat to grind because the Kansas farmers were holding wheat, and that they would like to have the farmers joined as defendants. Putting frivolity aside, the hope may be expressed that the court will hear the flour millers on the merits of their case. In Australia mines have been ordered to stop working because they could not or would not pay the wages ordered by sympathetic authority of Government. An order to work at a loss, however, is a novelty. This Kansas order is a "case of the first impression," and the arguments will be interesting.

Speaking generally, there is no necessity to order corporations to work at a profit. They are even willing, as a rule, to work for nothing, because an idle plant is more expensive than a working plant, and it is worth something to keep a concern going in readiness for revival of profits. Public utilities may be ordered to work at a loss, because they enjoy privileges under a franchise which gives them existence. But even public utilities cannot be compelled to work indefinitely at a loss. More people are now paying dimes than nickels for traction rides in 288 cities.

Some time ago Louisiana tried to make sugar grinding a public utility in order to affect sugar prices, but Kansas has overlooked that formality. Apparently, the reason for the prosecution of the delinquent millers is their preference to stop rather than sacrifice themselves in the holy cause of maintaining the standard of living on orders, regardless of where the money was to come from. Possibly labor may revise its opinion of the harshness of the Industrial Court law if it leads to the compulsory payment of wages as well as to the fixing of a reasonable wage.

The education of the courts of the United States in the meaning of reasonable restraint of trade was a long and costly process, and the Attorney General of the United States is still in the primary class, studying steadily but painfully. The Kansas Industrial Court will save itself worry by proceeding cautiously in teaching business men business. The suggestion is not gratuitous, because the court has made a poor beginning with its proceedings to block the Interstate Commerce Commission's order under the Interstate Commerce act. The Kansas court refused to allow the increase of rates the commission ordered because the commission erred in its calculation of the amount the Western railroads needed by $192,853,686 above the statutory rate. The commission denied the court's application for a hearing on the alleged error. The commission did not allow a 35 per cent. increase to Western roads as a whole, and allowed only 25 per cent. to the Mountain-Pacific group. According to the railway calculators, the Kansas court's figures would allow the railways $28,000,000 more than the commission's figures. The Interstate Commerce Commission has learned something about the necessities of the railways in the last generation, and is now well equipped to instruct teachers to whom it submitted in earlier years. It may be hoped that the Kansas Industrial Court will learn more easily and quickly.

HELP THE HOSPITALS.

On the Fifth Avenue block opposite the Park, between 105th and 106th Streets, the new building of the Fifth Avenue Hospital is to stand. The structure, in the form of the letter X, will have nine stories and about three hundred rooms, every one containing but a single bed, every one an outside room looking to the air and the sun. It will be the first hospital in the world built according to this plan. One-half of the rooms will be for the use of persons neither very poor nor well off, the salaried folk, too poor to pay the full price of a comfortable room in existing institutions, but willing and able to pay something. The arrangements of the new hospital are admirable in all respects. The cost of the building will be $2,900,000. For endowment and construction a fund of $5,000,000 is needed. Of this $1,500,000 has been raised. The generosity of the public must and will provide the rest. This town can never have hospitals enough. Most of them have large waiting lists. It is calculated that only about one person of ten who need hospital treatment can get it.

Today begins the forty-first annual collection for the United Hospital Fund. It is necessary to raise $1,500,000 to take care of persons who need but can't afford to pay for hospital treatment. Fifty-seven hospitals will share in this fund. The hardest task of the hospitals has been to provide this free treatment, the cost of which has greatly increased, like the cost of everything else. Paying patients and endowments are always insufficient. As a rule, more than half of the days of treatments provided in a year by the United Hospitals are free days. Moreover, they have to answer thousands of ambulance calls, and the number of free treatments in clinics and dispensaries is counted in millions.

It is the usual estimate that on every day in the year 180,000 New Yorkers are ill. There is no means of calculating what the number is of those that need and can't afford to pay for hospital treatment, but it is great. The whole public is asked to take a hand in this annual collection for the sick poor. It is surprising to learn that hitherto most of the United Hospital Fund has been given by 9,000 persons. Nine thousand out of a population of 6,000,000! There should be a very much greater and more general participation in these contributions for the sick poor. A nobler purpose can't be found. Give and give generously. Blessed is he that considereth the sick.

THE FEDERATION'S POLITICAL POWER.

The Federation of Labor was as much in favor of the Plumb plan to run the railways for the production of wages as it was opposed to the Esch-Cummins act to run the roads for the production of transportation. Therefore the best test of the Federation's political power is to examine the results of its campaign program to punish its enemies and reward its friends. One of its possible successes—certainly after its opposition and perhaps because of it—was the defeat of Representative ESCH. His disappearance from the House promotes to his Chairmanship WINSLOW of Massachusetts, who is regarded as less friendly to labor and more opposed to the Plumb plan than Mr. ESCH, who is likely to succeed Commissioner WOOLLEY on the Interstate Commerce Commission. The success in defeating Representative ESCH reacts against the Federation more than its failure to defeat Senator CUMMINS, who was re-elected overwhelmingly.

It is useful to put on the record The Railway Age's analysis of the details, for reference when the Federation next makes political threats. Sixteen Senators who voted for the bill were candidates for re-election, and thirteen were re-elected. Five Senators voted against the bill, and four were defeated. Of 250 Representatives who voted for the bill, 201 were re-elected. Sixteen were not candidates at the primaries, and 31 were not re-elected, in some cases because they ran for other offices. Of 150 Representatives who voted against the bill, only 82 are now known to be re-elected. Of 67 not re-elected, 59 are Democrats. Representative SIMS introduced the Plumb bill, opposed the Esch-Cummins bill, and was defeated. Representative BAER, cartoonist of the Plumb plan's newspaper Labor, was defeated. Representative DOAK, legislative agent of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen at Washington, was defeated. The record shows that labor was able neither to reward its friends nor to punish its enemies.

A BILLION FROM CUSTOMS.

There has been no audible approval of Senator CURTIS's suggestion that "the special session of Congress "should write a tariff bill which "would bring in about $1,000,000,000 "in revenue instead of $300,000,000 "obtained under the Democratic "tariff." If the Republicans had ever written that sort of tariff, there would be greater fear of their doing it again. If in any near future they raise a billion from customs, they will also raise the cost of living. An idea can be drawn from the cost of living when war conditions stopped imports of competitive products more surely and completely than any tariff the Republicans would dare to enact. The war made this country the greatest exporter among nations, and almost the most necessitous of importers.

We no longer are under the necessity of importing goods, to get goods which we cannot go without, because we cannot supply ourselves. Now we can supply ourselves with all necessaries except tropical products, and luxuries enough to make the foreign producers sell at attractive prices if they wish to sell at all. Our need to import foreign goods now is to receive payment of what is owed to us and to sustain the market abroad for our surplus production. The country has learned that on current trade exports and imports must balance, and on past trade or transactions goods must be received in payment because we already have all the gold we need, or that it is good for us to have or to take from our foreign customers in their depressed condition. We must keep our foreign buyers strong if we wish to sell to them, or expect them to pay for what we already have sold to them on credit. A billion revenue in customs would fail of being a calamity only by being an impossibility.

HISTORIC DOULLENS.

The contribution of STEPHANE LAUZANNE to the Foch-Clemenceau controversy presents a picture of the meeting at Doullens that will linger in the memory: but it must be considered that LAUZANNE, who is a partisan of the Marshal, was not there. Nor was ANDRE TARDIEU, who has insisted in another article that the Premier obtained the supreme command for FOCH when the Germans were knocking at the door of Amiens and pressing the British back on the Channel ports. TARDIEU was acting as French High Commissioner in the United States when the statesmen and the Generals conferred at Doullens upon means to halt the enemy, save Paris and bar the road to the Channel. LAUZANNE is concerned about the reputation of Marshal FOCH, and TARDIEU argues for CLEMENCEAU's loyalty to the Marshal. Who were the informants of these advocates? It may be supposed that FOCH has confided in his friend LAUZANNE, and that the points of TARDIEU's case he got from the "Tiger," who is now solacing himself with travel while his enemies rage at home.

STEPHANE LAUZANNE writes, like the brilliant journalist he is, with an eye to color. His method is not the grave historic. President POINCARE, CLEMENCEAU and LOUCHEUR arrive at Doullens when Field Marshal HAIG is in conference with his army commanders in the Town Hall about the desperate straits to which the campaign has come. The Frenchmen walk up and down in the little square before the Town Hall waiting for the British soldiers to come out. Who is this figure in a slate-gray uniform carrying a polu stick like a club? None other than FOCH, who, uninvited, has turned up to fight his own battle for recognition as the man who knows how the day can be saved. He buttonholes the President and takes him aside. "Do "you know the orders that have been "given?" POINCARE knew all about the proposal for a retreat of the Franco-British lines and the evacuation of Paris. He had had it out at the Elysée with CLEMENCEAU, who was fresh from PETAIN and inclined to think it was the proper strategy. The President bristled protest. So he was ready to hear FOCH in the little Town Hall square, while the British Generals had their heads together inside.

"Paris isn't concerned at all," exclaimed the Marshal. "The boche must be stopped where he is." HAIG and PETAIN were two men on the wrong side of a double door, which had been forced open. "How would you stop the Germans?" asked LOUCHEUR, who was listening. "Humph!" from the Marshal, "a bit of sticking "plaster here, another there, and in "the end the boche is stopped." The Marshal's figures of the burst-open doors and the adhesive plasters did not hang together well, but he was grimly in earnest. Besides, he had proved his "system" at the first Marne and at Ypres. At this point British uniforms showed on the Town Hall steps, and in a few minutes the historic Doullens council began. As Chief of Staff FOCH was rightly there, and he was bound to be heard. "We must win in front of Amiens!" he insisted. "We must have victory where we are!" HAIG, "whose part in the whole affair was noble and fine," says LAUZANNE, rose and urged unity of command under FOCH. CLEMENCEAU, "in a loud voice," called upon PETAIN to follow HAIG's example and put himself under FOCH's command. LAUZANNE says nothing about the response of the "impenetrable" PETAIN. This seems hardly fair to that redoubtable soldier, who must have consented, for with no more loss of time the order to FOCH was drawn up by LOUCHEUR and signed. That was the turning point of the war. It was won at Doullens. Marshal FOCH may do an injustice to CLEMENCEAU, who has the exterior of a bear. There is abundant evidence that the Premier often took up the cudgels for FOCH. The two men are temperamentally at odds. One would like to have PETAIN's version of the German drive and Doullens.

ANOTHER PEACE TREATY.

So the great baseball war has been called off. This seems to be the new fashion in international relations, and it is a good one. After peace on the Adriatic, peace on the diamond. D'ANNUNZIO may rage and BAN JOHNSON imagine a vain thing, but sensible men, who had a great deal to lose by fighting and nothing of consequence to gain, will pay no great attention to these tortured and tragic figures who pass from the front page of current history.

In both of these pacific agreements the principal question is the loyal execution in the dullness of everyday life of great decisions reached in heights of emotion. If the club owners of the two major leagues want to protect their investments, they will stick by their agreement, even when it hurts. They have persuaded Judge LANDIS to become the one-man Supreme Court of baseball. They surely trust him, for they are willing to pay him $50,000 a year. The test of their good intentions will come later, when they will have to trust him even when he decides that a valuable player belongs to somebody else. If they do that, a great reform has been accomplished. If they will not, baseball is beyond reform. Evidently the club owners realized that a change was needed, but they will have to keep on realizing it if the change is to do any good. The experience of JOHN K. TENER as President of the National League is a somewhat unhappy omen, but maybe the men who own the big leagues have learned something since then.

Judge LANDIS, if he is properly supported, can render great services to the industry and to the millions who love the sport, but it is hardly to be supposed that he intends to retain his position on the Federal bench. The fact that the big leagues are willing to give him about seven times as much money as the United States Government is rather grotesque, but offers no particular obstacle to his future usefulness in either capacity. But if our Federal Judges are so badly off that they have to earn easy money after hours, or if they have so little to do that they can earn seven times their salaries in leisure moments, the thing to do is to raise the salaries of Federal Judges. Certain dignitaries of the bench doubtless possess the presence and perhaps the other talents that would make them stars in the movies, but it would be regarded as somewhat eccentric for a Judge to lay off the make-up as he assumes the gown. One may suppose that Judge LANDIS is wiser than some of the correspondents who have been writing about his intentions, and that he will resign his office before he goes into his new work.

THE MINERS' INTERNATIONAL.

A recent publication of the International Labor Office details the ups and downs of the Miners' International. Before the war it was one of the mostly highly developed organs of international trade unionism. It broke down when Germany swept into Belgium. Attempts to revive it were made in 1919, on the initiative of British miners. But the Belgian unions, quite intelligibly, resolved that they would not send delegates to any congress in which Germany was represented. Things dragged along until this year. The International Executive met in Brussels in February and arranged for a full congress, the twenty-fifth of its kind, to be held at Geneva in August.

At that meeting about 150 delegates represented 2,500,000 miners of thirteen different nations. The discussions and decisions had mainly to do with war, with the nationalization or socialization of coal mines, with hours and wages of the workers, and with the distribution of fuel. It cannot be said that much was accomplished beyond the passing of resolutions. One of them put on record the readiness of the International to "call a "universal, general strike in the "event of an aggressive military pol-"icy on the part of any monarch or "any Government whatsoever." This is pretty vague. While the miners' unions were discussing what it meant, another war might get going, as in 1914, with a similar disregard by the miners of their international pledges.

It was not possible to reach an agreement on the subject of nationalizing the mines. A compromise resolution was finally adopted, leaving the matter largely for the Executive Committee to work out—if it could. More important, and more to the point of the existing world shortage, was a proposal to set up "an international "office for the distribution of fuel, "ores and other raw materials indis-"pensable for the revival of a nor-"mal economic life."

Hamlet was left out of the play. The United States, by far the largest producer of coal in all the world, was not represented in the Miners' International. Yet it is certain that not even in the matter of fuel can any one nation wash its hands of the others. Figures presented at Geneva indicate that the total output of coal in 1920 will be something like 47,000,000 tons less than in 1913. This is in spite of the fact, quietly recorded, that the number of miners has during the same period increased by 64,000. No wonder that the British mining strike was settled on the stipulation that there could be no higher wages unless there were greater production.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Grievance Made of Nothing.

Highly significant and equally characteristic was the sudden manifestation of audible opposition to the American Red Cross at the meeting of Central Federated Union delegates in the Labor Temple Friday evening. The outburst showed every evidence of having been carefully prepared and organized. There was nothing impulsive about the demonstration, and it was obvious that a grievance had been manufactured for a purpose and carefully circulated among men who are only too ready to assume that any grievance suggested to them, with themselves as the objects or victims, is a real one, to be resented with bitterness.

Of course, the charge that the Red Cross, here or anywhere else, has "discriminated" against Ireland or the Irish is without the shadow of a basis in fact. The reason why the American Red Cross has not sent either funds or workers to Ireland at the present time received adequate explanation as soon as the Red Cross officials could recover from their astonishment at the amazing attack made on them. It is because conditions in the distracted island, bad and lamentable as they are, do not constitute an emergency of the kind to which the Red Cross instantly responds, wherever the emergency may be.

Ireland has a Red Cross of its own, as has England, and neither organization has made the request for help—the admission of incompetence to meet existing needs—which alone would justify the American Red Cross in giving or even offering its assistance. This is not a mere technical excuse—it is an explanation that would be deemed adequate by anybody willing to examine the circumstances fairly and impartially. There are in Ireland, indeed, a considerable number of homeless and destitute people, and many suffering from wounds, but there is no excuse for assuming that local means for taking care of them all are lacking.

Collections Will Be Increased.

For a wholly imaginary grievance, the American Red Cross has been assailed, its collectors abused, insulted and threatened! Men assuming—in all probability inaccurately—to speak for something like 300,000 workers—the whole or almost the whole of organized labor in this vicinity—vehemently declare that from these workers not a dollar shall go to the Red Cross until it stops a discrimination which it has not begun and never had any intention of beginning!

It would be impossible to invent a device less likely than this one to increase American sympathy with Sinn Fein aspirations or more likely to increase American antagonism to those aspirations.

The Red Cross and its officials are known and trusted in this country by a multitude in comparison with which even 300,000 people are a group small to the point of negligibility. The one appreciable effect on Red Cross finances of this most unwise and unjust assault will be that of increasing and enlarging the contributions of many more than 300,000 people. The best of all ways, for that matter, to express the indignation which the latest manifestation of Sinn Feinism in the United States has caused is to give $5 or $10 instead of $1 as the membership fee for 1921, thus increasing the efficiency of the American Red Cross in any part of the world—including Ireland, of course—where may arise one or another of the many emergencies, disasters and scarcities which it is the mission and duty of that great and beneficent organization to meet.

Following a Poor Precedent.

Mexico seems to have taken another leaf from a book—Germany's—from which it already has taken too many. That, at least, is the impression created by the announcement that unless the present Mexican Government gets from the United States immediate recognition, and just the sort of recognition it wants, on the terms it likes, then Mexico will turn Bolshevist.

The intended implication—the inference we are expected to draw—from this announcement is that the Bolshevizing of a next-door neighbor would be a terrible and expensive calamity for us and that, therefore, we'd better hurry up with a recognition carefully adjusted to Mexican taste. All this has been heard before. The argument was invented in Germany and used there innumerable times in the months following the armistice. Its futility as a means of coercion was learned at last by the Germans, and few if any of them are now threatening to cut off their own noses or to commit suicide—which turning Bolshevist is—merely to give pain to other people.

It is pleasing to note, and also reassuring, that not General OBREGON, but an unnamed official, is resorting to this ancient and discredited device. A real fighting man naturally would scorn to gain a point, even if he could, by a trick so humiliating, and Mexico's President-elect, one can believe as well as hope, is too intelligent to think that Mexico can be served or the United States scared in that way.

Harmless Though Hopeless.

There is nothing reprehensible in the new purpose announced by the irreconcilable opponents of woman suffrage. They say that they are going to agitate for a change in the Federal Constitution by which the power of passing upon proposed amendments will be taken from State Legislatures and given to the voting population, speaking directly by ballot or through a convention of delegates elected for that one purpose.

To do that would be all right in both law and morals. Whether or not it would be wise is another matter, as is the question as to the possibility of bringing about the suggested alteration in the Constitution. Unless experience should prove that women do not like to vote—of which there is no present indication in "pro" circles and not much even among the "anti"—it seems highly unlikely that franchise privileges in this country ever will be more restricted than at present.

Nowhere have such privileges, once gained, ever been either given up or taken away.

GRAFT IN BUILDING

Never Countenanced for a Moment by the Gotham National Bank.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An injustice has been done the Gotham National Bank of New York through the evident misunderstanding on the part of certain newspapers as to the testimony brought out before the Legislative Investigating Committee in regard to the present building scandal.

The interpretation of many readers has been to the effect that this bank was about to make payment to the Brindell group in order to avoid any interference with the progress of its new building and that the bank was saved from making such payment only by the intervention of the committee's investigation.

This is wholly contrary to the facts, as not only did the bank refrain from making the payment of a single dollar, but at no time did it contemplate making any payment whatsoever.

We held executive meetings to determine the most effective method of apprehending the guilty parties. The idea of making payment was not even momentarily considered. We had formulated a plan of procedure and had put it before the authorities through whom we hope to secure the conviction of those making illegal demands upon us. Our plan could not be brought to maturity, however, because the investigating committee's revelations prevented further approach by the miscreants.

Letters to the President.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There must be many thousands of devoted adherents of President Wilson who regretted that they were not able to join in the demonstration of loyalty to him made at Washington Nov. 4. We read of how he was brought in his wheeled chair to the east portico of the White House and sat in silence, watching the throng that gathered on the lawn to testify to their faith in the League of Nations and the great leader who for it has fought the good fight, even down to the gates of death.

Many other men and women the country over must long to find expression for their devotion to Mr. Wilson and his ideals. Would it not be a fitting and acceptable tribute if they would write brief letters to the President, assurances of fidelity to what he stands for and the ultimate triumph of his aims? These are dark and disheartening days when he must crave sympathy and affection and loyalty as never before. He is broken in health, cut off from companionship, lonely, uncomplaining, unconquered and unconquerable—a noble but a tragic figure. Will not the readers of THE TIMES who revere and honor him pay him their personal tribute, write to him what is in their hearts, let him know the affection and admiration which he has inspired in them? To give the proposal more definite shape I would suggest that the letters be sent as a Thanksgiving Day message.

AN UNDAUNTED IDEALIST.

New York, Nov. 9, 1920.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is reported in The Daily News of Oct. 28 that the Presidential candidate, Governor Cox, in speaking at Cincinnati, referred to the very regrettable death of the late Mayor of Cork as a "martyrdom which will enrage the English people." It would enrage us if we did not realize that he died by his own splendid, fanatical will instead of enduring his punishment for an act of treachery in very serious times, as these are, for Great Britain.

He was one of those planning for the dismemberment of the United Kingdom, and I would like to remind Governor Cox, through the medium of your columns, that the greatest of your Presidents, Lincoln himself, would not permit secession in the States. He loved the South as he did the North, as one King holds in affection every part of his empire. The "English people" would not think much of him if he let go his Irish people only to fall victims to another perhaps less generous power simply because Ireland is in an evil temper with everybody—herself included.

Moderates over here are thinking more and more of that safer principle of federation which gave liberty within the Union of American States. Is there no section of opinion in America that will lend the weight or its influences to that splendid ideal?

The Breakdown in Russia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

H. G. Wells in his article "Russia in the Shadow," published in your issue of the 7th, says that he does not believe that the spectacle of misery and ebbing energy which he has painted is the result of Bolshevism, but is caused by an unsound Government system that has worked itself out and fallen down. The soundness or merit of any form of government can only be measured by the material progress of its people, in education, in the improvement of social and physical conditions in which they live; in the growth of its cities, and in its transportation system, all of which improve the standards of living. While the improvements have been slower in Russia than in several other of the more progressive countries, yet it is well known that prior to the seizure of the Government, first by Kerensky and later by Lenin, Russia was growing in wealth, and that material welfare of its people was steadily improving. It would therefore be rather difficult for any one capable of sound reasoning to agree with Mr. Wells that the present breakdown in Russia is not caused by the vicious, unsound principles of Bolshevism.

HARDY CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

When roses are but memories
And phlox and golden glow
Stand blackened wraiths of flowers sweet,
A few short weeks ago—
A bed of gay chrysanthemums
Completes my garden show.

In lovely colors, yellow, white,
Deep pink and rusty-red,
Surrounded by the skeletons
Of comrades seared and dead,
These hardy posies bloom the more
Since Jack Frost visited!

And though November's graying days
Must cold and colder grow—
Already the wild geese have flown,
There's hint of coming snow—
Defiant, undisturbed and bright,
They flaunt them in a row.

It is as if the garden god,
Knowing the end is near,
Reserves his bravest servitors
To speed the closing year—
These little, gay chrysanthemums
Whose farewell note brings cheer!

CROWDED STATE HOSPITALS.

State Charities Aid Report Notes Serious Condition in New York Area.

The overcrowding in the hospitals in or near New York City is stated as follows: Brooklyn, 209; Central Islip, 1,227; King's Park, 683; Manhattan, 430.

Some progress has been made, however, during the past year, toward reducing this overcrowding. Appropriations for new construction at the State hospitals passed by the Legislature last year and approved by the Governor amounted to $3,676,000, and additional construction amounting to $1,461,750 was authorized. The chief new construction of State hospitals now in progress is at the Marcy Division of the Utica State Hospital, where the State owns about 1,000 acres of farm land and is developing what will virtually be a new State institution.

The report urges the necessity of a psychopathic hospital in New York City to care for the less serious cases of mental disorder and for patients who need hospital treatment only for short terms. Such a hospital would also serve as a teaching and research centre for New York State hospitals. The construction of such an institution was authorized in a bill passed by the last Legislature and approved by Governor Smith, but a site for it is still to be obtained. The report urges the obtaining of such a site as one of the most immediately necessary steps in the whole program for the proper care and treatment of the mentally sick in New York State, and especially New York City.

ALBANY, Nov. 14.—The thirteen State hospitals for the Insane are still overcrowded by more than 5,500 patients, or 18 per cent. above their capacity, according to the annual report of the State Charities Aid Association to the State Hospital Commission, made public today.

The total number of patients is now 35,845, but the institutions were built to accommodate only 30,324, and the congestion which results from making some sort of provision for the patients who necessarily must be taken in causes a serious situation in the hospitals, especially those in and near New York City.

SAILOR WINS ESSAY HONORS.

His Paper on "Leadership" Second in Atlantic Fleet Contest.

An enlisted man in the navy won honors in the Atlantic Fleet's prize contest on "Leadership," over two Captains, a Junior Lieutenant and an Ensign, according to an announcement here yesterday by the Navy Recruiting Bureau. The "gob" who received honorable mention among those "gold stripers" was Herman Earle Burt, Yeoman, first class, serving on the flagship Pennsylvania. The prize of $250 was won by Commander R. C. Parker of the battleship Kansas, with Yeoman Burt second.

Admiral H. B. Wilson, commanding the fleet, who offered the prize for the best essay on "Leadership," was delighted with the ability of the yeoman and praised him highly for his essay. It is probable that Yeoman Burt's essay, as well as Commander Parker's, will be printed and distributed through the navy.

Under the rules, the contestants were to write under pen name or motto so that identity or rank would not be disclosed until after the anonymous papers had been judged strictly on their merits. The essays were to be between 2,000 and 25,000 words in length and deal particularly with "a naval officer's qualifications for the leadership of enlisted men." The judges were Captain C. T. Vogelgesang, Chief of Staff of the Atlantic Fleet; Captain George C. Day of the Pennsylvania, and Captain T. R. Kurtz, Assistant Chief of Staff.

JEWS FIGHT PROSELYTIZING.

Unite to Block Presbyterians from Winning Hebrew Converts.

Leading Jews of America united yesterday, in protest against the announced proposal of the Presbyterian Church to undertake an evangelization campaign among the Jews of this city. Through the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, a national organization of Jewish synagogues, whose New York headquarters are at 24 East Twenty-first Street, they issued a statement, calling upon the Jews here and throughout the country to reply to the attempt to convert them, by strengthening their allegiance to their own religion and supporting its institutions more vigorously than ever before.

The fact that the Presbyterian Church has nearly $200,000 available for Jewish proselytizing while the Union is at present endeavoring to raise $3,500,000 in ten years for a fund for revival of Judaism among Jews, is stressed in the statement, made on behalf of the Union by J. Walter Freiberg of Cincinnati, President of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

PASTOR PRAISES HARDING.

Commends President-Elect for His Observance of Sunday.

President-elect Warren G. Harding was praised for his observance of Sunday by the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young, pastor of Bedford Presbyterian Church, in a sermon last evening. "Senator Harding has set an example much needed in high places by refraining from fishing and golfing and by strictly observing the Lord's Day," said Dr. Young. "Let us hope that this presages four years' omission from the White House of all unnecessary political conferences and other features of a Continental Sunday.

"If public officials only realized how deeply they offend the consciences of religious people by these overt violations of the Christan Sabbath, they would be careful on ground of expediency, if nothing else. No sensible man wants a return to the old 'blue law' Sunday, but keeping America on the right track is sufficient reason for fighting off the anything-for-dollars-and-pleasure Sunday we are fast coming to."

MIRACLE PLAY IN CHURCH.

Given to Celebrate Anglican Anniversary in Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—Christ Church, where George Washington and other leaders of Revolutionary days worshipped, was the scene today of the opening service of a series to celebrate the 225th anniversary of the Anglican Church in Pennsylvania.

The service was in the form of a miracle play entitled "Advance the Line," and was given under the auspices of the Episcopal Church of Pennsylvania, "in order to stimulate the interest of the people and to impress them with the worth and vitality of the cause of the Church."

The play will be given in churches throughout the country next Sunday at the opening of the nationwide campaign of the Episcopal Church.

SENATORS LOSE IMMUNITY.

Peruvian Chamber Authorizes Prosecution of Two Members.

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 13.—The Senate today by a vote of 17 to 2 deprived Senators Grau and Portello of their parliamentary immunity and authorized the Government to proceed against them on a charge of conspiracy to subvert public order. Garcia Lastres, former Minister of Finance, was liberated today.

Grau, Portello and Lastres were accused of being implicated in an alleged revolutionary plot, organized to have been carried out first on Oct. 29 and later on Nov. 10. The conspiracy was to have culminated in an attack on President Leguia during a dinner given in his honor last Wednesday night.

LEAGUE PLEAS MARK ARMISTICE SUNDAY

America Has Not Done Its Part to Reap Fruits of Victory, Rabbi Silverman Says.

CHAPLAIN KNOX'S APPEAL

Would Lift "Hope of World Co-operation Out of the Mire of Personal Pettiness."

Armistice services were held yesterday in scores of the city's churches and synagogues. Many clergymen drew a comparison between the event of Nov. 11, 1918, and the sailing of the Pilgrim fathers for America, the tercentenary of which is being celebrated.

Rabbi Joseph Silverman, preaching in the morning at Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, on "An Armistice Day for All Nations," said: "The world should be on guard because Armistice Day so far has not been a true Armistice Day." He said that America had not done her part.

Dr. Silverman said there should be a brotherhood of nations and that there should be an Armistice Day for both capital and labor and for antagonistic religions.

"It was a far cry," Dr. Silverman continued, "from the Nov. 11, 1620, six weeks before the Plymouth landing, that signalized that first compact against autocracy—political, social, intellectual—to the armistice signed Nov. 11, 1918, almost three hundred years later, in the forest of Compiegne. Yet it was a spiritual span, for the recovery of freedom in the one case was re-enacted in the articles signed in the other. Both agreements won the same emancipation. Joint observance of the tercentenary of the Pilgrims on Armistice Day had historical appropriateness.

Fruits of Victory Let Slip.

"But," he said, "the fruits of the victory have been let slip. The ground lost since 1620, one of the attending causes which produced the tragedy of August, 1914, is threatened with being lost again. Such a day depends upon a brotherhood of nations, and America's decision to stay out was anything but a victory. America desires peace—settlement of all war problems, reduction of national expenses, international co-operation, a peaceful substitute for war. Despite the incentive, it has rejected the League of Nations that seems to be equipped for realizing these great hopes.

"America has not done its part. We stood aside from crippled Europe like a selfish big brother who won't play because he can't have his own way.

"Our political campaign is over. Let us lay politics aside for duty. Armistice Day is as much our day as anybody's day. Armistice duties are as much our duties as anybody's duties. We cannot hold aloof. Isolation is impossible. The war proved no nation can escape international events."

Says People Want a League.

The day was observed by Columbia University with services in St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia, in the afternoon. The Rev. Dr. Raymond C. Knox, chaplain of Columbia, preached a sermon on "The Spirit of Victory." The Come-Back Club, composed of a group of wounded war veterans at Columbia, and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University, attended in a body.

In his sermon Chaplain Knox said that the desire for a plan for international co-operation is still strong in the American people. "The greatest task before us now," Chaplain Knox said, "is to see that this spirit comes to untrammeled utterance—and finds its perfect embodiment, that we lift this hope of world co-operation out of the mire of party partisanship and personal pettiness into a whole nation's purpose for justice and peace.

"We come to be dedicated, to consecrate ourselves by all that we hold sacred to that which was the highest aim and sustaining hope of those who suffered and fell—the birthright of a new day in which all nations shall dwell in peace and concord. To achieve this end everything depends on the spirit. We believe that the recent unmistakable manifestation of the people's will is that, though one plan for international co-operation is deemed inadequate, nevertheless, the desire, the determination and the spirit are there."

Debt to Latter-Day Pilgrims.

"Let us not forget the everlasting meaning of the imprint made by the Pilgrim Fathers on the sands of our Continent, that our blessed country shall always be a shelter for the poor and the persecuted," said the Rev. Marius Ranson, assistant rabbi of Temple Beth-El, Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street in a sermon on "The Birth and Purpose of American Democracy."

"Equally mindful let us be of our debt to our latter-day pilgrims, our soldier boys who fought and many of whom gave up their lives for the freedom of the world," said Mr. Ranson. "Nov. 11, sacred day! Three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims; second anniversary of the signing of the armistice. Our soldier dead are a challenge to our conscience. They bid us re-establish the right of free speech, the very foundation of democracy. They bid us ferret out the patrioteers and profiteers who have fattened on the miseries and sacrifices of true patriots. And, above all, they cry out to us to cleanse their souls of the crime of Haiti."

Fort Washington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of which Mrs. J. P. Marshall is Regent, held a service in St. Paul's Episcopal Chapel, Broadway and Fulton Street, in commemoration of the World War dead, and also in observance of the one hundred and forty-fourth anniversary of the Battle of Fort Washington.

A service in memory of the soldiers and sailors in the United States who died in the war was held in the morning in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The preacher was the Very Rev. George E. Myers, d

J. WERTHEIM DIES IN HIS 62D YEAR

ILL FOR SEVERAL MONTHS

Took an Active Part in War Savings Campaign After His Retirement in 1913.

Jacob Wertheim, for many years one of New York City's foremost Jews, died at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning at his home, 182 West Fifty-eighth Street, in his sixty-second year. Mr. Wertheim had been ill for several months. He would have been 62 years old tomorrow. He retired from business in 1913, but continued to take an active part in many charities, notably, the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies and the Joint Distribution Committee.

Mr. Wertheim from a humble beginning became the head of the largest independent cigar manufacturing concern in this country. He also had an active share in the development of the automotive industry, and at one time was a Director of the General Motors Corporation.

He was born in Hartford, Conn., the son of Baruch and Henrietta Wertheim, both of whom emigrated from Germany in 1850. His father soon after his birth became a hide merchant in New York City. Jacob attended the public schools of this city and when 14 years old started out to make his own way in life. He cast about for several years to find the occupation which suited him best, leaving one job after another as unsuitable. Friends yesterday related that at the end of a trip across the continent Mr. Wertheim found himself in San Francisco with but $25 in his pocket.

After working there for a short time he returned and opened a tiny cigar store at Third Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street with his brother, Solomon, who later succeeded his father as a dealer in hides. Jacob made the cigars which were sold in the little shop. Then additional workers were employed, and in due time he formed a partnership with the late Walter A. Schiffer. Soon he effected a series of consolidations, the first of which was the bringing in of the firm of Kerbs & Spies on Jan. 1, 1889, forming the firm of Kerbs, Wertheim & Schiffer.

Founded Big Cigar Firm.

Mr. Wertheim was the salesman and head of the firm, disposing of the output. Mr. Kerbs was the factory manager and tobacco buyer, Shiffer the bookkeeper and accountant. The business grew rapidly, and in 1902 Kerbs, Wertheim & Schiffer, Straiten & Storm, Lichtenstein Bros., and Hirschhorn, Mack & Co. consolidated under the name of the United Cigar Manufacturers. In 1906 the company reorganized under the name of the United Cigar Manufacturers Company with a capital of $20,000,000. This concern exists today as the General Cigar Company, the largest independent manufacturing concern.

Many efforts were made by the American Tobacco Company to absorb the powerful and independent company of which Mr. Wertheim was President. He, however, counseled his directors and stockholders against such a move, and a consolidation with the so-called tobacco trust was never carried out, although relations between the two companies were at all times friendly.

Mr. Wertheim retired as President of the United Cigar Manufacturers' Company in 1913, and three years later was elected the first President of the Tobacco Merchants' Association, a national trade organization. After a year Mr. Wertheim resigned, announcing that he wished to devote his entire time to charitable work and the development of profit-sharing plans between employers and employes with the idea of establishing a general profit-sharing system. He contributed articles on this subject to newspapers in this city.

He criticised Henry Ford's profit-sharing method, announcing that he had evolved a plan which had all the good points of the Ford plan with none of the features which provoked criticism. In brief, Mr. Wertheim would not only pay good wages to employes, including those who do the manual labor and the salaried men of every grade from President down to office boy. But he insisted upon a fair return upon the capital employed, which, he estimated, in an industrial business, to be about 7 per cent. The rest of the profits he would cause to be divided into two parts, proportionate to the value of the labor in the business as compared with the capital invested. In some lines, he believed, labor counted more in making profits than in others. The labor dividend, he suggested, should be divided among the workmen and all the salaried officials and other persons employed by the company in proportion to the yearly wage or salary of each.

Active in Jewish Charities.

Mr. Wertheim was one of the founders of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, of which Felix M. Warburg is president, founded several years ago to combine under one head all Jewish charitable enterprises in this city. Mr. Wertheim was not only a large contributor to Jewish charities through this organization but he was influential in obtaining other contributors and took an active part, as long as his health permitted, in the councils of the Federation. He also was a large contributor to the Joint Distribution Committee for the relief of suffering Jews in war-stricken Europe.

During the war Mr. Wertheim introduced a plan to stimulate a competitive spirit among school children in the sale of War Savings Stamps. He donated $5,000 to stimulate the interest of the public school children in the sale of stamps through prizes awarded to the elementary and high schools. Through this plan the children of New York raised several million dollars for America's war chest.

When the Liberty bond campaigns, the Red Cross and other war drives were begun Mr. Wertheim suggested several plans which yielded huge sums. He was probably the first to put in operation the auction plan of raising funds, through which each person who bid upon an article paid the amount that his bid exceeded the previous bid. This method found especial favor with directors of war drives in the theatres.

Mr. Wertheim was a Director of the Executive Committee of the Underwood Typewriter Company and a Director of several large real estate concerns. For some time after his retirement in 1913 he remained as a Director of the General Cigar Company. He was a Director and Trustee of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies; Director of the United Hebrew Charities. He had been a Director of the Hebrew Technical School for Girls, being succeeded in this office by his wife. He also was a Director of the Joint Distribution Committee.

His clubs were the Harmonie, Criterion, Hollywood Golf Club, the North Shore Country Club, the Asbury Park Fishing Club and the Morse's Point Gunning Club of Norfolk, Va. He was elected president of the Tuna Club of New Jersey after he had caught the largest tuna ever captured with rod and line on the Atlantic seaboard. The fish weighed 286 pounds and was caught at Seabright, N. J.

Mr. Wertheim is survived by his wife, two sons, Maurice Wertheim, member of the firm of Hallgarten & Co., bankers; Albert Wertheim, with the Tradesmen's National Bank of Philadelphia, and three daughters, Mrs. Abraham Bijur, Miss Diana Hunt Stern Wertheim and Viola Stern Wertheim.

The funeral services will be held at Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Judah L. Magnes, long a close friend of Mr. Wertheim, will officiate, with Dr. Joseph Silverman, Rabbi of Temple Emanu-El.

NO WORD OF MISSING PASTOR

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 14.—No word was received today from the Rev. Cornelius Densel, pastor of the Netherland Reformed Church of this city, who disappeared Friday afternoon after dropping his resignation into a mail box. The parents of Miss Trina Hannenberg, a choir singer in the same church, who has been missing since Friday, said today they had had no word from their daughter.

Mrs. Densel, wife of the pastor, and her eight children, attended both services of the church today, sitting near the family of Miss Hannenberg, with whom she was seen conversing after the benedictions. John Rose, a presiding elder, filled the pulpit at the morning service and Cornelius Vander Hoven at the afternoon meeting. Both men made a simple announcement that the pastor had resigned and urged the members of the congregation not to prejudge his case.

'PICTURE NIGHT' AT FRIARS.

Audience Overflows at Club's Annual Entertainment.

More than 1,000 Friars and their guests attended the second annual "Motion Picture Night" of that organization in the Friars' Clubhouse in Forty-eighth Street last night, and several hundred persons were turned away. S. L. Rotapfel, director of the Capitol Theatre and a pioneer motion picture exhibitor in New York, was the guest of honor, and addresses were made by Roscoe Arbuckle, Arthur S. Friend, Frand Sheridan, Pearl White, Daniel Carson Goodman, Alan Brooks, Taylor Holmes, Victor Herbert, Raymond Hitchcock, Thomas J. Gray, Whitman Bennett, and others. John J. Gleason, Abbot of the Friars, presided.

Whitman Bennett, tracing the rise of motion pictures, said that Lee Shubert, at the opening of the Strand Theatre some years ago, had predicted the house would soon become a home of musical comedy.

H. A. JONES BRINGS PLAYS.

English Playwright Here to Arrange Screen Productions.

Henry Arthur Jones, the English playwright who arrived from England yesterday on the Imperator, on his first visit to America since 1915, said he had to see Jesse Lasky who, he added, had the American rights to his latest unnamed finished play as well as the film rights. Mr. Jones will also show a nearly completed play written entirely for screen production.

Mr. Jones said that the time was not favorable for serious dramatic thought in England and it was not possible to find the right theatres in London now for those kind of plays. "For the time," he added, "I am much more interested in films than in the regular theatre. There is also possible great development for the film play."

Theatre Assembly Opens Friday.

The Theatre Assembly, of which Mrs. J. Christopher Marks is President, will hold its first Social Day of the season on Friday, Nov. 19, at the Astor, in the grand ballroom. The program includes an act from "Because of Helen," and artists from the "Florodora" company and the "Pitter Patter" company will appear. Kitty Rachman will do an Indian dance, and there will be a fashion show. The "Because of Helen" act will begin at 2 o'clock.

MARC KLAW PLANS TWO NEW THEATRES

Buys Astor Estate Plot in 46th St. West of Broadway and Will Erect Office Building.

Largest Sale in Times Square District Recently — Home for Music Publishers.

Marc Klaw, President of Marc Klaw, Incorporated, theatrical producers, has signed contracts for the purchase from the Astor estate through the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, of a plot of land 225 by 100 feet on the south side of West Forty-sixth Street, between Broadway and Eighth Avenue, and will erect on it two new theatres and an office building. The purchase was said to involve the largest plot of land recently sold in the Times Square district.

The construction of the two new theatres, in addition to a theatre now under construction for Mr. Klaw in West Forty-fifth Street, will give the latter four new legitimate theatres. Approximately $2,225,000 was said to be involved in the purchase of the land and buildings now on it and in the construction contracts for the new buildings, for which plans have already been drawn by Eugene de Rosa.

The plot is now occupied by thirteen brownstone business buildings, numbered from 226 to 250 West Forty-sixth Street, which house a number of music publishing firms. It is expected that the proposed office building, which will be twelve stories in height, will be tenanted largely by the music publishing trades.

The two theatres, which will seat 1,200 each, will be built together and will present one continuous front, over which there will be a roof garden seating 1,500. A large hall, seating 1,000, will run the length of the plot under the building.

The front of the combined theatre building will be constructed of limestone with pylons at each end and a classic colonnade of twenty columns. The roof garden will be set back from the front of the building and a promenade balcony, extending across the entire front, will be used for garden effects. The interior of one of the theatres will have furnishings and decorations of the Louis XVI. period, and the interior of the other will be treated in the Colonial style.

Mr. Klaw is part owner of the New Amsterdam and Liberty Theatres and has interests in theatres in several other cities. Upon his return from Europe late this Summer, he announced the formation of Marc Klaw, Inc., in association with his two sons, Alonzo and Joseph Klaw. "French Leave" at the Belmont Theatre in this city and "Sonya" at the Princess Theatre in Chicago are his productions.

"EQUITY SHOP" FORECAST.

Actors Meeting Shows Strong Sentiment for the Movement.

The adoption of the so-called Equity shop was definitely forecast yesterday at a meeting of the Actors' Equity Association at the Hotel Astor. The Equity shop, the enforcement of which would mean that Equity actors would not appear on the same stage with non-Equity members, has been advocated by a majority of the Equity officials for some time, and a poll of the members of the organization will be taken within the next month to determine more fully the attitude of the organization. About 1,800 actors attended yesterday's meeting, and there were only a few scattering dissenters when a vote on the question was taken.

Even if the referendum indicates a strong demand for the Equity shop, as now seems likely, it cannot be enforced against the Producing Managers' Association until August, 1924, as the agreement made after the strike of last year specifically provides against such a contingency.

It is generally recognized that the Equity shop would be in a sense a challenge to the managers and that it could be enforced only with great difficulty. Theatrical companies, under the Equity shop, would either be composed entirely of Equity members or entirely of Fidelity members, and the huge membership of the Equity, now nearly 10,000, would make it a matter of great difficulty to recruit an all-Fidelity company. In the meantime the Equity shop might be declared against the Touring Managers' Association, composed of one-night-stand managers and producers of the cheaper-priced attractions.

LIGHT OPERA AT BELMONT.

French Company to Give 15 Sunday Evening Performances.

The Belmont Theatre, which was the home of the Théâtre Français company last season, will be the scene of fifteen Sunday evening performances in French this season under the auspices of the Cercle d'Art Français. French opera comique and light musical pieces will make up the program, and the theatre will be open only to subscribing members. The company, which includes fifteen principals and thirty-two chorus, has been assembled in Paris and will arrive this week. The first performance will be given on Dec. 28.

The répertoire for the fifteen weeks will include "Josephine Vendue par ses Soeurs" (the opening bill), "La Mascotte," "Miss Helyett," "Le Grand Mogul," "Les Saltimbanques," "La Fille de Mme. Angot" and others. The season will be under the direction of Theodore Stucky and Armand Robi.

Subscriptions are now being received at the Belmont Theatre and at the office of the Cercle d'Art Français, 341 West Forty-seventh Street.

Sarg's Marionettes to Return.

Tony Sarg's marionettes, which have been seen here upon several occasions, will return to the Punch and Judy Theatre for a series of matinees beginning Dec. 13. They will be seen in an adaptation of "Rip Van Winkle." Thirteen performances will be given between Dec. 13 and 25th.

MUSIC NOTES.

Viola Waterhouse Bates, soprano, will give a song recital on Thursday afternoon at the Princess Theatre, assisted at the piano by Frank Bibb.

The Southland Singers will give an afternoon musicale on Saturday at the Horel Plaza under the direction of Leroy Tebbs.

The Brooklyn Oratorio Society and the Musurgia Club will assist in a Pilgrim tercentenary program on Dec. 20 at the Brooklyn Academy.

Thomas A. Edison has given a $500 prize for research in "Effects of Music," to be awarded by the American Psychological Association next June.

S. Hurok of this city and A. Strok of Shanghai, China, have jointly arranged for tours of Schumann-Heink, Elman and others to the Far East next year.

JAPANESE PREMIER PREDICTS SETTLEMENT

Declares His Belief That Most Americans Disapprove California Action.

TOKIO, Nov. 14.—Premier Hara, addressing 5,000 of his supporters at Maebashi today, said that no question had been more keenly watched than the anti-Japanese legislation in California. He declared that it would be regrettable if the question affected the good relations of Japan and the United States, but that a conflict was unthinkable.

Intelligent people in both countries valued each other's friendship too much for that, the Premier asserted, and the United States never yet had disregarded Japan's rights and interests, no matter what questions arose between the two countries.

A friendly solution of the problem was possible, Premier Hara said, and he asserted the belief that a majority of Americans did not endorse California's recent action. The Premier expressed confidence that the Washington negotiations would result in a satisfactory settlement.

NO BASES IN MANDATE ISLES

Official Denial Made That Japan Is Fortifying in the Pacific.

TOKIO, Nov. 13.—Captain Nomura, aid to the Minister of the Navy, speaking in the name of the Minister today, said that every report that Japan was fortifying or planning to fortify and establish bases in the mandated Pacific islands was wholly false.

Japan, he declared, was living up strictly to every mandate under the terms of the League of Nations covenant.

MANNING DEFENDS BRITISH.

Canon Burroughs of England Preaches at Trinity Armistice Service

The Rev. Canon E. A. Burroughs, fellow and chaplain of Trinity College, Oxford, England, and canon residentiary of Peterborough Cathedral, England, preached yesterday morning in Trinity Church at the service commemorating Armistice Day and the men who died in service during the World War.

Canon Burroughs saw active service in France in 1915, and contributed a series of letters to the press during the war. He is honorary chaplain to the men of the Naval Division. Some of his books are "The Valley of Decision," "A Faith for the Firing Line," "The Fight for the Future" and "World Builders All."

The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity, before introducing Canon Burroughs, took occasion to condemn what he said was an attempt at anti-British agitation in this country. He spoke from the chancel, the rail of which was decorated with flags of the Allies, while the American and British emblems occupied the place of honor.

"Today, in accordance with the request of the President of the United States, we are calling to mind the lessons of the most terrible and destructive of all wars," said Dr. Manning, "and we are remembering especially in our prayers those who gave their lives in the fearful struggle.

"We do not forget, and we do not intend to forget, what we owed during those years to Britain's gallant fleet, and to her heroic and hard-pressed armies. But for what they did our situation at this moment would have been a very different one.

"We cannot too strongly or fearlessly condemn any effort from any source to destroy or disturb the fellowship between ourselves and those who fought with us for right and freedom, and the American people, patient as they are, will not allow any such effort among us to succeed."

After the service Dr. Manning said that he did not wish it understood that he felt no sympathy for the people in Ireland. "I sympathize with them as do the good people of England, as well as here," he said. "The problem is one that should be righteously solved, but we should not permit any person or persons to drag us into it."

10,000-TON SHIP LAUNCHED.

Tenth Freighter Built by Federal Co. for Steel Products Co.

The steamship Steel Inventor, launched by the Federal Shipbuilding Company at its yard in Kearny, N. J., Saturday, is the tenth 10,000-ton freighter which the Federa has launched this year for the United States Steel Products Company. She is a twelve-knot ship and will be used in the Atlantic and Pacific coast service of the Isthmian Steamship Lines. The launching was attended by about 150 members of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, who had just held their annual meeting in New York, and who were the guests of the shipyard during the day.

SUBWAY TRAIN KILLS MAN.

Motorman Applies Emergency Brakes but Fails to Avert Tragedy.

Olin Fisher, a longshoreman of 57 Whitehall Street, died at 11 o'clock last night in Harlem Hospital after he had been taken there fro the subway station at 135th Street and Lenox Avenue, where he was struck by a southbound express.

According to waiting passengers, Fisher was standing close to the edge of the platform and, raising his arms as if dizzy, fell onto the tracks just before the train came into the station. Joseph Manny, the motorman, saw Fisher fall and applied the emergency brakes, but was unable to stop the train before the first car struck him.

SAMUEL H. WHEELER DIES.

Was Former President of Sewing Machine Company.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 14.—Samuel H. Wheeler, one of Connecticut's wealthiest citizens and former President of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine Company, died today in Chicago, according to word received at his home in Fairfield tonight. He had been visiting friends in Chicago and was taken ill two weeks ago.

Mr. Wheeler was born in Watertown, Conn., seventy-five years ago. In 1804 he joined in establishing the Wheeler and Wilson company, of which he was President for eleven years. He was a Director of the Connecticut National Bank of this city. In 1876 Mr. Wheeler married Miss Amelia Vernon Rumsey of Chicago. She died six days later. In 1884 he married her sister, Elizabeth, who survives him. He also leaves two daughters and a son. The funeral will be from the Wheeler home in Fairfield.

The Rev. James H. Flood.

The Rev. James H. Flood, moderator of the Young Men's Holy Rosary Lyceum, and for the last twelve years an assistant pastor of the Church of the Holy Rosary at 444 East 119th Street, died suddenly yesterday afternoon in the rectory of his church. He was born in Newport, R. I., fifty-four years ago, was educated at Holy Cross College and St. Joseph's Seminary and entered the priesthood in 1905.

Kindergarten Rummage Sale.

A rummage sale for the benefit of the Ann Brown Free Kindergarten, 48 Henry Street, will be held every day this week from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. at 351 Lexington Avenue, where contributions will be received and appreciated. Mrs. Sterling Beardsley, Mrs. Daniel Manning, Mrs. William Gould, Mrs. Austin K. Bird and others are on the committee in charge.

WILLIAM G. CHOATE 90 YEARS OLD, DIES

RANKED BROTHER IN SCHOOL

Served as Judge in the United States District Court Here from 1878 to 1881.

William Gardner Choate, elder brother of the late Joseph Hodges Choate, died at 7 o'clock last night at his home in Wallingford, Conn., at the age of 90. He had been in failing health for several months, and although he had been up and about recently during the warmer weather, his death was not unexpected owing to his advanced age. With him last night were his wife, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Calvin Goddard of Wallingford; his brother-in-law, Dr. C. H. Atwater of Wallingford, and Miss Helen Choate Pitman, who had been a member of the household for many years.

Mr. Choate was born in Salem, Mass., Aug. 30, 1830, the son of George and Margaret Manning (Hodges) Choate. The family on both sides was long prominent in the history of New England, including among other names that of Rufus Choate, the lawyer and orator, who was a cousin of George Choate. On leaving the public schools of Salem, William Gardner Choate and his brother, Joseph, entered Harvard with the class of 1852. On their graduation the future Ambassador to the Court of St. James and leader of the American Bar had to be content with fourth place in the scholarship ranking, while his brother, William, stood at the top of the list.

The two brothers then entered the Hardvard Law School together and both received their degrees of LL. B. in 1854. William Choate came to this city and began his career of more than half a century at the New York bar in 1856. Although he never attained the prominence of his brother, he was for many years a leading lawyer with a large practice. His firm was Choate, Larocque & Mitchell, with offices at 40 Wall Street. Of recent years he had retired from active participation in the work of the firm.

He was usually referred to as Judge Choate, for he had been from 1878 to 1881 a United States District Judge of the Southern District of New York.

DR. HOSKINS DIES IN SYRIA.

Presbyterian Worker's Health Broke Down in the War.

A cable message yesterday from Beirut, Syria, stated that the Rev. Dr. Franklin Evans Hoskins of the Presbyterian Mission, Syria, died last Friday, after a few hours' illness. The message was received by Dr. Harold B. Hoskins, a son, 60 Federal Street, Boston, Mass.

Dr. Hoskins was born at Rochdale, Pa., sixty-two years ago. His work in Syria had centred around literary and educational work. Only recently Dr. Hoskins completed a six years' task of putting a new set of references on the Arabic Bible. He was the author of several books on the Near East, including "The Jordan Valley and Petra" in collaboration with Professor William Libbey of Princeton, and "From the Nile to Nebo," a discussion of the route of the Children of Israel from Egypt to the Holy Land.

During the war Dr. Hoskins worked among the allied prisoners of war. This resulted in breaking down his health, and he returned to this country, but later went back to resume relief work in Beirut.

The Biggest News for Women since the Sewing Machine was Invented

The sewing machine made home-sewing practical for thousands of women who had not the time or the patience to sew by hand.

Then came paper patterns, and now McCall's Magazine—a magazine which believes in really doing things for women—offers to all women, everywhere, the New McCall Pattern — the pattern that is printed.

This new Pattern, with directions printed in clear black type on each piece, marks the first real innovation in the manufacture of paper patterns in over fifty years.

With the New McCall Pattern, any woman can make clothes for herself that are stylish and well-fitting. She can practice the important economy of home-dressmaking—an economy which means a greater saving today than it has ever meant before.

The women on McCall Street—the visioned street on which are 1,500,000 homes in which McCall's is read every month—know the style-authority and style-promptness of McCall Fashions.

To the women of McCall Street, and to all other women, McCall's now presents this Pattern with the Puzzle Taken Out—the pattern destined to make home-dressmaking practical in every household.

The women of McCall Street have learned that they can put their faith in McCall's—in its fiction, its fashions, its household articles, its advertisements. Their buying power is $200,000,000 a month.

CITY TO BE ASKED TO HUNT GRAFTERS

Untermyer Will Submit List of Hettrick School Contractors Today.

SUM INVOLVED $1,876,135

Backer's Counsel to Attack Legality of Lockwood Committee —Zaranko Appeals to Gompers.

UNION DEMANDS DECISION

Housewreckers' Chief Wants Federation to Put an End to Brindell's Persecution.

Plans will be made this morning at the meeting in the City Hall between the Lockwood Committee and the Board of Estimate to safeguard the city for work under contract and to arrange for an investigation of all contracts under suspicion.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel to the committee, will submit to the Board of Estimate part of a preliminary list of contracts which he will suggest be made the subject of inquiry by the city. The contracts call for the expenditure of $1,445,336 on plumbing, drainage, and heating and ventilating apparatus in the city's new schools. Other lists will be submitted from time to time.

An appropriation of $2,062,500 was made on Dec. 30, 1918, for heating, ventilating, plumbing, sanitary appliances and electrical equipment for the new schools. Up to Dec. 6, 1919, contracts for the expenditure of $1,876,139 of the appropriation had been entered into by the city, of which sum $575,100 has been paid.

Most of the contractors whose names figure in the list to be submitted to the Board of Estimate today are or formerly were members of John T. Hettrick's "Code of Practice," it was said.

Names of the Contractors.

The amounts of the contracts and names of the contractors follow:

Following the session of the Lockwood committee and the Board of Estimate, Mr. Untermyer will appear before Judge Joseph F. Mulqueen in General Sessions and oppose the motion of Edmund L. Mooney to dismiss the indictment for perjury against George S. Backer, a builder. Counsel for Backer maintain that dismissal should be granted on the ground that the Legislature's life is ended because it has adjourned and will not meet again. Mr. Untermyer will argue that the committee is empowered to continue its investigation to the end of the year. If the motion to dismiss is granted, it was said that it would be tantamount to bringing the Lockwood committee's work to an abrupt end.

Kenneth Spence of 65 Wall Street has been added to the criminal department of the Lockwood committee, and will work in conjunction with Emory R. Buckner, Robert Johnstone and Stanley Richter. Mr. Spence was formerly an Assistant United States District Attorney.

Zaranko Appeals to Gompers.

A demand for a decision from the American Federation of Labor in regard to the dispute between the House Wreckers' Union, affiliated with the Federation, and Robert P. Brindell's "dual" union of house wreckers was made yesterday by William Zaranko, head of the former organization, in a letter to Samuel Gompers. Mr. Zaranko called for "the riddance from the labor movement of the whole dirty crew that have been a constant mockery to our ideals and aims." His letter went on to say:

"The exposure of Mr. Brindell has brought little relief to our local, whose members have been waging a seemingly hopeless fight for the last six months. In fact, reports received at our office from our members indicate that Brindell's persecution of our workers has been intensified and perhaps our local made to bear the burden of the grafting which has been revealed by the investigation. So brutal has the persecution of our members become that an established New York newspaper with a reputation for reliability has laid to the desperation caused by Brindell's drive against the local, responsibility for the Wall Street explosion.

"In a recent speech in New York City you evidenced a realization of the need for excluding corruption from the labor movement. That corruption has run rampant in the Building Trades Council of New York is no longer disputable. Mr. Brindell and his Building Trades Council have been consistent in betraying a hearty contempt for the rights and obligations involved in membership in the American Federation of Labor.

"Mr. Brindell has on occasions too numerous to mention refused to respect the constitution of the American Federation of Labor. The riddance from the labor movement of the whole dirty crew that have been a constant mockery to our ideals and aims is now within your reach, and at least 1,800 house wreckers will then be rendered justice and delivered from the severest despotism that has ever plagued union men in New York City.

"We trust that our appeal will be heeded and that the A. F. of L. will take immediate steps to enforce our jurisdiction over the demolition industry which the Federation and its constituent bodies repeatedly granted to us."

Alexander's Marriage Valid; Widow Soon to Be a Mother

ATHENS, Nov. 12.—The late King Alexander's marriage with Aspasia Manos was declared valid by the court here today, which dismissed the opposition of ex-King Constantine and ordered the seals on the apartments of the late monarch broken. Mme. Manos will inherit Alexander's personal property.

Mme. Manos, it is expected, will become a mother in December. By the court's decision the child will be legitimate, and the National Assembly would now have the right to declare it, if a male, heir to the throne by decreeing the widow to have been of equal station with her husband.

VENIZELOS CLAIMS ELECTORAL VICTORY

DEFINITE NEWS DUE TONIGHT

Premier's Party Needs at Least 250 Seats to Crush the Constantinists.

ATHENS, Nov. 15 (Associated Press).—Premier Venizelos announces that his party has obtained a majority in the elections held today throughout Greece.

Demetrios Gounaris, former Premier and leader of the opposition, who was the opponent of Premier Venizelos in the balloting, was the candidate of the elements desiring the return of Constantine. M. Venizelos, on the other hand, is unalterably opposed to the return of the fallen monarch.

The results of the election will not be known until Monday night, as there is the army vote in Smyrna and other distant points to be taken into consideration. It is expected that the soldiers will support Venizelos.

Before the balloting the Venizelists declared themselves confident of victory. They claimed the certain return of 150 Deputies, but they need 250 or more to overwhelm the Royalists and demonstrate fully that the country indorses the past four years' policy. The Premier's party looks for a big majority in Attica and other parts of Old Greece and also in Thessaly and Crete, and assert that there will be a close vote in Constantine's stronghold, the Peloponnesus, pointing out that after the Premier's speech at Patras, Gounaris postponed his trip to Saloniki in order to undo as far as possible Venizelos's work there.

Summing up the forecasts brought to him in his modest home next door to the American Legation, the Premier said confidently:

"The vote will show the definite determination of the people to realize their destiny and hold their place as a civilizing factor in the Near East."

DEAD KING HONORED HERE.

Diplomatists Attend Mass for Alexander at Hellenic Church.

Diplomatic officials from four foreign countries and leading Greek and American men of affairs paid their respects to the memory of King Alexander of Greece at a solemn mass in the Hellenic Eastern Orthodox Church on East Seventy-second Street yesterday noon. The participants knelt before a cenotaph representing the dead King's bier, and the Greek Minister at Washington, Michael Tsamados, was present in uniform to receive the condolences of those attending the requiem service.

Those present included Maurice Casenave, French Minister; Gaston Liebert, French Consul General; H. Gloster Armstrong, British Consul General; Helio Lobo, Consul General of Brazil; Theodore Papayannopulos, acting Consul General of Greece; Commander de Carvalho of the Brazilian battleship Minas Geraes; representatives of the United States Army and Navy, and the following directors of the American-Hellenic Society, which held the services: Barton Hepburn, James M. Beck, Charles S. Miller, Alton B. Parker and Professor Carroll N. Brown. The Greek Trade Commissioner, C. Travlos, and Americans belonging to royal Greek orders of knighthood also attended. The mass was conducted by the Rev. Courcouilas, minister of the church.

BRITISH BLOCKADE THE BLACK SEA COAST

Turks Order Georgia to Give Up Batum, and Greeks to Quit Samsun.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 12.—The Georgian Government is reported to have received an ultimatum from the Turkish Nationalists ordering them to evacuate Batum.

The Armenian High Command says the Armenians were compelled to sign the temporary armistice now in effect between them and the Turkish Nationalists because of the necessity of withdrawing their forces from Alexandropol in order to put down an uprising of Tartar rebels.

The entire Greek population of Samsun, Vilayet of Trebizond, Asiatic Turkey, is have been ordered to leave town within a week. The Greeks number 300. The Turkish Nationalists have declared the holdings of the Greeks to be state property. Greek shops have been sealed by the local authorities.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A blockade of the Russian Black Sea coast has been declared, according to the Constantinople correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

British destroyers have begun patrolling the sea to prevent the Bolsheviki from communicating with the Turkish coasts.

ROBBED, PLAYS DETECTIVE.

Traveling Salesman Causes Arrest of Another After Ten Days' Search.

On the complaint of Charles E. McGeorge, a traveling salesman, of Richmond, Va., who says the defendant and another man about a fortnight ago robbed him of a ring worth $1,200 and a $200 stickpin, another traveling salesman, who said he was Harry Parker, 21 years old, was held by Magistrate Raphael Tobias in Yorkville Court yesterday in $10,000 bail for examination Thursday.

McGeorge said he arrived in New York on the day of the robbery, and striking an acquaintance with Parker went sightseeing with him. He said they later met a man supposed to be a friend of Parker, and at Fifty-fourth Street and Madison Avenue the "friend" took McGeorge's diamond ring and Parker took his pin.

McGeorge said he walked the streets for ten days searching for the men. Last night he saw Parker in the smoking room of a hotel near the Pennsylvania Station and caused his arrest.

PHOTOGRAPHS SENT 1,000 MILES BY WIRE

Four Pictures Telegraphed Between New York and St. Louis in Eight Minutes.

TEST OF NEW INVENTION

Demonstration of the Teleostereograph by World and Post-Dispatch Witnessed by Scientists.

The first American demonstration of the teleostereograph, the invention of Edouard Belin of Paris, which telegraphs photographs, was held yesterday, when four photographs were wired between this city and St. Louis. Each of the pictures went the 1,000 mile route in about eight minutes, the negatives being reproduced with distinctness.

The tests were between the office of The World and the editorial rooms of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and were conducted by Mr. Belin, who came to New York at the invitation of Ralph Pulitzer of The World.

"The instrument has demonstrated its efficiency and utility," said Mr. Pulitzer after the experiment, "and I am quite satisfied with the tests."

"Do you intend to introduce the teleostereograph into your offices?" he was asked.

"Well, I am hoping to," he said, "but, of course, it hasn't quite reached the practical stage yet."

About seventy-five scientists, wire experts and newspapermen gathered in Room 1101 of the World Building to witness the trial late yesterday afternoon. Mr. Belin and several assistants had the intrument all set up and special wires between this city and St. Louis were rigged and waiting for the tuning-up process which perfectly synchronized the machines in the West and East.

FIRST PHOTOGRAPH SENT BY TELEGRAPH.

This is the picture as reproduced at this end of the wire.

Instrument Is Described.

Before the tests were begun, Arthur Benington briefly described the instrument and its workings, basing his informal talk on an article descriptive of the teleostereograph which Austin C. Lescarboura contributed to the current issue of The Scientific American.

"The transmission," said Mr. Benington, "is simply a matter of preparing a bas-relief of the photograph, and then tracing that bas relief with a stylus connected to a telephone transmitter. The latter varies the current flowing over the wire in accordance with the relative height of any point of the bas-relief record at any given moment. At the receiving end this current variation is translated into various gradations of light."

"The first step, then, is to prepare the transmitting record or plate. A copper cylinder forms the base of the record (which, incidentally, is of the size and appearance of the old-fashioned phonograph records), and its surface is coated with a 5 per cent. shellac solution. Meanwhile a carbon print is made in the conventional photographic manner from the photographic negative to be transmitted, after which the print is wrapped face to face with the shellacked copper cylinder.

"The cylinder with the print is then placed in hot water, with the result that the gelatine of the print adheres to the cylinder in accordance with its own degree of blackness, while the unexposed gelatine is washed away with the paper. In this manner a coating of uneven thickness is formed on the cylinder, or a photograph in bas-relief."

View of Yale-Princeton Game.

One of the photographs sent from this city to St. Louis yesterday was a view of the Yale-Princeton game of Saturday, a scrimmage near Yale's line, and the second was an airplane picture of the East River skyline, showing Brooklyn Bridge.

After Mr. Belin had got his machine synchronized, Ralph Pulitzer wrote a message to be the first thing over the instruments. It was to his brother, Joseph Pulitzer, of the St. Louis newspaper, and read:

"Joseph Pulitzer, Post-Dispatch, St. Louis:

"Greetings from The New York World to The Post-Dispatch of St. Louis.

"RALPH PULITZER."

The message was written on specially prepared paper and was penned by Mr. Pulitzer in red ink, made thick so it would cause the broad-pointed stub nibbed pen literally to emboss the words. After some delay, due to a slight hitch in the apparatus, the message was sent. Then the picture of the Princeton victory went over the wires.

The first photograph bound East came through in good style and was hurried upstairs to the developing room, where the process is the ordinary developing scheme. Wired photographs can be turned out in seconds, if necessary. Somehow, the photograph was ripped and cast aside. On a call, St. Louis shot along another, and this, when developed, was a remarkably fine photograph of an Indian chief with a warpath headdress on and a look that showed somebody had just tipped him off to the fact that Anheuser-Busch was no more.

The photograph that failed to fare well in the hands of the developers was a picture of a Mississippi River steamboat. The last picture to go from this end was the Manhattan skyline view and, according to Mr. Benington, it went through well.

Clay Portrait Said to Be Oldest Made; Ibi-Sin's Features on Stamp of About 2300 B.C.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—What is believed to be the oldest portrait of a human being has been discovered in the University of Pennsylvania Museum collection of clay tablets from Babylonia, according to an announcement tonight by Dr. Leon Lagrain, curator of the Babylonian section.

The portrait is on a postage stamp, which also served as a seal for a registered package, dated about 2,300 B. C. It is a picture of Ibi-Sin, the last king of Ur, known to Bible students as Ur of the Chaldees.

The package or sack bearing the seal, Dr. Lagrain said, appears to have been sent by the high priest of the Temple of Ur, in which Abraham later worshipped, to a banker named Shulpae and probably contained gold.

"It is of unusual importance to archaeologists," he added, "because it probably gives a clue to the personal appearance of the Sumerians, who were not a Semitic race.

"The portrait is on a clay postage stamp and is the result of rolling an engraved cylinder over the soft clay. It is as clear and distinct and the features as well defined as on the day it was made. The astonishing thing is that it shows the king-god as smooth shaven.

"There are two supposed portraits before the one just discovered, but in neither of them is there any apparent effort at realism. Each has a long beard and among hundreds of representations of gods each has a beard. It seems likely that beards were considered solely as belonging to the gods and that kings wore false ones to make appearance more impressive.

"The portrait shows a man seated on a throne with an undoubted nose, well defined mouth and general characteristics so individual that it must have been taken from life. It is significant that the picture shows a lock of hair projecting from the forehead from beneath the turban hat and another from behind.

"Before the days of Ibi-Sin we never heard of a king giving any one a seal containing his portrait, but in this instance the seal not only distinctly says the king-god has given the seal to the high priest of the Temple of Ur, but shows a picture of the event, which is amazing from an archaeological point of view. Possibly the fact that Ibi-Sin was the last of his dynasty and may have seen the end coming was responsible for this remarkable gift."

DECLARE HAITIANS RULED BY A CLIQUE

BACK DARTIGUENAVE STAND

Official's Boldness Said to Be Due to Impending Change at Washington.

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Nov. 14.—Responsible American business men long residing in Haiti and understanding the intricacies of the Haitian-American imbroglio, believe that the Haitian President's appeal yesterday for a Congressional investigation of the American civil administration in Haiti was "temperate and absolutely just."

The consensus of their opinion is that President Dartiguenave has been "constantly hampered by lack of co-operation and by high-handed measures. This island has been governed by a clique of which Minister Bailly-Blanchard is one."

"Why, then," was asked, "did the President not request Bailly-Blanchard's recall?"

"Presumably, like many others, he feared to do this owing to the American civil administration's high-handedness," was the reply.

"Then why does the President suddenly consent to speak so openly and so decisively as he did yesterday?"

"Undoubtedly because he feels that the impending change in the American Presidency gives him a better chance for receiving justice. Anyway, he utters the sentiments and the wishes that have been long cherished by Americans understanding Haiti. His request for a Congressional inquiry is both right and necessary."

Throughout the conversation outlined in yesterday's dispatch President Dartiguenave spoke with the utmost dignity—sometimes with solemnity—every sentence being slowly uttered and the most important often repeated. He never spoke venomously, his whole attitude and spirit was that of a man who felt that his people had a genuine grievance, concerning which our people needed only to be informed in order to correct it.

Concerning the American marines' conduct on the land the President's feelings appeared to be to let bygones be bygones, since now their abuses of power had ceased, and the island had been pacified. On this point he said:

"Naturally there have been some faults, but they were not preventable, because there were so many young American officers who because they were young behaved badly and native gendarmes who were advised badly by the officers. A system of terrorization existed for some time, but mended when command of the gendarmerie passed to General Wise and Colonel Hooker in July, 1919.

"In Artibonite Province, in Northern Haiti, there have been many regrettable misdeeds, as I wrote to General Catlin. From all information I received, improvement was not discernible until Colonel Hooker undertook inspection of these regions.

"I must say sincerely that most of the population were glad to have the Americans here. I, who never was the chief of any political party here, nor the leader of any revolution, never wanted to have the presidency, despite my friends' advice. I finally accepted, because of the presence of Americans in this country.

"Although I have strong faith in the United States Government's promise, I must not hesitate to say that I have had great deception practiced upon me."

Concerning the conduct of the occupying forces, President Dartiguenave said:

"For two years my Government could not say that it had complaints to make against the conduct of the superior officers of the gendarmerie. My Government regretted certain deeds of Colonel Waller, but Colonel Russell, since his return here, has proved himself to be better disposed toward the population.

"To withdraw occupation now, that the country has been disarmed would be a crime. Such a measure would be preposterous until the gendarmerie has been completely trained. Then we would feel safe."

The President spoke in the highest terms of General Wise, Colonel Hooker and Captain Bride, who, he declared, were well liked everywhere they went. But he said that before their time dreadful things wre reported to him of which he obtained accurate knowledge. Many good officers, he said, were recalled too soon.

When asked whether lack of tact might not have caused many unhappy incidents, the President said:

"That is true. That is what I always said. If your people had believed in the good faith of my Government, and that I personally desired my country's prosperity, understanding would have been easy and since two or three years ago Haitians would have spoken and thought highly of the American people.

"Here is an important point. Owing to this country's resources, we do not need an American financial adviser and also a general receiver. One alone is sufficient."

The American Minister, Mr. Bailly-Blanchard, refused to see any correspondents regarding President Dartiguenave's plea.

JAMES COX BRADY ARRIVES WITH BRIDE

Their $17,000 Customs Declaration Is Largest on the Imperator's List.

MRS. HERMANN OELRICHS ILL

Assisted Off Ship by Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr.—New York Makes Port.

Among the well-known Americans who arrived yesterday from Southampton on the Cunader Imperator was James Cox Brady, son of the late financier Anthony N. Brady, whose marriage in London to Miss Helen McMahon of Flushing, L. I., was announced at the end of September. Mr. Brady was married twice previously, first to Miss Elizabeth Hamilton of Albany, who was killed in a train wreck on March 3, 1912, and to Lady Victoria May Pery, daughter of the Earl of Limerick, who died two years ago from influenza.

Mr. Brady and his bride, who wore a long fur coat with toque to match, occupied the imperial suite on the liner. Mr. Brady had little to say to reporters and had requested that his name be kept off the passenger list. "Just say that we are back and quite happy," Mr. Brady said, and then started in an automobile for his house, 10 East Seventy-sixth Street, where he and Mrs. Brady will remain for a day or two before going to their farm at Gladstone, New Jersey. Mr. Brady and his bride had the biggest declaration of dutiable articles on the Imperator, amounting to nearly $17,000.

As Miss Helen McMahon, the bride, who is 25 years old, won special honor as the typical modern American girl in December, 1913, when her picture was selected by seven distinguished artists from the hundreds submitted and was published on the front page of the Christmas number of THE NEW YORK TIMES that year.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, who was reported to have been ill throughout the voyage, arrived with her son and was met at the pier by Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt Jr. and her daughter Muriel. Mrs. Oelrichs was assisted down the gangway to the pier by Mrs. Vanderbilt and a friend among the passengers.

Jo Davidson the Greenwich Village sculptor, who has been abroad for two years, returned after finishing the eagle surmounted monuments that will be placed at the farthest points reached on the fighting line in France by the American First Division. Monuments will be placed, he said, at Surennes, Verdun and near Sedan among other locations. Mr. Davidson will work on the memorial tablet which is to be erected at Columbia University in memory of the late Mayor John Purroy Mitchel.

Other passengers in the first cabin were Countess Jacques de Lesseps, Townsend Martin, Duncan Cameron and Mrs. Cecilia Pardo of Peru.

S. Beynon, the purser, had twenty-five cases of gold bullion in his charge, amounting to $500,000. The Imperator had 260 first, 498 second and 1,238 steerage passengers.

The American liner New York, which followed the Imperator up the harbor from Quarantine had a hard time getting to pier 61 as the tide was strong and there were two other ships, the St. Paul and the Philadelphia in the slip. The New York had also to go in stern first as she has to lie up for the cruising season in January. The liner was twelve days making the trip from Cherbourg on account of the shortage of coal.

Among the 350 cabin passengers was David Morgan of Arizona who received news by wireless that he was elected State Senator on the Republican ticket. The ship brought $1,000,000 consigned to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and 400 steerage passengers.

$200 FOR RABBI'S CAPTURE.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Nov. 14.—Search throughout the country for Joseph Louwisch, formerly principal of the Poughkeepsie Hebrew School, not having resulted in his apprehension, a reward of $200 for his capture has been offered by the Hebrew Welfare Society, which has been investigating the annulment obtained by Louwisch of his marriage to Sheva Levine. The announcement that the sum would be paid for the apprehension of Louwisch was made at the mass meeting held this afternoon in the Masonic Temple.

Resolutions commending Justice Joseph Morschauser, District Attorney Aldrich and James E. Carroll for the attitude they had taken in clearing the name of the dead girl-wife of Louwisch, were unanimously adopted.

COBLENZ OPPOSED TO OUR WITHDRAWAL

Rumors of Coming Departure of American Troops Alarm Rhineland.

BRITISH NEXT IN FAVOR

Gen. Allen Continues Fall Manoeuvres Despite Reports that Harding Will Recall Force.

COBLENZ, Nov. 13.—Rumors that President-elect Harding's Administration may recall the American Army of Occupation from the Rhineland are not interfering with the activities centering at Coblenz of the 20,000 American troops.

They are completing their Fall manoeuvres near Kaisersech, where daily battles with live ammunition are being held, demonstrating in action intensive training for modern warfare which new troops have had throughout the Summer.

The Rhine valley resounds with the cannonading of 75-centimetre and 1-pound guns, which are being used with percussion shells as a screen for infantry advances against the wooded hills, in which are scattered targets representing the imaginary enemy. The troops are using machine guns, Browning rifles and service rifles in their attacks.

The large Government reservations in the rugged hills afford the Americans a fine opportunity for war manoeuvres, and Major General Allen's forces are making the most of their unusual advantages to accustom themselves to the use of live ammunition under conditions where the results of their bombardment are visible as if in actual battle.

General Schotbach, Commander of the Swiss Army, and many other foreign officers are observing the manoeuvres, devoting especial attention to the artillery work.

The suggestion that the Americans may be withdrawn seems distasteful to the German natives, who apparently prefer the Yankees to any other force of occupation and wish them to remain as long as any foreigners are occupying German territory. General Allen and the Americans on the Rhineland Commission occupy the position of referees and are generally acknowledged as liaisons who smooth out the many difficulties arising between the more vitally interested nations.

Speculation is rife as to what nation will send troops of occupation to Coblenz if the Americans are withdrawn. Neither the British nor the French desired to have the Rhineland Commission headquarters located in their areas and consequently Coblenz was selected, although it is a small city with inadequate housing.

The German population is especially hostile to the French and the Belgians and express a preference for British troops if the Americans are withdrawn.

Coblenz has been thoroughly Americanized and her tradespeople, who have adapted their shops to serve the doughboys, are greatly alarmed over the prospect of losing the patronage of the well-paid Americans.

Most of the soldiers in the Army of Occupation enlisted for three years and few of them seem to feel that they will be withdrawn. The order prohibiting soldiers from marrying German women no longer is effective, but men who take German wives now are sent to America on the first available transport from Antwerp.

PRAISES ARMY AT COBLENZ.

O'Ryan Contrasts Its Firmness with British and French Laxity.

Treatment of Germans by the American army of occupation was contrasted with that by French and British forces to the detriment of the latter by Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, former commander of the Twenty-seventh Division, in a talk at the North Presbyterian Church last evening. Describing a recent trip to the battlefields and occupational centres, he said that both British and French talked a great deal of severity to the German inhabitants, but dealt too leniently with offenders against law and order.

"On every street in Coblenz," he went on, "the respect the Germans felt toward our own troops could be seen. Our men and officers are most courteous and gentle with the mass, but when an individual breaks the rules and regulations he is so summarily dealt with that he never repeats the offense."

General O'Ryan affirmed his belief in the strength of France's gratitude toward America, and said that though much was spoken of the quick change of feeling since the close of the war the great body of French, men and women and children, felt the deepest sort of friendship toward the United States. He alluded also to the splendid care being taken of American cemeteries in France. He told the audience what reflections had come to him on revisiting the battlefields, and expressed the hope that the churches would make use of the "deep interest in religion which exists in the American Legion."

"It may be true that this feeling is growing apathetic," he went on, "but I hope the churches will take advantage of it while it is yet strong. The conduct of men in battle depended very largely upon the influence that surrounded them in school, home and the church as they grew up, and I am convinced of the importance of such environment."

COLGATE THEFT REVEALED.

Long Island Sheriff to Bring Back Negroes Held in Virginia.

BABYLON, L. I., Nov. 14.—The theft last Sunday of $10,000 worth of jewelry and silverware from the country home at St. James of Mrs. Adelle S. Colgate of New York was made public today by District Attorney Young of Suffolk County, who verified the report that two former negro servants, husband and wife, were under arrest at Newport News, Va., They had been in Mrs. Colgate's employ about six months. Mrs. Colgate was in New York when the theft was committed.

The negro couple, according to Prosecutor Young, were traced to Richmond, Va., where they sought to pawn a costly wrist watch. The pawn broker, it was said, became suspicious and notified the Richmond police. Before the officer arrived at the pawnshop, however, the couple fled. They were later arrested.

Armed with a warrant issued by Justice Blackman of Smithtown and extradition papers signed by Lieutenant Governor Walker, Sheriff John Kelly is on his way to Newport News to bring the negroes here.

ACCUSED HUSBAND CAUGHT.

W. B. Whitney, Whose Second Wife Disappeared, Married Third.

RICHMOND, Me., Nov. 14.—William B. Whitney, for the body of whose second wife the authorities have been searching on his farm at Langdon, N. H., was arrested here tonight on a charge of forging a check on the town of Langdon.

He was indicted on this charge last week. Whitney had bought a farm here and since his arrival had married, under the name of William B. Clark, Mrs. Agnes Clark, a widow, of Charlestown, N. H.

London Crowds Still Honor Unknown Soldier in Abbey

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Co.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—For the fourth day the pilgrimage to the cenotaph in Whitehall and the unknown warrior's grave in Westminster Abbey continued. It began this morning shortly after 6 o'clock, and all through the day until late tonight the endless procession filed past the Whitehall memorial and, whenever the doors were opened, into the Abbey.

In order not to interfere with the usual Sunday services, the Abbey was opened to visitors for only two intervals of two hours each.

Queues extending for miles in several directions centred on Whitehall, and nearly every one seemed to be carrying bunches of flowers. The base of the memorial is now lost in a mass of magnificent flowers, from the simple sprays from poor people to costly wreaths from rich. It is estimated that at least 30,000 floral tributes have been deposited.

ASKS TAX RELIEF FOR LOSING FIRMS

Ex-Commissioner Roper Points to Danger if Present Law Is Enforced.

SUGGESTS POSTPONEMENT

And an Extension of the Net Loss Provision to 1920—Urges Action by Congress.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Daniel C. Roper, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue, talked to the Chamber of Commerce today on income tax problems and suggested immediate legislation to permit business firms which have suffered heavy financial losses in the current commercial and industrial depression to postpone payment of the Dec. 15 instalment of income and profits taxes under certain conditions.

Mr. Roper also recommended that Congress, soon after its convening next month, consider remedial legislation to extend the "net loss" provision of the revenue act to the year 1920, so that business institutions which have recorded loss this year through shrinkage of values of their stocks may deduct these losses from last year's income in calculating taxes due.

Referring to the necessity of enabling some business firms to postpone the Dec. 15 instalments, Mr. Roper said:

"The tremendous decline since the first of this year in the market value of many staple commodities has resulted in an almost unprecedented shrinkage of inventory values. In many instances these losses exceed the entire net income for 1919, and the unfortunate companies possessing such goods find themselves unable to convert their wares into cash or to obtain credit at their banks by which to meet their tax, based upon their paper profits—profits that have never been realized.

"In some of these cases under the present law, unless it is amended before Dec. 15, it will be mandatory upon the Treasury to collect the tax by court action through distraint proceedings. This would mean financial disaster in many cases, and should be obviated."

CROWD SEES MAN SLAIN.

Victim's Jugular Severed With Knife After Quarrel in Front of Saloon.

Thomas Degnon of 204 East Fortieth Street was stabbed in front of a saloon at Third Avenue and Fortieth Street last night and died in a few minutes. John J. Kelly, a master plumber, 48 years old, of 851 Third Avenue, was locked up in the East Thirty-fifth Street Station charged with homicide. Dr. Bull of Bellevue Hospital said Degnon's jugular vein had been severed.

Witnesses said Kelly ran out of the saloon followed by Degnon. During an altercation, the police say, Kelly stabbed Degnon in the neck. Degnon ran into the street and fell on the car tracks. He was carried to a drug store, where he died.

Kelly, pursued by a crowd, ran east on Fortieth Street, and was caught between Second and Third Avenues by Patrolman James O'Brien. At the police station Kelly was questioned, but was too intoxicated, the police say, to answer intelligently.

Degnon's body was identified by Patrick Degnon, a brother.

A. R. JOHNSON FOUND DEAD.

Naval Ex-Airman Believed to Have Been Accidentally Shot.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Nov. 14.—Lieutenant Albert R. Johnson, 23 years old, of East Orange, N. J., who served in the Naval Reserves during the war, was found dead today at the home of his cousin, Brady Wetter, near Moorefield, W. Va. Death was caused by a bullet wound believed to have been accidentally inflicted while he was preparing for a hunting trip.

Lieutenant Johnson was engaged in the insurance business in New York, where his mother and a brother, R. Randolph Johnson, reside. He served with honor in the Naval Aviation Service.

PROTEST ON BALLOON RACE.

French Entrants Complain Aero Club Violated International Regulations.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Captain Louis Hirschauer and Leo Nathan, representatives of France in the recent James Gordon Bennett international balloon race in the United States, returned to France today and complained that the Aero Club of America had violated the regulations of the International Aeronautic Federation. In a report made to the Aero Club of France they enumerate the following grievances:

First, that only one Commissioner was present in Birmingham, where the race started, namely, Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club of America. Second, that there was a complete lack of Commissioners for inspecting balloons. Third, that Mr. Hawley did not request the competitors to produce pilots' licenses. Fourth, that the Commissioner did not verify the cubic capacity of each balloon. Fifth, that the competitors were not provided with sealed barographs, rendering it impossible to ascertain whether any competitor had made a landing before the final one.

TRUCKMEN ACCEPT OLD SCALE OF PAY

RADICAL ELEMENT DEFEATED

OWNERS PRAISE ACTION

Had Notified Workers That Slack Business Really Justified a Reduction in Wages.

Truckmen comprising the membership of five locals of the International Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' Union and representing 40,000 workers in this city voted yesterday to accept the compromise agreement of their employers for a renewal of the working contract which expired on Nov. 1, and thus avert a tieup of the movement of merchandise and foodstuffs in the city.

The decision was reached at meetings of the locals at Beethoven Hall, 210 Fifth Street, and at 565 Hudson Street. Local 807, at the Beethoven Hall meeting, voted 609 to 324 against a strike resolution. Locals 282, 207, 645 and Jersey Local 560, at the Hudson Street meeting voted 485 to 23 against the resolution. The conservative element was in control at both meetings, which were marked by an absence of the disorder and violent argument that have prevailed at previous meetings of the unions.

The truckmen, in giving in to the appeal of the Merchant Truckmen's Bureau, the organization of the employers, for concessions on the part of the workers to aid in "carrying the burden of poor business conditions," withdrew their demands for a wage increase and shorter hours and agreed to work at the same wages and hours as under the old agreement, except that they will receive pay for overtime for the actual period they work, instead of $1 an hour for any part of an hour. They also agreed to work at least five days in any holiday week, to be paid for the holiday, and to file a bond of $500 for each local to guarantee against unauthorized strikes, the employers doing the same.

The strike vote was called for after the union representative and the employers had deadlocked over the question of fractional pay for overtime. At meetings on Thursday night the strike proposal was cheered, but the union leaders pointed out to the men that too frequent strikes might lead to the open shop.

The original demands of the union men were for a wage increase of $1 a day and eight hours' work, instead of nine. The truckmen countered with a demand that the union men work ten hours at the present wage. They pleaded that trucking wages had increased 117 per cent. since 1916, and that the wages in this city were higher than in any city east of and including Chicago.

The Merchant Truckmen's Bureau, following the decision to take a strike vote yesterday, sent notices to every union man in the city, asking him to attend yesterday's election and warning him that a vote to reject the proposal of the Wage Scale Committee of the employers, of which Arthur G. McKeever is Chairman, meant a strike and unemployment. The notice said that half of the trucking equipment of the city was idle and that prices were falling everywhere.

James J. Riordan, President of the Merchant Truckmen's Bureau, and Arthur G. McKeever, Chairman of the Wage Scale Committee, when they learned last night the result of the union's vote, issued the following statement:

"The vote is a credit to the men and a triumph over any radical element that may have existed in the union. It is upon such sentiment that reconstruction and business must be built. We congratulate the men and pledge ourselves to do our part toward stabilizing the trucking industry, in order that the present era of unemployment may be as short as possible."

UNIVERSITIES BODY MEETS.

American Association Will Be Guests of Columbia While Here.

The Association of American Universities will open its annual convention here today as the guest of Columbia University. Convention headquarters will be established at the Hotel Commodore. Problems relating to business and education will be discussed at the convention.

To throw light on one problem that concerns the convention the Institute for Public Service issued yesterday a statement from records furnished by 210 colleges and universities for the third year before and the third year after the war, showing that 98 graduate schools of arts and sciences increased their register 2,333, or about 5 per cent., whereas the number of students needing instructors increased 107,000, or 56 per cent. These figures are cited to show that not enough students are preparing to be the country's advanced teachers.

CHURCH HONORS ITS HEROES

St. Paul's Methodist Unveils Tablet to Dead and Living Soldiers.

A bronze tablet erected to the memory of two soldiers from the congregation who lost their lives in the war, and to forty-five others who served in the army, navy and marine corps, was unveiled last night in St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, West End Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street. Members of the E. T. Morgan Post of the G. A. R. and a delegation from the American Legion were present.

Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, was the principal speaker. He extolled the valor and emphasized the sacrifice of those who lost their lives in the cause. The t

HORSE SHOW OPENS TODAY AT GARDEN

All Types of Entries Scheduled to Perform During First Day's Program.

TWO INNOVATIONS ON CARD

Polo Match and Exhibition of Machine-Gun Carts Tonight—Doors Open at 9 A. M.

Since military classes play so prominent a part in the thirty-fifth National Horse Show, which opens this morning at Madison Square Garden and continues until Saturday night, it is only fitting that the military tone should be the prevalent note in the inaugural event of the exhibition. This morning at 9 o'clock the doors will be thrown open and an hour later the contenders for the Lewis E. Waring Cup, offered for cavalry remounts, will prance over the tanbark to come under the critical eyes of the judges.

This opening class, unusually well filled, as it has twenty-four entries, is the only one that will be fully judged at the opening session this morning. The remainder of the program up to the luncheon hour will be taken up with the judging of conformation of horses entered in numerous classes for hunters. At last year's show an innovation was tried and the entries of several classes were listed on conformation at the start, the judges following the theory that a horse changes little if any in this respect during the week. The points thus allotted were recorded when the classes were judged later. The plan proved highly successful and will be repeated this year.

The afternoon program for the opening day is a varied one, showing most of the types which will be on exhibition during the week at the Garden. The first hour of the after-luncheon session, which will open at 2 o'clock, will be given over to jumpers, the class numbering sixty-eight entries, one of the largest of the week. Novice saddle and harness horses will follow in order, and then will come the first of the numerous pony classes for children, which always provide a picturesque feature of the horse shows at the Garden. These tiny competitors will be followed by something entirely different, the six-horse artillery gun teams which will circle the arena at a gallop, cut sharp sleights and go through all the manoeuvres of heavy rig driving. Major Pierre Lorillard, Jr., will be in charge of this detail.

There are other saddle and harness classes on the afternoon program, also a class for draft horses shown to halter and one for pony tandems. The session will close with a class for officers' jumpers over the course for the William H. Moore Cup. There are fifty-four entrants in this competition and all the officers must wear uniforms.

The committee in charge of this year's show has shown a keen desire to furnish innovations, and the success of the efforts will be apparent tonight, when two events hitherto not scheduled for a show at the Garden will be put on. One is a polo match and the other an exhibition of machine gun cart teams. Polo teams of three players each have been entered from six clubs and a game will be played each night, with the final or championship contest on Saturday. Several of the leading poloists of the country, including some eligibles for the American team which will play the British team at Hurlingham next June, are among the players entered in this tournament.

Boston and Brooklyn will be represented by etams in the first game and, unlike ordinary indoor polo matches, those to be held during the Horse Show will be along the same lines as are followed in outdoor polo. Goal posts eight feet in height will be erected eight feet in from either end of the tanbark ring, and goals will be scored by knocking the ball between the goal posts, while balls shot back of the goal lines, but not between the posts will be driven into play from the back lines, as in outdoor polo. Boston's trio is made up of Captain Pat Rafferty, who is to take the place of H. B. Guthrie, whose eye was injured during the last week; Dr. H. B. Blackwell and G. R. Dempsey, the handicaps of the three being 4, 6 and 4, respectively, or a total of 14. The Brooklyn trio includes J. B. Waters, 3-goal handicap; H. Winn, 6 goals, and P. K. Alford, a 2-goal man, giving the Brooklyn trio a total of 11 goals, which means that Boston will have to allow Brooklyn 3 goals.

Thousands of persons who never have wintessed a polo match will be able to see how the game is played this week. The ball consists of a rubber bladder inside of a white leather cover, five inches in diameter. In every respect other than the ball the equipment is the same as is used for the outdoor game, and the ponies and men engaged have had plenty of practice at both the indoor and outdoor variety. A net is strung at each end of the field.

Machine Gun Carts a Feature.

The exhibition of the artillery gun teams probably will furnish as much interest and as many thrills as the polo game. The machine gun carts, drawn by horses, will be shown just as they go into action in real warfare and army work to be displayed will be new to local Horse Show goers. Contrasting the work of these light gun carts, the same class will show ten-ton teams of Clydesdale draft horses in alignments of six, sent through various evolutions.

No show would be properly started without the annual Horse Show Breakfast and this social function was held yesterday in the Music Room of the Biltmore. John McE. Bowman, who is a judge and one of the Directors of the National Horse Show Association, was the host. The Music Room was tastefully decorated with the Horse Show colors, blue and gold, and with Autumn flowers. Among those who attended the breakfast were:

Major A. G. Thurman, Harvey S. Ladew, Thomas K. Alford, Brig. Gen. Dwight E. Aultman, John L. Bushnell, Frederic H. Bontecou, P. J. Casey, Carll S. Burr, J. Schuyler Casey, G. Howard Davison, W. R. BOYDEN HAS HIGH GUN CARD AT TRAPS

Marksman Runs Best Day's Score at N. Y. A. C. Shoot—Also Wins a Leg on Trophy.

D. F. Boyden, a member of the Boston Athletic Association and of the New York Athletic Club, did the best work in the week end shoot yesterday of the latter organization at Travers Island. Not only was he the high scratch gunner of the day but he also was the winner of a leg on the Buermeyer trophy, a 50 "bird" scratch event. In the latter shoot he had a score of 49. His run for the high scratch prize was 97 out of a possible 100 targets.

The high handicap race ended in a tie between M. Hickey and W. G. Allen. Each had 100 full targets. On the shoot off, Hickey won with a card of 25 to 24 out of 25 targets. A special handicap shoot was won by E. Milliken. As usual, legs on all the regular shoots were taken by the gunners who had full scores of 25 targets.

MANY GUNNERS AT TRAPS.

Three Times Usual Number Attend Harrison Island First Shoot.

The Winter trap shooting season started over the Harrison Island traps of the New Rochelle Yacht Club yesterday with a field of eighteen gunners. The number surprised the committee, as the club averaged only about a half-dozen for its shoots last Winter. The big turnout left the impression that it will be a great year for the gunners of the organization.

The best work of the day was done by J. Nicklis of the Westchester Country Club, who won the high scratch prize wit ha card of 41 out of a possible 100 targets. W. W. Swan was the high handicap gunner. G. P. Granbery won a 10 and a 15 target shoot. A shoot at 25 targets went to G. Nicklis.

The score:

HOOKER IS HIGH GUN.

Has Score of 96 Out of 100 at Larchmont Club's First Shoot.

The annual shooting season of the Larchmont Yacht Club started yesterday with a field of sixteen gunners. The day was ideal and, as a result, the scores were excellent. The high scratch gunner was Kenneth R. Hooker, who won the prize with a card of 96 out of a possible 100 targets. After a shoot-off, in which a half dozen gunners competed, the high handicap prize was taken by W. E. Webb. The scores:

Three Wrestling Bouts on Card.

Three wrestling bouts will be included in the opening card of the season under the direction of Promoter Jack Curley, scheduled for the Seventy-first Regiment Armory on Nov. 22. The principal bout will bring together Strangler Lewis and Wladek Zbyszko. Joe Stecher, Nebraska scissors expert, who holds the heavyweight title, will demonstrate his ability on O'Donnell, a French wrestler, in another bout. The third match will bring together Amos Latinen, a new Finn grappler, and Chevalier, a French exponent of the mat sport.

BASEBALL

The choice of Judge Kenesaw M. Landis as the governing head of baseball is cause for congratulations to all concerned in the arrangement, and baseball is indeed fortunate that the eminent jurist saw fit to accept the position to which he was invited. Combining the trained judicial mind and a keen interest in the great national game, Judge Landis is fitted for the place as few men are, and if he receives the co-operation from club owners that he should receive there can be nothing ahead but more progress and greater prosperity in baseball.

The proponents of the Lasker plan failed to put through their program in its entirety but they have done enough to earn the approval of the great army of baseball fans throughout the country. Conditions, such as had prevailed for upwards of two years, demanded sweeping changes in the government of the sport. A majority of the club owners wanted changes made, but they found their path blocked by petty politics, so they set about to force these alterations even if it necessitated a complete rearrangement of the major league map. They were willing to bring about a disruption of the highly successful circuits of 1920 if this was the only way to cure the ailment which was weakening baseball.

For a time it appeared that their extreme program must be carried out, with a twelve-club league on one side and a remnnant of the other league fighting for existence. A baseball war was looming up, the minors were preparing to widen the gap that separated them from the majors, and the outlook was anything but bright. It proved only the darkness before the dawn, however, and baseball today stands stronger than ever before. There remain, of course, some petty differences, some internal bickerings, but these are minor ailments. With a man of Judge Landis's calibre as supreme head of the sport the minors are preparing to get into line with their bigger brothers and the public will look upon the game with the same confidence that prevailed before the days when a gambling clique made inroads even to the extent of buying a world's series.

The twelve-club league plan was at no time really popular, but it would have been acceptable as the only medicine to cure the disease from which the game had suffered during the last two years. Majority rule continues to be the popular system of government in this country and the fans realized that baseball was not thus regulated. One man could and did thwart the will of the majority of club owners, but the time finally arrived when that power was destroyed. The action of the club owners who forced the Landis régime on some who were at first inclined to fight the plan should be a warning in the future to the politicians of baseball who would attempt to impose their personal wishes on the majority.

With Judge Landis to settle interleague disputes, and the system of majority rule governing all cases of interleague interest, the remedy seems to have been found. The crooked players and battling club owner will have no place in the game of the future. The sport at last is in the hands of the public, as personified by Judge Landis, and he knows enough of its recent past to make certain that there will be no recurrence in the future.

FOOTBALL

It was an interesting statement that Coach Robert T. Fisher made on Thursday in explanation of Harvard's continued refusal to number its football players in the Crimson's big games. The Cambridge coach, in a straightforward and frank declaration, tells us that "the Harvard system has changed but little in the last twelve years. Our most effective plays have been used over and over again in the big games, and most of them have never been analyzed, even by experts, with any degree of accuracy. For example, the play which was the deciding factor in tying Princeton last year was the same play which won against Yale and Oregon and the same play, with a very minor variation, which tied Princeton this year." On these grounds the Harvard coach bases his decision.

We must credit Mr. Fisher with knowing his own business, which is coaching a football team. It is true, of course, that Harvard, beginning with the advent of Percy Haughton, built up a football system that has been the envy of many rival colleges and universities. And when the great genius of Harvard football retired, Mr. Fisher became the heir to, and the successful administrator of, this legacy.

But Glenn Warner may rise to remark that he was developing successful football teams before Percy Haughton even went to Cambridge as coach. Mr. Warner, as a past master in the matter of football strategy and football deception, may point out that this year he used against Syracuse, for instance, several formations that the old Carlisle Indians sprang on a surprised football world years and years ago. And Mr. Warner, with all his fame as a leader in scientific football (which is what the Harvard system is), has never shown any reluctance to number his players. The fact that the merest football neophyte can sit down and make a precise diagram of some of his choicest formations has not prevented their successful operation year after year.

And the Minnesota shift and the Heisman shift, with "minor variations," have lived long and successfully, even when they became matters of common knowledge. Instances such as these can be cited almost without end.

It is only logical to assume that the numbering of players is as fair to one team as to another. Granted that it is a disadvantage to any team, it at least will be an equal disadvantage. If Harvard numbers its players in a game with Princeton, Harvard is not sacrificing anything more than its opponents. If this is not true, then the only other explanation is that Harvard occupies a unique niche in football. It must be that Harvard is the only team in the East whose football system is so deep and mysterious that it would be ruined by the numbering of the players. It must be the only system that has defied the best football minds of the last twelve years. We are afraid that even Harvard's warmest friends and admirers (and they are legion) will not go as far as this with Coach Fisher.

TURF

The case of Jockey Carroll Shilling, which threatened for a time to cause a turf war, promises now to bring about a better understanding between the Jockey Club and the Maryland Racing Commission. Correspondence between the two bodies has already resulted in a measure of co-operation, and such trouble as was experienced last week will probably be avoided in the future.

The Maryland Racing Commission proceeded with sincerity but without a thorough knowledge of conditions existing in racing. Being a State Commission, it was independent at the outset, none of the members ever having had any practical experience in the conduct of the sport. The Commission gained the impression that the Jockey Club was holding aloof and thus pressed the issue further than it was thought it would do. When it was learned that the Jockey Club was bound to recognize a standard under which it had always conducted racing and that it was acting only for the good of racing, the Commission sought co-operation which has resulted in plans for a meeting this week.

Many turfmen are of the opinion that Shilling should be given a license, on the ground that has been done long enough and has been well punished for his offense. At the same time these turfmen were opposed to having Shilling's case forced upon the Jockey Club and, had the issue come to the breaking point, it would have been found that most of the turfmen would have sided with the Jockey Club. It was the general opinion that Shilling's case was not handled with diplomacy.

While the Maryland Racing Commission has authority over the tracks in that State, there is no reason why it should not work in harmony with the Jockey Club, just as does the Racing Commission in Kentucky. This latter Commission has co-operated with the Jockey Club for many years with satisfaction to both parties, and it is to be hoped that the Maryland Commission will have a similar understanding with the parent body of racing.

TENNIS

Following their series of exhibition matches in the Coast cities, the members of the American Davis Cup team will board ship today at Vancouver for their long journey to New Zealand, where at Auckland, in late December, they will seek to win back for this country the emblem of lawn tennis supremacy which has been in foreign possession since Australia won it at Forest Hills in 1914. Reports of the exhibition matches just played on the Coast seem to indicate that Johnston, at least, of the American team is at the top of his form. The ex-champion defeated Tilden in straight sets in San Francisco, won two out of three from him in Portland and took a straight-set match from him in Seattle. Tilden, whose long and arduous campaign, leading to his winning of world honors, left him a bit worn physically, did not, in all probability, put forth his greatest efforts in these exhibition encounters, but the scores were close enough to show that he is not far from his best form.

Ever since the close of the lawn tennis season in America there has been a strong feeling of confidence that Tilden and Johnston, without calling for assistance from the other members of the team, are fully capable of bringing the cup back with them. There is justification for this confidence, provided the two are in form. But conditions of climate must be taken into consideration. The home team, other things being equal, always has the advantage, and American players before this have found the December climate of New Zealand enervating. It is certain that where men of the calibre of Brooks, Patterson and O'Hara Wood, with Thomas, Anderson or Hawkes as the fourth man of the team, must be met, Tilden and Johnston must be at their best to emerge with the victory. America has an excellent chance this year, but the result is by no means a foregone conclusion.

There would be greater confidence in the result had Richard Norris Williams 2d been able to make the trip. Williams's great skill, especially in the doubles, might have been of incalculable benefit to America's cause. But as it is the greater burden rests with the champion and ex-champion, for it is unlikely that Washburn, the third active member of the team, will be used in the supreme test. His part will be to help prepare the two others in the three weeks that will intervene between the close of the sea trip and the challenge round.

To Tilden, Johnston, Washburn and their highly efficient Captain and manager, Samuel Hardy, go the ardent good wishes of all tennis America for a smooth voyage and a successful issue of their undertaking.

BOXING

The new Boxing Commission apparently is prepared to protect the public when it pays high prices to see champions perform, a caution that was not taken by those who previously governed the glove game in this State. This fact was made clear when the Commissioners served notice on the Commonwealth Sporting Club during the last week that the coming bout between Benny Leonard and Eddie Kelly would be subject to careful scrutiny on the part of those entrusted with the task of safeguarding the sport.

The boxing fans who pay high prices to see a titleholder perform expect to see some signs of championship calibre. The Boxing Commission takes the stand that they are entitled to protection. If Leonard, or any other champion, waltzes through a bout with a boxer who does not class as a capable opponent, the Boxing Commissioners intend to ask some questions. If they cannot be answered satisfactorily, some suspensions of club officials or boxers will follow.

By serving advance notice on club officials and matchmakers that one-sided bouts will not be condoned the governors of the sport take a step which will have the hearty accord of all followers of the game. The one action elevates at the same time the sport and the confidence of its followers in the men who are entrusted to safeguard it. There has been too much laxity in the past on the point of censoring matches. Other Commissioners have taken for granted that the public should take its chances on bouts which were manifestly of the one-sided variety. There was a real effort made to keep men out of the ring after they had reached a certain age or if they were physically unfit, but otherwise the matchmakers had little or no curb placed on their activities.

This latest notice, following closely on quick and decisive punishment of boxers who failed to perform up to contract, has satisfied the boxing followers of New York that their new commission is very much on the alert. The members of the governing body are taking their work seriously and making more headway in their efforts to protect boxers, clubs and public than their predecessors did. It means much for the sport to have such wideawake officials in charge of the sport.

The commission has moved slowly on the question of allowing bouts involving the heavyweight champion, and this caution is also a move to safeguard the game. It is apparent now, however, that a heavyweight contest under the direction of such a commission would allow little or no room for complaint. A vote to sanction such contests will be in line with the other actions taken by the commission, all of which have been taken with due consideration. Such a decision would be as popular as all the other moves of boxing's capable supervisors.

EUROPEAN CUE STAR IS DUE TOMORROW

Champion Edward Horemans Hopes to Play Willie Hoppe During Visit Here.

Chief interest in billiards this week centres in the arrival in this country of Edward Horemans, the famous Belgian billiard player who is the champion of Europe. He is due to arrive on the Holland-America Line steamship Nieuw Amsterdam tomorrow. On Nov. 5 he cabled that he was sailing from Rotterdam, but failed to mention what boat he was sailing on. It is known, however, that he had planned to sail on the Nieuw Amsterdam.

Horemans's arrival here should provide a great stimulant to the sport in this country. Willie Hoppe has held the title for fifteen years, and in recent years has so far outclassed his rivals and so conclusively demonstrated his superiority in balkline play that interest in this style of competition has lagged considerably. Horemans comes here with a great reputation. He has made some truly remarkable high runs and high averages in his matches in France, Holland and Belgium and those who have seen him in action openly declare that he is the only man who is capable of making Hoppe extend himself.

Just as soon as Horemans arrives the business of perfecting his plans for his stay in this country will be prosecuted with all possible haste. Hoppe is particularly anxious to meet the Belgian immediately after the conclusion of the final round of the national championship tournament at the Hotel Astor in this city. The final round will be played on Dec. 6, 7 and 8, and Hoppe is desirous of engaging the Belgian before the Christmas holidays. Whether this arrangement will be satisfactory to Horemans or not or whether he will demand time in which to become acclimated before undertaking the biggest test he has ever been called upon to face cannot now be stated.

If the match is arranged to be played before the Christmas holidays, Horemans will have all of the intervening time in which to practice. In the opinion of many experts this should prove ample for him to grind the rough edges off his game and attain his best form. Hoppe, incidentally, feels that he has reached the apex of his playing form now. Although he has nearly three weeks in which to perfect himself for the defense of his crown at the Astor, he feels that there is little he can do in the meantime to improve his play. He intends to keep at work, however, and has announced that he will continue to play exhibition matches with Charley Peterson almost up to the day he begins the defense of his title. He will not take a rest. "If I quit playing exhibition matches I would spend several hours each day in practice anyhow, and there is no better form of practice than playing against a man of Peterson's ability," said Hoppe. "I do not feel overworked in the slightest and am convinced that I can maintain the fine form I am in at this time only by continuing to play."

MARQUART AND YOUNG WIN.

Capture First Honors in Two-Hour Team Bicycle Race.

Bert Marquart of the New York division and George Young, Long Island, racing as a team, carried off premier laurels yesterday morning in the two-hour team bicycle race of the Century Road Club Association, held over a course on Mosholu Parkway in the Bronx. A distance of fifty-four miles was covered during the race, which started at 10 o'clock. Twelve teams participated, Marquart and Young finishing with 74 points, 17 in excess of the nearest rival combination.

The scores of the first six teams follow:

B. Marquart, New York Division, and G. Young, Long Island Division, 74 points; L. Grace, New York Division, and R. Wagner, New York Division, 57 points; J. Caldwell, Long Island Division, and F. Blodell, New York Division, 53 points; G. Trippli, New York Division, and L. Flores, New York Division, 45 points; W. Caldwell, Long Island Division, and A. Resnik, Long Island Division, 31 points; A. Ziorow, New York Division, and J. Caldera, New York Division, 30 points.

MASTERSON IS VICTOR.

Defeats Berberich in Close Finish in Bronx Road Race.

A sustained spurt over the closing 100 yards of the journey enabled Thomas Masterson to snatch victory from Harold Berberich yesterday in the three and one-half miles members' road race of the Franklin A. C. of Westchester, conducted over a course in the upper Bronx. Masterson and Berberich engaged in a battle for the lead over the entire journey. The lead alternated constantly up to the final 100 yards, when Masterson jumped to the front at that point and maintained his position despite the determined challenge of Berberich. Masterson crossed the finish line in 21:00 and Berberich followed two-fifths of a second later, almost at the victor's shoulder.

Frank Berberich was third in 21:03, Andy Ingenito finished fourth in 21:50, William Trainor occupied fifth position in 21:51, and Anthony Feliski was sixth, in 21:58. Fourteen harriers started in the chase and all finished.

NAVY NINE TO PLAY ARMY.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 14.—A particularly fine schedule of baseball games has been arranged for the Naval Academy nine for the coming Spring. The climax of the season is the game against the Military Academy, which will be played at West Point on May 28. The other games, all of which will be played at Annapolis, are:

March 26, Princeton; March 30, University of Pennsylvania; April 2, Holy Cross; April 6, Dartmouth; April 9, Williams; April 13, Harvard; April 16, Notre Dame; April 20, Lafayette; April 23 (open); April 27, Georgetown; April 30, Georgia Tech; May 4, University of Virginia; May 7, University of West Virginia; May 11, University of Maryland; May 14, Swarthmore; May 18, Villa Nova; May 21, Catholic University; May 25, St. Johns.

All of these are fixed definitely except the Holy Cross, Notre Dame and Georgia Tech games, which are tentative.

CARPENTIER RICHER BY MILLION FRANCS

Returns to Paris Also with Increased Respect for Dempsey's Fighting Ability.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Georges Carpentier, the heavyweight champion of Europe, returned from America richer by 1,000,000 francs and with a great respect for the fighting ability of Jack Dempsey, world's titleholder.

Carpentier, who was never boastful, even before leaving France, when he had not yet seen Dempsey, said on his return that Dempsey was considered in America to be a "superfighter," but that he would meet him with as much confidence as he did the British fighters, Wells and Beckett, whom he knocked out.

"The newspapers," said Carpentier, "reported Dempsey as saying he would lead me to the slaughter like an ox. I don't believe it. I have met Dempsey, who is really a very amiable gentleman. I even had one match with him which I won—but that was at golf. Dempsey's kind thought in sending me a wireless message when off Nantuckett wishing us Godspeed, was very gentlemanly."

The boastful remark attributed to Carpentier's manager, Descamps, at the Jersey City ball park to the effect that Carpentier would beat the champion in two rounds, has now been modified to such expressions as: "The difference in weight of fourteen pounds will be a great handicap," and "the man who lands the first blow will win."

Descamps appeared proud of the concession he succeeded in obtaining from the promoters—the privilege of making Carpentier's forfeit deposit in scrip of the new French loan, which will be placed in J. P. Morgan & Co.'s bank this week bearing 6 per cent. interest.

Carpentier showed only a trace of bitterness when he referred to the outcry of "fake" raised concerning his bout with Levinsky and the hissing and jeers to which he was subjected while acting as second to Charles Ledoux, the French bantamweight, in the latter's bout in Madison Square Garden in New York. He seemed greatly amused at Descamps's reference to the ringside "sports" in evening clothes and bedecked with diamonds in Jersey City who kept exhorting Levinsky to "kill the frog."

LOS ANGELES GETS 1921 TRACK GAMES

National A. A. U. Convention Makes Award in Opening Session in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 14.—The annual convention of the National Amateur Union opened here today with fifty delegates in attendance from all sections of the country. Today's session consisted chiefly of committee meetings. Business sessions will begin tomorrow.

The first official work of the convention was the awarding of the 1921 national track and field championship to Los Angeles. Other awards for 1921 will be made at tomorrow's meeing.

Chicago is in the race for the next convention. A lively fight is looming up over the presidency. Three candidates are in the field to succeed Samuel J. Dallas of Philadelphia, whose two-year term expires. Herman Obertubessing of New York is the Eastern division's candidate for president. Robert S. Weaver of Los Angeles has a strong backing from the Western associations, while the Southern association is trying to elect Harry W. Fitzpatrick of New Orleans.

Gus Kirby, President of the American Olympic Committee, is expected here tomorrow to make his final report on the Olympic games. Dr. W. T. Burdick of Baltimore, Chairman of the Playgrounds Recreation Committee, is also expected to arrive tomorrow to read several important papers.

LEWIS WINS ROAD RACE.

Ruben Lewis of the Clark House A. A. made the best use of his handicap allowance yesterday in the open handicap road run conducted by the Yorkville Catholic Club over a course of slightly more than five miles, and emerged with a victory in the actual time of 31:10. Sol Silverstein, the Glencoe A. C. runner, who started from scratch, finished second, about 100 yards back of the winner, and Louis Zimmerman, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A. contestant, Lewis alternated in the pace for another mile. The Clark House runner then forged to the front and gradually drew away from his rivals. Over the last mile Lewis raced without any competition, but did not slacken his stride.

Silverstein probably would have threatened the victor's position but for an accident late in the chase. The Glencoe emblem-wearer was bothered considerably by an unmanageable shoe from the start of the grind. The foot covering had an uncanny habit of becoming loose and slop-shod going over the pavements as Silverstein progressed. Several times the Glencoe runner stopped and painstakingly tied the laces. The shoe would then be good for almost a half mile before opening again.

Finally, within a mile of the finish, with Silverstein gradually picking up ground on the pace-setting Lewis, the shoe became untied for the last time. Silverstein stopped dead in his tracks and with a venomous wrench relieved his right foot of the bothersome covering. He finished the journey with the shoe clutched tightly in his right hand, racing bare-footed over pavements and asphalt. Even with this handicap Silverstein carried off the fast time laurels.

The order of finish of the first fifteen runners follows:

Pos.	Name and Club.	Hand'p.	Actual Time.
1—	R. Lewis, Clark House A. A.	1:45	31:10
2—	S. Silverstein, Glencoe A.C.	Scratch	29:50

Showed Flashes of Greatness in Easy Victory Over Yale's Crippled Warriors.

GREEN PUSHES TO FRONT

Dartmouth Climbing Higher in Eastern Football Standing—Syracuse's Defeat Surprising.

All the sap has been run from the gridiron orchard and strained and boiled. Sugaring is almost completed—but what's the use of wasting a perfectly good Vermont simile on a city full of flat dwellers? The idea is that from tons of football practice and preliminary games there is now being mined the ounces of precious metal.

A couple of weeks from now—and weeks are faster in flight than carrier pigeons—the curtain will have been rung down or the final bugle will have sounded. Even the top-off game of the season, the great tussle between the service elevens from West Point and Annapolis, will be history in a fortnight and the shouting will have died to the ghost of a whisper.

Between this day and that, though, there will intervene one Saturday and a Thursday studded with nuggets. The greatest of these days from the standpoint of the myriad of Eastern football enthusiasts will be the coming Saturday with a group of contests, headed by the Harvard-Yale game, which will have a great bearing on the award of gridiron honors for the Fall of 1920.

The crowning sensation of a sensational afternoon on Saturday last was the unexpectedly weak opposition which Yale offered the Princeton horde. The Tigers marched north, south, east and west, in whatever direction inclination or the chase of the pigskin led them, without running into any barbed wire entanglements. There was not, in fact, anything to it.

Fought Well in Lost Cause.

Yale offered the best she had as a burnt offering and it was speedily and completely consumed. The Blue never weakened in spirit. It didn't weaken much physically either, but that was because it was never strong. Tad Jones knew beyond a doubt, and, perhaps, the players also, that the only chance Yale had was to hold the score down to modest proportions. Nevertheless the athletes from New Haven were in there taking their medicine without any jelly around it and never whimpering. Even the cripples wanted their share of it.

Princeton has, it may be affirmed without undue audacity, something closely approaching a really great eleven. The aggregation includes no amazing individuals perhaps, although Keck has been superb in the line at times, and Lourie, Garrity and Murrey have shone in the backfield. The Tigers have, however, a team compactness, a playing unity, when going at their best, which means far more in the development of power than the exploits of one or two miracle men.

As the team took the field Saturday in its Nassau fastnesses it had no pronounced weakness whatever. In no department of the play was there a marked flaw. Princeton looked perhaps better against Yale on Saturday than she even did before against the Blue, but that was partially due to the latter's extreme and amazing weakness.

The coming Saturday looks from this distance like anything but a red letter day for the Blue. Indeed, it appears tinged with indigo. Harvard has a remarkably powerful eleven, in sheer might probably superior to Princeton, if that might is properly applied. Every ounce of it will be brought to bear upon the spirited but unfortunate band of Tad Jones's students at the close of this week in the Yale bowl in an effort to equal or exceed the tally credited to the Tigers in the Palmer Stadium. Loyal Yale men will be there by thousands, but loyal Yale dollars will look askance on the affair.

The Fall of the Orange.

The shouldering aside of Syracuse by a young lion from Maryland wearing the fleece of a lamb was a thunderbolt to supporters of the Orange, even more paralyzing than the whipping sustained at the hands of Holy Cross a fortnight earlier. A couple of crack players, backed with determination by their mates, proved able to rush Syracuse off its twenty-two feet at the outset and hold it level for the remainder of the game.

It has become pretty evident that Syracuse, as well as Penn State, was fortunate in having early games staged with Dartmouth instead of late ones. The Green would almost inevitably submerge the Orange nowadays, and would probably force capitulation upon Bezdek's men. With the return of Robertson and one or two other important cogs it is quite possible that Spears has in his charge at present the greatest eleven in the East.

The showing of the Hanoverians on Saturday against the supposedly newly invigorated Quakers at Franklin Field was most impressive. Playing without their captain, they toyed with Penn quite as if they had forgotten there was anything on hand except a little practice affair with Norwich. The home athletes were never able to submit evidence that their excellent work against Pittsburgh was more than a flash in the pan, because the Dartmouth men never gave them a chance to get under way except toward the Red and Blue goal posts.

Cornell's Eleven Strong.

Cornell's easy victory over Columbia could hardly be stamped a surprise, for the Ithacans have a sturdy eleven, despite their trouncing a week earlier by Dartmouth, and Columbia has yet to find herself. There is, in fact, nothing in the local gridiron team's showing for the season to indicate that it is likely to furnish in the near future imposing opposition for any machines of the first flight.

Lehigh picked new laurels by holding the mighty Penn State team to a 7 to 7 tie, the same tally registered by Keady's eleven in its earlier battle with West Virginia. Only one defeat mars Lehigh's record this year, and that was administered by Washington and Jefferson.

That recalls to mind the fact that out of the 1920 gridiron hurly-burly there now stand forth only two Eastern teams of importance which have won every game played. These are Boston College and Virginia Military Institute, the latter, to be sure, rather Southeastern than Eastern. Harvard, Princeton, Penn State, Pittsburgh and Stevens have not been beaten, but each has been tied.

The Cadets and the Middies indulged in gambols against Bowdoin and South Carolina on Saturday that were prolific of points for the service elevens. That imposing score made by West Point against Bowdoin induces new regard for Daly's aggregation and makes prophecy perilous as regards the fray at the Polo Grounds on Nov. 27.

WINS FROM CLAN MACDUFF.

N. Y. Football Club Takes Cup Tie Game in Soccer Tournament.

George Washington Eleven Wants to Cancel Navy Game

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 14.—Football matches on the Academy grounds appear to be over for the present season. George Washington, scheduled to play here next Saturday, has asked to be released from its date. Its management stated that the team was in no condition to play the Navy. The release will probably be granted and no effort made to secure another opponent.

Practice during the coming two weeks will be directed entirely toward getting the team in the best possible shape for the Army game in New York on Nov. 27. Several positions on the team are still in doubt and competition is sharp. Folwell will try to perfect the team in a number of plays which have not been used this season. Practice will be absolutely secret.

OHIO STATE LEADS CONFERENCE TEAMS

Buckeyes, Undefeated, Must Down Illinois Next Saturday to Win Big Ten Honors.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Ohio State now stands at the top of the Western Conference football elevens, but must defeat Illinois next Saturday in order to have an undisputed claim to the championship, for a defeat by Illini would make the situation more doubtful, with possibly three teams claiming first honors. The standings follow:

	Won.	Lost.		Won.	Lost.
Ohio State	4	0	Chicago	2	3
Illinois	4	1	Northwestern	2	3
Wisconsin	3	1	Michigan	1	2
Indiana	2	1	Purdue	0	3
Iowa	3	2	Minnesota	0	5

Victory for Ohio State next Saturday would leave the Buckeyes the only undefeated team. A defeat, however, and victory for Wisconsin over Chicago would give Illinois, Wisconsin and Ohio State a record of one defeat each and an equal claim to the championship on the comparative score, or "dope" basis. Illinois, however, would possess one more victory than either of her competitors and consequently, mathematically would possess the best record and probably would be conceded the championship honors. Under these conditions, Illinois would have five victories and one defeat, with Ohio State and Wisconsin each having a mark of four and one.

The surprising defeat of Illinois on Saturday, when Wisconsin, in a ten-minute spurt of super-football, forward passed its way to two touchdowns and a 14 to 9 victory, has made Ohio State the favorite in Saturday's battle.

Wisconsin's success against Illinois with the forward pass is considered particularly significant in studying Ohio State's chances, for the Buckeye team is considered the greatest forward passing aggregation developed in the Middle West since Eddie Cochems first introduced the aerial style of play at St. Louis University more than a decade ago. The two Workman brothers are particularly adapt at overhead play.

The Illini probably will depend on the "open and close" play—short end runs, off tackle dashes and short passes behind the line of scrimmage. Coach Zuppke expects to spend the week in training his men to break up the Ohio passing game.

Wisconsin, after beating Illinois, is looked on as a favorite in its game with Chicago on Saturday, and Michigan is considered better than Minnesota, which has lost every game. Indiana and Purdue furnish the other Conference game, Northwestern going outside the Conference to play Notre Dame.

Despite the fact that Illinois lost to Wisconsin last Saturday, the coming game between Illinois and Ohio State promises to be the most important played in the West this season. Ohio State will start the favorite because of its record to date. Wisconsin, Chicago, Michigan and Purdue have been defeated by the Buckeyes.

VIRGINIA M. I. IN LEAD.

Heads List of Football Teams in South with Point Score of 409-13.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 14.—Virginia Military Institute, by virtue of yesterday's 98-0 victory over Catholic University, today led all southern college football teams in points scored. The Virginia Military Institute eleven to date has scored 409 points to its opponents' 13 and has yet to suffer defeat. Its list of victories includes the 27-7 defeat of the University of Pennsylvania.

Auburn, in points scored ranks next to Virginia Military Institute in the South with 340 to ts opponens' 15, while Centre College has scored 338 points against 55 by opponents.

Football games in the South yesterday left as teams which have been undefeated this season Alabama University, Georgia University and Virginia Military Institute. Georgia Tech has not been defeated by a Southern eleven, having bowed only to the University of Pittsburgh, while Tulane has suffered defeat only from the University of Michigan.

HARVARD REGULARS TO RESUME DRILLS

'Varsity Football Men Who Have Been Idle Since Tiger Game Will Start Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 14.—Tomorrow the Harvard football forces will be assembled in strongest front on Soldiers Field to start the last four days' workout of the 1920 campaign.

The regulars have not had any football since the final whistle blew in the Princeton game a week ago, although two days last week were spent on earnest signal drill. The offense has been brought up to splendid efficiency, the coaches think, and, while this week the work of rounding out and finishing in the attack will continue, more time really will be spent in shaping up the Crimson defense for Saturday's game in the New Haven bowl.

Six players who will be in the lineup when Saturday's game starts, as well as seven coaches and all the scouts, were at Princeton for the Yale game, and the New Haven team's movements were followed carefully. Coach Fisher on his return said that Yale played some ragged football, but lost most of the breaks, and he told his players they must expect a very different exhibition of football this week. There is no doubt, however, that Harvard's players feel much more confident about beating Yale than they did last Friday night.

The first team will be made up tomorrow, when the coaches will decide whether to keep Paxon at left tackle or to place Sedgwick back in his place, and whether Gaston or Crocker will be at right end will also be determined. Gaston looked none too good in the Brown game. Fitts and Churchill will be kept alternating at right halfback all the week, and which man will start at New Haven probably will not be decided until the day of the game.

DARTMOUTH IN GOOD SHAPE.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 14.—With every man in perfect condition except Captain Jim Robertson, the green eleven will begin tomorrow the week's drill in preparation for Saturday's battle with Brown at Boston. The squad returned from Philadelphia this afternoon after a landslide victory over Penn and has already begun to get set for the annual tilt with Brown.

Merritt and Threshie received minor injuries, which will not hurt their condition in the least, and Bower, whose whirlwind fullback play was a sensation, was also in good shape, although a bit banged up. No Green regular will be out of form for the Brown game, and the squad is resolved to upset the jinx which has rested on Dartmouth for four years.

With such a showing as the Spearsmen made against Pennsylvania, Dartmouth followers are looking for a decisive victory against the Brunonians. The coaches, remembering Brown's traditional fight, are going to give the squad a stiff series of sessions in order to prevent any weakness from creeping in.

There is every liklihood that Captain Robertson will start the battle at the Hub, and his return will round out the machine.

Had Looked for Better Showing in Football Game with Lehigh.

Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 14.—Although the showing of the Penn State eleven against Lehigh yesterday was a big disappointment, it should stimulate practice for the Pitt game. The inclination to let up and take things easy that has prevailed during the past week thoroughly disappeared during the final quarter of the game, and the men now realize that they have hard work ahead if they are to win on Thanksgiving Day.

Lehigh's unexpectedly strong showing took the 'Varsity by surprise, and it was only by heroic efforts in the final quarter, when the team awoke to its danger, that the score was tied. Once started, the drive of the Bezdek eleven was not to be stopped, but it started too late. Lehigh played a strong, heady game and made the most of every opportunity.

With the exception of Killinger, all of the State players came through the game in good shape.

ROBINS WIN FROM TEBO.

Dry Dockers Beat Yacht Basin Soccer Team by 3 Goals to 1.

Robins Dry Dock and Tebo Yacht Basin soccers, Brooklyn rivals, clashed in the second round for the A. F. A. Cup at Todd Field yesterday, and after a keen contest hugely enjoyed by the large crowd the Robins won by the score of 2 goals to 1. The three points all came within the space of about ten minutes in the first half.

NOTRE DAME MAY MEET PENN STATE

Negotiations Progressing for Intersectional Gridiron Match in New York.

Two of the undefeated football elevens of the country may meet in an intersectional match in New York at the Polo Grounds, if negotiations now in progress carry through. President Charles A. Stoneham of the New York Baseball Club was informed last week that Penn State and Notre Dame universities were conducting negotiations for a post-season game, but that the main hitch in the arrangements was inability to agree upon a site for the battle. Mr. Stoneham thereupon sent representatives to both institutions to offer the use of the Polo Grounds, and it was stated at the offices of the New York club last night that it was almost certain that the game would be played in New York on Dec. 4.

Mr. Stoneham's representative placed the offer before Head Coach Hugo Bezdek and Graduate Manager Earl Fleming at State College last Thursday afternoon, and held a further conference with C. W. Hepperstall, Chairman of the Alumni Advisory Board, at Pittsburgh, Thursday night. The Faculty Athletic Committee of Penn State is expected to reach a final decision in the matter next Thursday night. Bezdek will probably have the final word in the decision. He refused last week to commit himself to any definite arrangement, saying that he wished to reserve judgment until after the Penn State-Pittsburgh game on Thanksgiving Day.

The entire student body of Notre Dame is in favor of the game, according to reports that have come out of the West. Head Coach K. K. Rockne also approves. The Westerners would like to have the game played on their home gridiron, but declare that New York is their second choice. Rockne voiced the general Notre Dame idea when he said: "We want to prove to the whole world that our 1920 team is the last word in modern football."

Father Carey, Chairman of the Faculty Athletic Committee at Notre Dame, said that he would have a meeting tomorrow, Nov. 16, to consider the proposition. Father Carey thought it would be best to hold the game on the home field of one or the other of the two colleges, but others in Notre Dame expressed the belief that, if the majority favored New York, Father Carey would be willing to acquiesce.

MOORE TO SKATE TONIGHT.

Sprint Champion Entered in Races at 181st Street Ice Palace.

Joe Moore, international sprint champion, will be one of the first starters in the second series of handicap skating races to be held tonight at the 181st Street Ice Skating Palace. He captured both the 220-yard and two-mile handicap races in Philadelphia a week ago. Other entries will be William Murphy, national one-mile champion; Don Robinson, metropolitan one-mile titleholder; Leslie Boyd, metropolitan indoor and outdoor champion, and Don Baker, metropolitan quarter-mile champion. The same men will race at the Philadelphia Ice Palace next Monday evening.

Erie Wins at Soccer.

Wins Soccer Game at Greenport.

Paulist A. C. to Send Olympic Stars After X-Country Title

A quartet of America's Olympic team members will strive to bring the National A. A. U. senior cross-country championship title to the Paulist A. C. in the annual title race which will be held next Sunday at Boston. Al Hulsebosch, Winged P. hill and dale captain, who competed at Antwerp, last night announced the personnel of the team which will carry the club's colors in the Hub test. In addition to Hulsebosch, the Olympic competitors include Pat Flynn, Max Bohland and Frank Zuna. Other members of the team include Eddie Garvey, John Losero, Arthur Fogel and Edward Walsh. This combination is generally conceded a strong chance for victory against the teams of the Dorchester Club and the Pittsburgh A. A., the only other two teams expected to start in the chase.

ELIS IN GOOD SHAPE AFTER HARD GAME

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 14.—The Yale football eleven went to Gedney Farms near White Plains this morning, having returned from Princton after yesterday's game and spending the evening at the New York Yale Club. The players will relax and rest at the country place near White Plains till Tuesday morning, when they will return to this city in time for afternoon practice. Trainer John Mack said tonight by long distance telephone that all the players were in good physical shape and that not one showed signs of yesterday's combat.

Malcolm Aldrich, who played the second half before he had quite recovered from a sprained ankle, felt improved by his strenuous experience at Tigertown and Trainer Mack believes that he can play the entire game against Harvard here next Saturday. Aldrich is regarded by many as the most likely candidate for Captain next year. He was substitute half back last season and is baseball shortstop.

The coaches were undecided about the backfield against Harvard. At present the sentiment favors using Murphy at quarterback as field general, but holding Kempton back to catch punts. Aldrich and Frank Kelly will positively be started as two of the backfield. Howard Campbell's defensive game yesterday was a great disappointment.

All Yale believes that the eleven will make a much more brilliant showing against Harvard than yesterday at Tigertown. The Yale Daily News will point out editorially tomorrow that the team has a lot of strength which has yet been unrevealed, and the college has faith that it will appear next Saturday. The News will say that because of incessant injuries, the team has not been long together as a unit this Fall, and that the eleven which faced Princeton was new in composition, but that the team should find itself against Harvard and present a better showing.

The team will be given a loyal welcome home as a Yale team which deserves well of the college. There will be no severe scrimmage this week, but the practice Tuesday and Wednesday will include some rugged Harvard formations.

AUTO SALON SHOWS MOTOR ARISTOCRACY

SEVERAL MAKES AT $15,000

Careful Buyer May Select a Stylish Model at Price Verging Toward $10,000.

With nearly one hundred cars on exhibition, the sixteenth annual Automobile Salon was opened last night at the Hotel Commodore. It was the first time the Salon has chosen Sunday night to inaugurate its motor exhibition, which will be continued through the week, but the attendance was highly satisfactory.

The cars, which occupy all of the large Commodore ballroom, besides the corridor and one or two adjoining rooms, are representatives of the aristocracy in motor vehicles. Nearly all of the foreign cars on exhibition, and they represent nine different makes from four European countries, appear to be in the $15,000 class. Careful inspection, however, will discover some very well equipped cars in which no reasonable person would be ashamed to be seen on the avenue at a price verging toward the $10,000 limit.

The eleven makes of American cars contain models ranging in value from $6,000 to $10,000 and over, the higher prices being due to select custom coach work with the perfection of every detail for convenience and luxury.

Of the foreign countries, England, France, Italy and Belgium are represented. One of the features is the first appearance in this country since the beginning of the World War of the Belgian Minerva car. Long before the war this car had established a reputation in Europe, and about 215 were imported to America by private owners. So far as records can be obtained nearly all are still giving good service. The two Minerva cars in the show, which were consigned a few days ago to the new agency here headed by Paul Ostruk, are a four-cylinder chassis and a six-cylinder model equipped with a club sedan body made by the Brooks-Ostruk Company of this city. The latter has a 143-inch wheel base, and its specially designed spring suspension makes it a wonderfully easy riding machine. The four-cylinder type has a wheel base of 132 inches. The larger car has been sold to a New York motorist for about $15,000.

Three Makes of French Cars.

Italy has one exhibit, the popular Lancia, shown in a sporty runabout and a richly finished town car. There are three French makes, the Renault, of which more are in use here than any other French car, the Panhard and the Delage. The first new Panhards to arrive in America since the war came here a few months ago, and the Delage is virtually a newcomer, although one closed car of that make was shown at the Salon last year. The Delage six-cylinder chassis will repay inspection, and another one has a gorgeous buff brougham type body, with walnut trim, giving a very distinctive appearance. The Panharus are a chassis, a limousine and a town car.

England is represented by the Rolls-Royce, Sunbeam, Napier and Lanchester cars. The latter is an entirely new car to this country. The single exhibit is shown with a rich closed body and in price it ranks among the most expensive motor vehicles ever imported to America. The Napier, which has had a great vogue in England for many years, is seen here for the first time in five years. It is shown in a chassis, six-cylinder and a large touring car finished in light gray. With a tree use of aluminum and special grades of steel a considerable reduction in weight from the older models has been effected. The working parts of the engine are enclosed and the valves, of the overhead type, have a simple actuating mechanism mounted on a single detachable head, enclosed within an aluminum oil-tight cover.

Rolls-Royce Models Exhibited.

The well known Rolls-Royce cars are shown in half a dozen different body models, two being cabriolets of the so-called Salamanca design, as the first of the type, it was said, was made for the Duke of Salamanca. This is the nearest that the Salon comes this year to Spanish influences, there being an absence, as was the case last year, of cars ostensibly built for the King of Spain. One of these Salamanca cabriolets has an English-made body and the other is the creation of a New York automobile coachmaker. A limousine brougham in maroon with black panels upholstered in Bedford cord represents the luxurious comfort usually associated with the Rolls-Royce cars. With the exhibition is a Rolls-Royce Eagle aviation engine of the type used in the London-Paris aviation passenger service.

The Sunbeam cars are another important English motor exhibit. The first models since the war were brought here last year, but since the last Salon show very few have arrived. The cars in the present show are of both the four and six cylinder types, shown in chassis and finished bodies.

Of the American cars on exhibition, all of which present fully as good an appearance as their foreign competitors, are the Winton, Brewster, Cunningham, Locomobile, Pierce-Arrow, Collins, Duesenberg, Meteor, Packard, Daniels and Porter. The Meteor is a new car and is shown with one of the new 80-horsepower Duesenberg engines, a low hung European body, double service brake control, four speed transmission and a V-type radiator. Some of these cars form the exhibits of the leading American coach builders, in which the attractive lines of the body and the many luxurious fittings form the chief part of the exhibition.

THREE ZINC MINES CLOSED.

Special to The New York Times.

BUTTE, Mon., Nov. 14.–Because of lack of demand for zinc three Butte mines of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company discontinued production last night. About 500 men are affected. Similar action was taken by the Butte Superior Company several days ago.

"Since August there has been no demand and no sale for zinc," John Gillie, General Manager of mines of the Anaconda Company, declared in a statement. "We have been producing zinc at full capacity about 10,000,000 pounds a month. Production will be cut to 5,000,000 a month."

Mr. Gillie asserted that further curtailment of production of zinc or copper or reduction of wages had not been discussed by officials of his company. Officials of the mining companies in the Butte district made similar statements.

STOVE EXPLOSION HURTS 3.

Cartridges Believed to Have Caused Accident in Brooklyn Home.

Three children were injured when a coal stove exploded in the home of Mrs. Maria Alberelli, at 2,330 Pacific Street, Brooklyn, last night. They are Phillip, 10 years old; John, 4, and Antoinette, 8. They were treated by an ambulance surgeon from St. Mary's Hospital and remained home.

Detectives from the Brownsville Station said they believed some one had thrown cartridges into the coal.

NORWAY LIKES OUR GOODS.

Trade Agent Says Automobiles and Farm Machinery Stand Highest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The popularity of American goods in Norway is described in a report to the Department of Commerce by Trade Commissioner Nels A. Bengston, which says that American automobiles and trucks are so predominant that they give a distinct American touch to street traffic in many of the cities.

Agricultural machinery is also prominent, and as a whole the United States now ranks first in the trade in metal manufacture as well as first in the imports of leather goods and second in textiles and clothing.

Discussing the opportunities for American products in the Norwegian market, Commissioner Bengston reports that in general the high quality of American tools and mechanism is conceded, and the expression is frequently heard that American goods rank first in quality, although somewhat higher in price than the same type of goods from the United Kingdom, Sweden or Germany.

NEW HAVEN TO CUT STAFF.

Pearson Says Reductions Will Follow Drop in Freight Business.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 14.—President Pearson of the New Haven Railroad said tonight that as the freight business of the system was slowing down, some reductions in men were being made.

"They will be slight in number," he added. "Current reductions will be made to correspond with the current volume of business. The freight business of the railroad has fallen off to some extent, and it is necessary to adjust the railroad payrolls along similar lines. However, the number of men involved is small."

CLOTHIERS IN DRIVE FOR SAVING DEVICES

PLAN UNIFORM ACCOUNTING

Will Spend $150,000 to Establish Standard Methods in the Industry.

A campaign to increase factory efficiency and to lower the cost of manufacture by the use of devices which will conserve time, labor and money was announced yesterday by the International Association of Garment Manufacturers, 320 Broadway, as a result of the public demand for lower clothing prices and the added fact that manufacturers in all garment lines are forced to sell their merchandise at prices said to be frequently below the cost of production.

A. F. Allison, Secretary of the association, asserted yesterday that its representatives were searching for machinery and equipment which will enable the manufacturer of garments and clothing to meet the demands of the consumer. One of the latest money-savers to be approved, Mr. Allison said, is a machine to sharpen and repoint needles. Millions of sewing machine needles are used annually by members of the association, who spend many thousands of dollars on this item alone. The needle pointer, he asserted, will cut needle bills one-third. Sharp needles, also, save power and leather belting and do better work in every way.

The factory supply department of the association has recommended an automatic counter clamp for use in cutting cloths, which performs the dual service of holding the flimsiest material without injury, and at the same time records the number of layers of cloth by an automatic counter. Heretofore, Mr. Allison explained, it was customary among garment and clothing manufacturers to employ stone, metal or wood weights or spikes to hold layers of cloth together until a given number of layers had been piled up, counting the individual layers until the correct number had been laid on the cutting board. This operation consumed considerable time and had the greater disadvantage of allowing too much possibility for error.

Another machine which came to the attention of the department recently is one which will effect tremendous saving in tying packages. Many manufacturers of garments or clothing for both men and women ship their products by express or parcels post often in small lots, with a few garments in each package. Thousands of the familiar shirt boxes are used annually, and these have heretofore been tied by hand, requiring the services of a great many bundlers whose speed was necessarily slow.

An improvement of an entirely different type is a blue paint for use on factory windows and skylight to filter the sunlight, eliminating the glare and disseminating the light through the entire plant. In spite of its color it has been found that this paint does not spread a blue light, but that instead it filters the rays of the sun eliminating the heat and glare, permitting the passage of a soft, cool light that has been found highly efficient in providing easier conditions for factory workers.

The association is also about to spend $150,000 in establishing uniform cost accounting methods in the garment and clothing industry, it was announced. The Cost Accounting Committee will issue a report to the trade today outlining the results of months of investigation and research in an effort to find a standard costing method. The financing and details of the plan will be unique in that a service bureau and school will be established on an underwriting basis and continued and developed on a self-sustaining basis.

A preliminary report as to the operation of the new Bureau of Uniform Cost Accounting is to be compiled by the committee and submitted at the semi-annual convention of the International Association of Garment Manufacturers, which begins at the Waldorf on Dec. 8.

GIMBELS PLACE ORDERS TO ENCOURAGE TRADE

Seek to Stimulate Confidence by Laying in Spring Lines for Normal Business.

In a statement on conditions in the wholesale and retail markets given out yesterday, Gimbel Brothers, whose stores in Philadelphia and here do a yearly business of $75,000,000, announce that they have begun their Spring buying in lines wherein the manufacturers have been able to standardize prices. The Gimbels point out that business and confidence must be re-established and that it devolves on the producer to set prices which he can stand by. The statement, in part, says:

"Labor must be kept employed; mills throughout the land must be heartened by real orders to set in motion wheels already stopped and to speed up those that are running.

"No sane manufacturer will at this time make goods without orders, because, however carefully he figures, he would have to force the goods for sale if they did not move quickly and pocket new losses.

"Prices are not done coming down, though some lines have struck the cellar, and must rebound a bit to reach a live-and-let-live basis. But a start must be made somewhere to re-establish business and confidence. The pessimist will create worse havoc if the optimist does not prevail over him.

A "buying strike" of the public is seriously affecting the hide, shoe and leather industries, according to an article appearing in Hide and Leather, which believes a give-and-take policy on the part of the shoe merchants and the general public would contribute to the return of business prosperity in general. Speaking of the situation, the writer says:

"The shoe and leather industries are stagnant today, awaiting more active buying of shoes by the public at large. In other words, the public, goaded by extremely high prices demanded by shoe merchants, have gone on a buying strike, as far as possible. Shoe retailers assert that they ask only reasonable profit today. But there is another side to the story.

"Early this year hides, leather and shoes were high and sales continued brisk up to early Summer. Then prices began subsiding. Tanners withdrew from the markets for hides and skins, which have continued declining until today prices are less than one-half what they were some months ago. Many tanners, caught with large numbers of costly hides and skins in the tanning process, now realize they must face heavy loss to sell this leather.

"Shoe manufacturers have suffered severely from shrinkage in values of leather and shoes. And shoe wholesalers and retailers are today carrying stocks of shoes for which they paid far higher figures than asked today.

"Many retailers are facing the situation with courage. They are cutting prices considerably to the public. But this downward action should be general all over the country."

COOPERAGE WORKS CLOSE.

1,000 Men Are Thrown Out of Work in Poplar Bluff, Mo.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Nov. 14.—The mills of the Brooklyn Cooperage Company, a branch of the American Sugar Refinery here, were closed indefinitely last night, unsettled conditions precipitating the shut-down, according to Manager W. N. Barron.

The concern had approximately 1,000 employes, including those at the mills and others handling forestry products.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Situation on the Stock Exchange and in Commodities, After a Trying Week.

It was said repeatedly on Wall Street, during last week's persistent and heavy declines in all markets, that something must have happened in the business community of which the public had not learned. As a matter of fact, nothing had happened or was happening except what any intelligent watcher of the business situation should have known more than three months ago. It was then clearly apparent what kind of position had been created by the infatuated speculation which had been pursued for a year on the basis of widely extended credit, and which had been continued up to the very moment when the banks had to take in sail and the consuming public stopped buying.

The idea was more or less prevalent that the awkward consequences had been averted at that time by a quick response of the mercantile community to the Federal Reserve Board's warnings, and so they might have been if merchants and producers generally had recognized and accepted the situation. Unfortunately the belief was widespread that the Reserve Board had exaggerated the matter, that prices of merchandise which were falling in the Spring because of tight money would advance again in the Autumn because of curtailed production.

Business concerns which greatly over-extended and which could not get their loans renewed, naturally had to sell their goods at once; everybody saw the evidence of that liquidation in midsummer, not only in the "million-dollar clothing sales," but in the host of small retail shops which suddenly sprang into existence, offering standard goods at heavy reductions. But that represented only the selling which could not be deferred. Other large accumulations of merchandise were stubbornly withheld from market, in the hope of a better Autumn business. Even the manufacturers postponed their "Spring announcements" for weeks beyond the customary date. When these large producers gave up hope of anything but much lower prices, the holders of the unsold blocks of merchandise knew that further delay on their own part was impossible. The events of the past fortnight, and especially of the past week, have been the quite inevitable consequence.

Persistence in the idea of a return to the old high prices has been costly. It was remarked last week that the election had influenced the dry goods market, but only because holders of merchandise, who ought to have liquidated long ago, stuck to their position because things were "bound to be better after election," thus leaving an accumulated selling pressure to occur when the hope was disappointed; that the Grain Growers' propaganda for $3 wheat did influence the grain market, but only because of the belief instilled that our farmers would deliberately sacrifice their own trade to Canada; that the Night Riders and the Southern conventions did influence the cotton market, but only because of apprehension that, if the marketing of cotton were actually to be checked, the Southern banks whose funds were tied up in it would be left in an awkward situation. To the extent suggested, the obsession of a new advance in prices, supported by these incidents, undoubtedly have had a hand in the recent markets.

So far as concerns the actual strain on credit, due to coincidence of the demands of ordinary trade with the demands of speculative dealers who had overstayed their market, it is possible that the worst is over. What Wall Street calls the "peak" of the money stringency would ordinarily have occurred by the middle of November, and in fact the statement published yesterday for the entire Federal Reserve system shows at least some relaxation of the strain. A week ago, both the total loan account and the total note circulation of the twelve Reserve Banks reached the high mark of their history, having increased almost uninterruptedly since the middle of September. Last week their loans decreased $53,900,000 and their outstanding notes $35,800,000, and the ratio of reserve, although its improvement was only fractional, is nevertheless higher than any since Oct. 1.

To what extent a lightening of the burden in that quarter will cause easier money and a halt in the movement of liquidation depends on the character of the position which is left in business enterprise after this month's violent readjustment. There is still much to be straightened out; for the fall in commodity prices and the congestion of credit markets have affected not only home but foreign trade; and in some of these industries, bills payable are just now as precarious an account as inventories. Nevertheless, very many staple products are selling today at what are intrinsically bargain prices. The stock market habitually "discounts" the future rather than the present, and all markets must be influenced by the money situation.

NEW PENNSYLVANIA RECORD.

Road's October Freight Traffic the Biggest in Its History.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The highest recorded volume of freight traffic ever transported by the Pennsylvania Railroad system was handled during October, according to an announcement made tonight by the company. Reports from all divisions, the statement says, show that during the month an average of nearly 24,000 loaded cars per day were forwarded to their destinations. This represents more than 870,000 tons of freight a day loaded on the Pennsylvania Railroad or accepted by it from connecting lines.

The nearest approach to these figures were those of October, 1919, when the daily average of loaded cars handled was [illegible]

Refineries in the United States

At the beginning of 1920 there were 373 refineries in the United States, with 99 additional plants building. The daily capacity was about 1½ million barrels, and the new plants under construction would provide about ¼ million barrels daily additional. The majority of these plants are located in Texas, Oklahoma and Pennsylvania, although California shows considerable refining capacity. Owing to the stringency in money and curtailed profits in recent months a great many small plants have closed down and temporarily discontinued operations. Many of these plants are located at great disadvantage, which gives the general refining business a somewhat precarious aspect.

MANY SAFE INVESTMENTS

Returned Financier Believes the Continent Has Escaped from the Peril of Bolshevism.

Social unrest in most parts of Europe is more apparent than real, according to W. S. Kies, Chairman of the Board of the First Federal Foreign Banking Association, who has just returned from a three-months' trip through England, France, Belgium, Holland, Italy and the Central European countries. While far-reaching social and economic changes are going on, with all that entails, Mr. Kies thinks the continent has escaped from the peril of Bolshevism, and everywhere, he says, he found evidences of a desire to return to stable conditions and an appreciation for the need of increasing production. Speaking of the general outlook, as viewed through American eyes, Mr. Kies said:

"American exporters are naturally interested in the safety of credits to Europe. European bankers discourage the acceptance of short-term credits, because of the great fluctuation in exchange. On the other hand, the feeling of confidence in the future is shown by the willingness of bankers in many countries to recommend three to five-year credits, and in some instances to guarantee such credits. The coming Winter and Spring are dreaded and clients are advised against making commitments which would require dollar exchange within the next six months.

"While the credit of many of the countries of continental Europe is low, nevertheless, there are large industries, and many of them are prosperous and constitute fairly good credit risks, especially where responsible bankers are willing to guarantee such credit, as is the case in many of the countries. There is no reason why consignments of raw materials should not be sent to Europe in limited amounts, the goods to be sold from such consignments for cash. The development of the consignment system would be a great help to Europe at the present time and could be carried on in most of the continental countries with a minimum of risk.

"There are safe investment opportunities in the neutral countries, also in France, and especially in Belgium. These opportunities are in seasoned securities based on land and fundamental values, which can be purchased on a 7 per cent. to 8 per cent. income basis with great possibilities of profit over a period of years arising out of the present low rates of exchange. As the investors of the United States become educated to the possibilities of sound and profitable investment in Europe, the exchange situation will be benefitted in proportion to the volume of the investment."

PLAN AID TO 300,000 JEWISH ORPHANS

Distribution Committee's Program Includes System of "Financial Adoptions."

Broad plans to care for and bring up Jewish war orphans in all countries were announced yesterday by the Joint Distribution Committee of which Felix Warburg is Chairman.

Three hundred thousand Jewish orphans, scattered over Europe and the Near East, dying rapidly and living in misery, are to be rescued, largely through the help of American Jews. The plan has been carefully worked out on a scale suited to the magnitude of the problem, and the co-operation of all Jewish organizations is required.

"The future of the children of Europe," said Mr. Warburg, "affects not alone the future of the Jewish people throughout the world, but the well-being of all the countries of Europe and of the Near East.

"It is recognized by the committee that it is both impracticable and unwise to attempt to solve the problem through the emigration of any large number of orphans, either to America or the South.

"The committee's effort will be directed along the line of developing the orphans in each country into the most useful and patriotic citizens of the country of which they are natives, and especial pains are to be taken to direct their lives toward producing from the soil, rather than in the lines of trade.

"To grapple successfully with this problem, the sympathy and interest of the Jewish people of the United States must be secured, especially of the women, to whom the subject of the welfare of these hundreds of thousands of children should appeal with particular force, as was true of the appeals made during the war in behalf of the children of France, Belgium, Serbia and other nations."

The first step in the program is to enlist a great number of American Jews who will agree to give $100 a year a piece for the support of the orphans in Europe. The second is to bring about the reunion of Jewish war orphans with close relations in the United States.

The program includes a system of financial adoption, like those of the Funds for French War Orphans. The financial foster-parents in this country will not cintribute impersonally to a fund, but to the care of a given child. They will be supplied with photographs and a history of the child and kept informed of his or her progress. Arrangements will be made for correspondence between the foster-parent and the child.

A complete census of war orphans in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Austria and other countries of Central and Eastern Europe and Palestine is to be undertaken and a system of uniform records created. All Jewish synagogues, societies, organizations, trades unions and other agencies of Jewish life in America are sought for membership in the big relief organization projected.

The work is directly under the control of the War Orphan's Committee, made up of New Yorkers, under the chairmanship of Major Solomon Lowenstein of the Red Cross.

FAIL TO FIND FLIERS.

Men of Submarine Chaser Made Ill by Exposure In Search.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Submarine Chaser 419, which has been exploring the lake in storm and calm for trace of the bodies of the three naval fliers who left Great Lakes Wednesday morning in the HS-2-L limped into Sheboygan, Wis., today with its radio and heating apparatus damaged.

The commanding officer, Lieut. R. C. McDuffie, and three of the crew had developed pneumonia. They were taken to the Marine Hospital at Sheboygan, where their condition is critical. The news came to Lieut Com. Eugene E. Wilson, in charge of aviation at Great Lakes, last night.

"Think of those fellows out on the lake, freezing, unable to get a bit of heat, yet doggedly keeping up the search," said Commander Wilson. "I understand that the four in the hospital are in pretty bad shape, the result of exposure."

Commander Wilson believes that the aviators have perished.

OIL MONOPOLY FOR JAPAN.

Proposal for Government Control to Come Before Parliament.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—James F. Abbott, American Commercial Attaché at Tokio, reported today to the Department of Commerce that proposals looking toward a Government monopoly of petroleum in Japan would be made when the Japanese Parliament meets in January. While nothing definite has yet been decided upon, Mr. Abbott reports, the proposed monopoly is likely to affect all Japanese possessions as well as the oilfields in Japan proper.

Japan produced about one-half of 1 per cent. of the world's crude petroleum in 1919 and its production has shown a steady decline since 1916, when 123,358,416 gallons were produced. The total for 1919 did not reach much more than 90,600,000 gallons.

The Japanese Government oil monopoly is being proposed chiefly in order to guarantee supplies for the navy and new wells have been bored in Formosa with rather indifferent results. The Eclugo fields, which produce about 60 per cent. of Japan's supply, showed a decline of about 10 per cent. in production during 1919. The decline in production is attributed somewhat to increased difficulties in the way of importing well-boring apparatus since the armistice, and this, Dr. Abbott believes, has undoubtedly impeded the development of new sources.

The decline in Japanese production of crude oil has been accompanied by a growing demand for benzine, the output increasing from 240,000 cases in 1914 to 1,000,000 cases in 1919. Notwithstanding this increased output, the consumption exceeds the supply of benzine by about 40 per cent. and the imports have increased from 178,000 cases in 1914 to 268,000 cases in 1919, principally due to the automobile consumption. This condition is being reflected in the price of gasoline, which has practically doubled since 1914. The 1914 price of 45 cents to 50 cents rose to $1 per gallon toward the close of 1919. In February, 1920, the price had receded to 80 cents per gallon.

Mr. Abbott remarks in his report that the effect of monopolization on prices will be an interesting development.

TAKING IMMIGRANTS' MONEY.

Large Sums Given Up to Bring Relatives to This Country.

How hundreds of immigrants are being cheated by unscrupulous bankers, whose clientele is drawn largely from comparatively newcomers to America, who wish to send funds to friends and relatives in the "old country" that they may come to the new land, is told in an article in Better Times, a magazine devoted to the interests of the 2,000 public welfare and charitable agencies in New York City. Hungarian immigrants have been especially victimized, according to Better Times.

"Knowing that 75 per cent. of the Hungarians in America," the article reads, "wish to send for friends in Hungary to enable them to escape the distressing living conditions of that country, these bankers advertise in the foreign language press that they will transport these persons, although they are aware that at present no Hungarians are allowed to enter this country.

"A woman who visited one of these bankers over seven months ago in response to such an advertisement paid him $230 to bring her niece to America. She was told at the time that the girl would probably be here the following month. Each month since she has returned to the office to inquire why the girl has not arrived, and has been put off with renewed assurances and promises that the girl is sure to arrive the following month.

"Unless the banker is acting in defiance of the immigration law he is simply waiting until restrictions against Hungarians entering the United States are removed, in the meantime having the use of the woman's money. The contract, which is written in English, also states that if for any reason the girl cannot be brought here the banker shall retain the fee paid him by the woman, which amounts to $30, the balance being for transportation expenses. Furthermore, the contract sets no time limit for the return of the passage money, even if the person paid for is debarred indefinitely.

"This story is a typical example of many cases which special investigators have discovered during the last year."

LAYING OFF HUNDREDS.

Baltimore Plants Curtail and Lodging Houses Are Filling.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14.—Laying off men by the hundreds in plants that employ several thousands is now under way, partly due to the season and partly to curtailment of operations. It is felt, however, that the present situation is temporary.

One of the first effects of the situation has been to fill to capacity the Levering, an institution where 25 cents means a night's lodging and another "two bits" will pay for a breakfast. Other lodging houses in the city also are filling up. Hundreds of men who were about the State on jobs are coming into the city, as yesterday was the date set for many layoffs.

The State Roads Commission has suspended work on thirty-one jobs, throwing 1,000 men out of work.

At Sparrows Point about 200 machinists were laid off yesterday, but many of these will get work in other departments.

Between 400 and 500 men at the Baltimore Dry Docks and Shipbuilding Company have been informed they will not be needed after the next ship is completed. Plasterers are idle because they want $10 a day.

SEIGEL SEES WAY TO SAVE.

Congressman Says Overlapping Bureaus Cost Billion or More.

Congressman Isaac Siegel addressed the Institutional Synagogue Forum at Public School 184, West 116th Street, last night, on "The Duties of the Next Congress." He dwelt chiefly on the need for economy in the public service, which he said could be run at a saving of one billion and a half dollars a year if the overlapping in the various departments could be done away with.

Mr. Siegel gave it as his opinion that if immigration continued at the present rate, over a million people will have made this country their homes this year. He said that conditions at Ellis Island were improving and he hoped that an under secretary of the Labor Department soon would be stationed on the island to give final rulings on appeals made by aliens desiring to enter the country, instead of having men and women kept for weeks waiting for the officials at Washington to make decisions.

LAKE STEAMER WRECKED.

Part of Crew Still Aboard Freighter on Pancake Shoals.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Nov. 14.—The Becker Line steamer Francis J. Widlar is wrecked on Pancake Shoals, ten miles northeast of Whitefish Bay and Captain Arthur Forbes of Astabula, Ohio, in command of the vessel, has been taken aboard the Steamer Livingston, due to reach here tomorrow forenoon, according to a wireless message from Captain Forbes to the Canadian Soo wireless station late tonight.

Captain Forbes, in his message, asked that an attempt be made to take off the remainder of his crew from the Widlar. It is assumed here that a part of the crew was taken aboard the steamer Livingstone with Captain Forbes. The Widlar is a complete wreck, according to Captain Forbes's message.

SOFT COAL PRICES SHOW BIG DECLINES

FINDS SHORTAGE ENDED

Declares Supply Is Now Adequate to Meet All Demands—Output 12,000,000 Tons Weekly.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Advices received from all over the country indicate a persistent falling off in the price of bituminous coal at the mines, according to the National Coal Association. In many of the soft coal fields, according to the association, the decline has been from 25 to 50 per cent. below prices of six weeks ago. A very optimistic view of the situation is taken by the association in a statement tonight. The association says:

"Greatly advanced output of soft coal, running for a period of over two months, has been responsible for the easier situation, with attendant drop in mine prices. During that time the average bituminous output has run around 12,000,000 tons a week, enabling operators to make up deficiencies in immediate supply and to start the country well on the way toward storing coal for Winter use.

"Although the bituminous output for the week ended Nov. 6, as reported by the United States Geological Survey, reached only 11,355,000 tons, due to Election Day and religious holidays in the coal fields, unofficial reports indicate that the production for last week, ended Nov. 13, will run appreciably over the 12,000,000-ton mark. In every way the soft coal situation has vastly improved within the last few weeks. No longer are there any immediate shortages reported anywhere through the country. Great manufacturing plants in dire need of soft coal early in the Fall now have an ample supply on hand. Public utilities everywhere have had their immediate wants filled, while many of them have been able to provide themselves with stocks for the Winter.

Reports All Communities Supplied.

"The household situation, which was acute in parts of the Central West and other portions of the country early in the Fall, has now improved, so that, so far as the National Coal Association is concerned, there are no communities in actual need of bituminous coal for domestic uses at this time.

"With the soft coal situation standing as it does today, it is only natural that prices for the product, wherever they were high, have fallen. As the National Coal Association, pointed out months ago, prices were bound to drop whenever the supply of soft coal reached the point of equaling the demand.

"With adequate railroad transportation, which the railroad officials promise, so that the bituminous output may be maintained at approximately 12,000,000 tons a week, prices in coal at the mines will undergo a further decline until the bottom is reached. The fact is that there is no occasion for coal consumers at this time to be paying unreasonable prices for soft coal.

"The clearing up of the soft coal situation has been due to the aggressive co-operation of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the railroad executives in the efforts of bituminous coal operators to attain an output sufficient to meet all the demands of the country. Through the priority orders issued by the commission during the Summer and Fall and carried into effect by the railroads, the operators have been able to get the open top cars needed to transport the volume of coal required to overcome the shortages."

Wentz Gives Credit to Railroads.

In commenting upon the soft coal situation today, Colonel D. B. Wentz of Philadelphia, President of the National Coal Association, said:

"The country has been saved from the disastrous possibility of a soft coal shortage this Winter. For that it has the Interstate Commerce Commission and the railroads to thank for wholehearted co-operation with the operators in what has been a tremendous task.

"It is gratifying, at the same time, to remark the steady drop in prices of soft coal at the mines, wherever prices have been high.

"The bituminus coal industry as a whole has consistently endeavored to keep prices within bounds throughout the shortage, and the bulk of the operators have sold at reasonable prices.

"Had it not been for unfortunate and unscrupulous speculation in some quarters there would have been no excessive prices in the market. This speculation, however, has now been almost entirely eradicated. The approach to normal supply has been a dominating factor in bringing high prices down."

ORDERS COAL CAR INQUIRY.

I. C. C. to Take Measures to Uncover Violations of Law in Distribution.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. — Strong measures to uncover alleged violations of the law in the distribution of coal cars are to be taken soon by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Orders calling for an investigation of alleged discrimination in the distribution of coal cars were entered on Nov. 3, but commission officials explained today that the press of other business had prevented the beginning of the inquiry.

The investigation, which will be made by Chairman Clark and Commissioners Potter and Aitchison, is expected to take the form either of direct examination of the books and papers of the railroads and shippers prior to a hearing or the holding of a public hearing at which such persons would be required to appear as the commission might direct. The latter course will probably be adopted, officials said, and a date will be set for the hearing as soon as the crowded condition of the commission's docket will permit.

Findings of the commission, it was explained, will be published in the official report of the result of the investigation. Any developments warranting prosecution would be in the hands of the Attorney General who would proceed on the basis of the report. Such practices as might come within the jurisdiction of the commission to remedy, however, would be made the subject of additional rules and regulations.

Man Dressed as Army Officer Collects Funds from French Government.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—A young man wearing the uniform of a French Lieutenant recently obtained 786,000 francs [about $157,200 at normal exchange] from the French Ministry of Finance upon presentation of a payment order purporting to have been issued by the Quartermaster of the Army of Occupation at Mayence. The order was referred back to Mayence and proved to be forgery.

The police yesterday arrested Henri Platel, aged 21, a tailor. They say Platel confessed to the crime, adding:

"Some say it is hard to obtain money from the Government. It's easy."

Another forged order for several hundred thousand francs was found in Platel's home, according to the police.

TAX PROVISION: The Company agrees to pay interest without deduction for any Normal Federal Income Tax to an amount not exceeding 2%, which it may lawfully pay at the source.

The following information is taken from a letter of Mr. J. Ledlie Hees, President of the Adirondack Power and Light Corporation, copies of which will be furnished on request, and which is summarized herewith:

The Adirondack Power and Light Corporation does the entire electric light and power business in Schenectady, Amsterdam, Watervliet, Oneida, Saratoga Springs and many other communities in this intensely industrialized region. The company also furnishes, under long time contracts, all of the electricity used by the distributing companies in Troy and Mechanicsville and by the electric railway systems in and about Albany, Schenectady, Troy, Utica and Rome, including practically all the interurban roads in the territory. In addition, the company does the gas business in Schenectady, Saratoga Springs and Oneida. It serves directly and indirectly a population of approximately 700,000.

The principal hydro-electric plants of the company are on the Hudson and Hoosic Rivers and East Canada Creek, and have a total present installed capacity of over 50,000 K. W. The company is in a peculiarly favorable position to take advantage of the large undeveloped hydro-electric resources in this territory.

Net earnings, after allowing $272,953 for depreciation, over 1¾ times the annual interest on mortgage bonds including this issue.

The First and Refunding Mortgage Gold Bonds are secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a first mortgage on property which alone has a replacement value, based on pre-war prices, in excess of the face amount of these Bonds outstanding. They are further secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a mortgage on the remainder of the property of the company subject only to a closed divisional lien of $5,000,000.

The original cost of the physical property is over 150% of all mortgage bonds outstanding, including this issue.

The General Electric Company owns approximately 50% of the common stock of the new Corporation.

We recommend these bonds for investment

FAULTY SHIPPING COSTS $110,000,000

Freight Claim Prevention Congress Meets Today to Discuss Remedy.

PUBLIC CO-OPERATION ASKED

Enormous Increase in Damage to Commodities Transported Last Year.

The first Freight Claim Prevention Congress ever held in this country will meet in Chicago today to discuss the problem of saving a good part of $110,000,000 annually. This money, primarily, is to be saved to the American railroads, but those who are behind the movement point out that it will be a real saving to the whole country, for the money lost comes out of railroad earnings and under the recently enacted railway legislation rates charged to the public are to be adequate to provide the roads with a "fair return on capital invested."

Loss and damage to freight handled by all the carriers in the United States this year will cost the railroads $110,000,000, according to estimates made by H. C. Pribble, General Claim Agent of the Atchison, Topeka & Sante Fe Railroad system, who also is Chairman of the General Committee of the freight claim division of the American Railway Association. A great part of this sum, at least half, in the opinion of experts, can be saved by more efficent handling and better packing. Marking and routing are other factors which play a part in the general scheme, and errors here frequently result in big losses.

If half of the $110,000,000 could be saved to the roads, and indirectly to the public, the savings would be equivalent to the annual interest charges on something more than $700,000,000 of new capital invested in railroad properties.

Railroad men point out that the purpose of the congress is not to find means of refuting claims, but to find ways for eliminating the causes of loss and damage in handling freight. In this, not only the railroads, but their clients, the shipping public, have been invited to co-operate, and the railroad men believe the first step in co-operation should be a general get-together of all interests.

Out of the meeting in Chicago, which will continue tomorrow, it is expected that new schemes for greater efficiency in transporting freight will come. Many of the railroads already have established schools for the development of expert packers, and these, it is hoped, will be extended.

During the period of Government operation of the carriers the percentage of goods damaged in transport rose over what it was in pre-war years. In 1914 payments made by the railways for loss and damage to freight were $32,376,000. Between that year and 1917 the increase in the freight movement was 37 per cent. and the increase in freight earnings was 33 per cent., while payment for loss and damage of freight increased to only $35,080,000, or 8.35 per cent.

In 1918 the total freight moved by the railroads under Government control was only 1.8 per cent. greater than the amount handled by the same railroads in 1917, while the payments for loss and damage to freight jumped up to $55,634,150, an increase over 1917 of 58 per cent. and over 1914 of 71 per cent. But this was nothing to what occurred in 1919. In that year the freight movement was almost 10 per cent. less than in 1918, and substantially less than in 1917. Meantime, loss and damage payments increased to $104,244,000. With less freight handled than in 1917, the increase in loss and damage payments was approximately $70,000,000, or 197 per cent., in two years. With an increase in freight business handled of about 40 per cent. over 1914, the increase in loss and damage payments was about 222 per cent.

ALIENS SETTLE IN CITIES.

Inter-Racial Council Says They Should Be Widely Distributed.

More Federal machinery is needed for the distribution of incoming aliens over the entire country so that they will not settle down in congested metropolitan areas, where 80 per cent. of immigrants settle if they have no knowledge of this country, according to a statement made public yesterday by the Inter-racial Council. The council declares that 80 per cent. of foreign-born population is in that part of the country bounded by a line drawn south from Minneapolis to Louisville and thence due east to the Atlantic. This area is only one-sixth of the country, but contains thirty-two of the fifty larger cities.

"America cannot go on indefinitely permitting immigrants to settle wherever they have a mind to settle," said the statement. "The time has come when this country must assume the intelligent distribution of the immigrants. Nothing that our next Congress could accomplish could be more important than the establishment of an effective system of Government distribution of immigration."

Promises to Expose "Ship Yard Thieves at Philadelphia."

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 14.—Congressman James A. Gallivan today issued a red-hot denial of the charge by Robert E. Kline, director of the Hog Island Shipyard, that Gallivan had used political influence and threats to bring about the rejection of a bid for waste iron and steel.

"If God gives me length of life and strength enough to go back to Washington in December," said Congressman Gallivan today on his return from New York, "I'll turn up the band of thieves who happened to get on the Government payroll at Philadelphia."

He characterized some of the men connected with the Emergency Shipping activities as a "cheap, crooked crowd," and added: "I'm going after those guys."

POSTAL CONVENTION SIGNED

New Agreement Reached in Spain Goes Into Effect Jan. 1.

MADRID, Nov. 14.—A postal convention making all the countries of North, Central and South America and Spain one postal territory was signed by the delegates of Spain, the United States and the other countries concerned late last night. The convention, which also provides for free transport of correspondence from any signatory nation to another signatory nation, will come into force Jan. 1 next.

After the signing of the convention the Director General of Spanish Communications tendered the delegates a dinner, and a telegram of greeting was sent to King Alfonso, who is in England, on behalf of the International Postal Union Congress.

Canadian Corporation Bonds are selling cheaper to-day than for many years past, largely owing to recent reductions in Canadian Victory Bond prices.

This, coupled with the premium on United States funds, makes it possible for the American investor to buy gilt-edged Canadian securities, at prices to yield 8% to 10%. Principal and interest on many of them are payable in American funds.

If you have money to invest, you cannot do better than place it in Canada to-day. If you will write us we will send you a list of most attractive offerings. Address:

KANSAS MILLERS FACE CHARGES TODAY

They Must Explain Curtailed Output to Industrial Relations Court.

WILL PLEAD JUSTIFICATION

Say They Acted, Not to Raise Prices, but Because Rivals Were Underselling Them.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 14.—The first hearing before the Kansas Court of Industrial Relations, at which employers are cited on a charge of violating the provision of the court act prohibiting the curtailment of production in an industry essential to public welfare, "to affect prices," is set for tomorrow, when the heads of seven Topeka flour milling concerns are to appear as defendants.

According to court officials, the proceedings originated with the court and were not prompted by complaints of individuals. The order stated that the court had information to indicate that curtailment of flour production existed throughout the State. Only Topeka millers are cited in the present proceedings, however.

Announcement is made by the millers that their defense will be a denial of the court's charge and a contention that it has been found necessary to curtail production "for sound business reasons" and not to affect prices; that the demand for flour has fallen off because the Northwestern millers are able to manufacture flour from wheat purchased in Canada more cheaply than Kansas wheat can be bought, and, therefore, can place the flour on the market a dollar a barrel cheaper than the Kansas millers' product.

Another reason, the millers assert, is the recent revision order by the United States Shipping Board, cutting the export duty on wheat from 25 cents to 5 cents a hundred, thus, they say, enabling European millers to buy wheat in the United States and from it manufacture flour which they can market at a price lower than American flour can be marketed abroad, the export duty on flour having been left intact by the Shipping Board. The millers generally admit that they have reduced their forces materially and that some plants have closed temporarily.

The case has attracted wide attention in the ranks of both employers and employes.

HOSPITAL DRIVE BEGINS.

Fund of $1,500,000 Is Sought to Provide Free Treatment for the Poor

The forty-first annual collection of the United Hospital Fund starts today. This organization, representing fifty-seven local hospitals, will seek before Nov. 29 a fund of $1,500,000 with which to provide free treatment for the sick poor. The collection by 2,000 volunteer workers will be confined to personal solicitation, and is under the direction of a Finance Committee headed by Henry J. Fisher. There will be no solicitation on the streets.

Ambulances of seven of the United hospitals in Manhattan, starting at different points in the city at a two-mile radius from Columbus Circle, will give a mobilization exhibition at noon.

The New York Academy of Medicine's endorsement of the United Hospital Fund was made public in a letter to Chairman Fisher from the President of the academy, Dr. George David Stewart, who says:

"The United Hospital Fund is to be commended for its efforts to collect considerable sums for hospitals and for its wise methods in distributing them. The fund has stimulated uniformity of reporting hospital statistics and has endeavored to improve the standards of hospital management."

Memorial Association Announces Formation of a Research Bureau.

Colonel William Boyce Thompson, President of the Roosevelt Memorial Association, announced yesterday the establishment of a Bureau of Roosevelt Research and Information under the general auspices of the trustees of the association, with headquarters at 1 Madison Avenue.

Hermann Hagedorn, Secretary of the Memorial Association, has been appointed Director of the Bureau and has been authorized to assemble certain material already collected concerning Colonel Roosevelt's life as a ranchman in the West and to write a book dealing with this phase of his career.

The recommendation to establish the Bureau of Roosevelt Research and information was made with the hearty approval of Mrs. Roosevelt, widow of the ex-President, by a special committee whose Chairman is Gifford Pinchot. The other members of the committee are: Lawrence F. Abbott, Carl E. Akely, Henry J. Allen, Hermann Hagedorn, Henry D. Lindsley, Mrs. Medill McCormick, James H. McGraw, Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. C. A. Severance, Oscar S. Strauss, Mark Sullivan, E. A. Vanvalkenburg, Henry C. Wallace and William Wrigley, Jr.

6-CENT FARE IN CLEVELAND.

Increase in Effect Yesterday, with 1-Cent Charge for a Transfer.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 14.—A six-cent street car fare, or nine tickets for 50 cents, and a one-cent charge for a transfer, the maximum allowed by the Tayler grant, under which the Cleveland street car system is operated, went ipto effect here today. It is the highest rate paid on the Cleveland street cars in many years. Under the terms of the Tayler grant the fare automatically goes up when the interest fund of the Cleveland Railway Company drops below $300,000. When the interest fund goes above $300,000 the fare automatically drops again on a sliding basis.

Lakewood and Cleveland Heights passengers are exempt from the increase, the fare from and to the two suburbs remaining at a nickel because of unexpired franchises. The fare within the Lakewood city limits is three cents.

Invested in established Financial Institution

—Well protected by stringent State Banking Laws.
—Lending money on good security on the safest basis known to bankers—widely distributed small loans.
—Strong management with enviable 7 years' record of proved value.
—An opportunity to share in at least two-third of the substantial profits.
—Yielding a total of 11% to the bondholders now and for several years past, and growing steadily with the solid expansion of its loan service in many States.

A combination of every one of the elements of security demanded by the most conservative investor, carrying with it a large share of the profits.

A Quarter Century of experience in finance and business management behind our recommendation of this investment.

COMMODITY PRICES

Heaviest Decline Last Week in Many Years—Many Prices Lowest Since 1917.

Last week witnessed the most general and violent fall in wholesale cash prices for commodities of any week in 1920, and probably the greatest general decline of any single week since 1893 or 1894. Of the eighteen commodities in the subjoined table, twelve declined last week, five were unchanged, and only the wholesale price of eggs advanced. Wheat, oats, coffee, cotton and print-cloths reached last week the lowest cash prices since early in 1917; corn and tin the lowest since 1916.

Other commercial lists, including more than the eighteen commodities given below, showed declines last week, in addition to those here indicated, in the wholesale prices of wool, coke, tinplate, steel scrap, spelter, hides, hops, hay, cottonseed oil, beans, peas, and live sheep and lambs. Bradstreet's states that four of seventy-six commodities forty-two declined last week, six advanced, and twenty-eight did not change.

Following are the cash prices for the principal commodities in the wholesale market at the close of business Saturday, a week before and a year ago.

PRESS BRITAIN TO TRADE.

Soviets Ask Quick Action and Hint at Recall of Envoys.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The latest note sent by M. Tchitcherin, the Russian Bolshevist Foreign Minister, to Lord Curzon, the British Foreign Minister, complains, according to The Daily Herald (Labor Organ) of the continual procrastination on the part of the British Government in the negotiations for the resumption of trade relations, and asks for immediate resumption and the swift conclusion of the negotiations.

The Herald adds that behind the firm courtesy of the note is a clear hint, that unless something is done, the Russian delegation will be withdrawn.

The Herald asserts that the draft agreement is supported by Premier Lloyd George and Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, but is bitterly opposed by Earl Curzon, Walter Hume Long and Winston Spencer Churchill, and that whichever way the decision goes there will be some resignations from the Ministry.

PLACE SUGAR CROP AT 17,085,000 TONS

World's 1920-1921 Yield May Exceed Previous Year's by 1,775,000 Tons.

12,580,500 TONS FROM CANE

Would Mean 628,000-Ton Gain—Beet Harvest Increase of 1,147,000 Tons Expected.

The world's sugar crop this year is likely to exceed the production of last year by some 1,775,000 tons, according to the estimates of Willet & Gray, publishers of The Weekly Statistical Sugar Trade Journal. The total crop, according to these forecasts, promises to turn out 17,085,500 tons, whereas last year's world production was 15,310,824 tons. Of this year's total, 12,580,500 tons is expected to represent the production of cane sugar, while 4,505,000 tons is likely to be the yield of sugar beets. If these figures prove correct in the final harvesting, the cane production will be 628,000 tons above that of last year, while the sugar-beet production will exceed last year's by 1,147,000 tons.

In the detailed survey of the coming cane sugar crop, it is anticipated that the United States, chiefly Louisiana, will provide 175,000 tons of the world's supply, as against 108,035 tons last year. American possessions, Porto Rico, Hawaiian Islands and the Virgin Islands, will give 965,000 tons, compared with 951,725 tons last year. Cuba, in the Willet & Gray estimates, is placed at a probable production of 4,000,000 tons, which is considerably higher than some other authorities estimate this year's output, compared with 3,730,077 tons in the 1919-1920 crop.

A drop of nearly 90,000 tons is indicated for British and French West Indies, the other West Indian Islands, Mexico and Central America, where the outlook is for not more than 469 000 tons, against 547,254 tons produced last season. But a good part of this loss is expected to be recovered in the increased production of South America, which now promises to turn out 1,015,000 tons, against only 952,205 tons a year ago.

Asia will show a substantial increase, amounting to nearly 200,000 tons if present indications are fulfilled, and as this increase is confined wholly to Java, Formosa and Japan, it should help the rest of the world. British India, which grows about 60 per cent. of all Asia's sugar cane, consumes virtually all that it produces. The African production will not be greatly changed from last year's aggregate of 550 490 tons. If there is any change on that continent, the indications are that it will be in the nature of a nominal increase.

The great increase in beet sugar which is forecast for this year is mainly due to the improvement in Europe, where the crop outlook is for at least 900,000 tons more than was produced in the 1919-1920 season, half of this gain is expected to come from Germany, where a crop of 1,150,000 tons is looked for, against a production of 750,000 tons last season. Other increases in beet sugar production in Europe are predicted to be about as follows: Czechoslovakia, 115,000 tons; France, 90,000 tons; Spain, 95 000 tons; Belgium, 80,000 tons; Holland, 60,000 tons, and Sweden, 30,000 tons. On the other hand, the production in Russia, Ukraine and Poland is expected to drop fully 50,000 tons and Italy will fall under last year's figures by 8,000 to 10,000 tons.

In the United States, which in recent years has become a large producer of beet sugar, the 1920-1921 crop is expected to be approximately 950,000 tons, compared with 652 557 tons last year, and in Canada, where also the industry is making rapid strides, the crop this year is expected to account for 35,000 tons, against only 16,500 tons last year.

Fire on Blackwell's Island.

A call for fire apparatus was sent last night from Metropolitan Hospital on Blackwell's Island after attendants had discovered a blaze among old records in the basement of the convalescent pavilion. Engine Company 49, stationed on the island, put out the fire in a few minutes. The pavilion is fireproof.

MATERIAL BUYERS STOP CANCELING

Lumber Now at Bottom Levels Based on Mill Minimums

$1,171,000,000 IS PLEDGED

This Total for Nine Months of 1920, Against $871,000,000 Last Year.

Significant developments are transpiring in the national building industry to which importance is attached by the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports.

In a telephone canvas of leading manufacturers of all of the basic building materials entering into construction of homes and commercial structures, these conditions were reported:

Buyers who have been prone to cancel orders are either accepting deliveries or are now merely requesting that shipments be held until after the first of the year.

More money has been pledged or already invested in new construction for the nine months of 1920 than was pledged in the same period in 1919. For 113 cities $1,170,000,000 was invested in new building enterprises, as against only $871,000,000 in the same period of 1919. The difference is, however, that $1,170,000,000 this year provided for 325,000,000 square feet at $3.60 a square foot, against 272,000,000 square feet on the smaller investment of $871,000,000, when the average cost was $3.20 a square foot.

Competent authorities in various departments of building material manufacture declared that nothing like that amount of construction work has been completed. Much of it represents material still to be delivered. Furthermore, available stocks on hand or likely to be produced between now and the first of the building season of 1921 will allow for little or any margin for the late comers into the building market.

Cement offers as good a barometer as any commodity because it enters into probably the greatest variety of structures, including railroad work, which will be still another factor of drain upon material supply.

In the cement manufacturing districts supplying the New York market the present rate of shipment and estimating November and December shipments, mills in zones 1 and 2 will have shipped in 1920 over 31,000,000 barrels.

With good transportation facilities, such as manufacturers are now experiencing, and absences of arbitrary orders from the Interstate Commerce Commission and better labor conditions, the same Eastern mills should be able, in the absence of the evils referred to, to ship in 1921 several millions of barrels more than in 1920.

Manufacturers enter the new year with less contract obligations for delivery of cement through 1921, whereas in 1920 they had heavy obligations for future shipments.

However, the cement ground during the month of October, 1920, in zones 1 and 2 exceeded by 6 per cent. that of October, 1919, and amounted to 3,200,000 barrels.

The shipments were nearly three and a half million barrels, but because of lack of cars amounted to only 97 per cent. of what they were a year ago. October production was the greatest ever recorded.

The cement on hand has dwindled as of Nov. 1 to almost negligible proportions, the total being 750,000 barrels or only 33 per cent. of what was on hand in October, 1919. Leaving outside of the calculation the two largest companies in the industry, these two companies having only 175,000 barrels each on hand, the average for eighteen manufacturers was only 22,500 barrels in the warehouses, which does not represent very much more than the dust on the beams. Stockhouses are thus practically empty. Never has such a condition obtained before.

Lumber manufacturers have issued to the trade their minimum price lists and sufficient time has elapsed to indicate that they are really minimum. Heavy tests have been applied, but none has budged from the rock bottom set. Dealers are still piled high, however, at distributing points, but they are content to wait.

There have been no price changes of any sort in the week just closed.

On the Pacific Coast only 50 per cent. of the fir plants are running, 60 per cent. of the shingle mills have stopped. Half of the Southern pine small mills that started on the rising market, have ceased operation and the big established mills have lopped off half their production and may stop entirely.

Canada does not produce spruce in the Winter so that the condition in that regard is normal. Southern pine, which is the dominant home-building lumber in this market, is on low production schedules and is holding rigidly to the rock bottom price base. Their next move is to close rather than cut prices farther.

Building money is going to be easier. The architects have been making a first hand study of the entire situation and they are advising their clients that delay, in the light of low stocks and growing demand, is dangerous if they need their projected structures.

Brick is cheaper in New York than in any other section of the East, but it is already moving up. The entire building situation is gaining strength and the sooner the manufacturer can gauge the market's needs and the dealer can operate at his normally efficient speed, the quicker construction costs will strike a fixed level. The market is plainly headed that way now.

Building Sold for $1,000,000.

Max N. Natanson has sold to Morris P. Altman the Merchants Building, 693 Broadway, at the southwest corner of Fourth Street and Broadway for $1,000,000. This is a sixteen-story building with basement and sub-basement on a plot 80 by 100 feet. The building is fully rented and brings an annual return of about $100,000. William S. Sussman was the broker in the transaction.

THREE BURNED BY GASOLINE

Woman Holds Lighted Candle Too Close While Cleaning Clothes.

Three persons were burned, one seriously, in a fire in the kitchen of the home of Mrs. Mary Noble, 68 Bevan Street, Jersey City, last night. The blaze was caused by the explosion of a bottle of gasoline. Mrs. Noble placed a lighted candle too close to the gasoline while cleaning her garments.

Henry Noble, 6 years old, was burned on face, hands and body and taken to the City Hospital in a critical condition. Mrs. Noble also suffered severe burns on hands and face. Patrolman Goodman, who carried the woman and boy to the street, was also burned slightly.

Hotel Men Ask Liquor Ruling.

In a letter to John F. Kramer, Prohibition Commissioner, calling attention to the recent Supreme Court decision upholding the right to remove liquors from a storage warehouse, William H. Hirst, counsel for the Society of Restaurateurs of New York, asked an immediate decision on the applications of hotel and restaurant keepers for permits to purchase wines and liquors for cooking purposes. The Internal Revenue Department has hitherto refused to issue the permits, he says.

ASKS CHARITY FOR GERMANY

James W. Gerard Speaks at Y. M. C. A. War Memorial Dedication.

America should be charitable and humane toward Germany, said James W. Gerard, ex-Ambassador to Germany, in an address yesterday afternoon in the West Side Y. M. C. A., 318 West Fifty-seventh Street, after the dedication of a bronze memorial tablet to the members of the organization who died in the war.

"Our attitude should be one of charity, not revenge," Mr. Gerard said. "We must be strong in humanity." He expressed the belief that Germany would keep faith if admitted to the League of Nations, and said he thought she should be permitted to join. He also expressed faith in the determination of the German people not to allow their liberties to be infringed upon by either the old régime or Bolshevism.

"France may go too far in demanding indemnity," Mr. Gerard said, "and stimulate the desire for revenge among the Germans until the pendulum of conquest swings back again. Revenge is the mother of wars." When asked by a member of the audience, he said that the amounts now being proposed in Europe as indemnity against Germany are too large.

The subject of Mr. Gerard's address was "Keeping America Strong." As a first factor toward this end he urged the elimination of graft and the participation in politics of every citizen. He discussed the inequalities of privilege which existed in Germany and Russia before the war and their part in bringing on the world conflict.

MORE FISH FOR FRANCE.

Government Is Granting Subsidies to Encourage Industry.

France is trying to improve the conditions under which the people receive their fish, and, at the same time, to increase the supply, in the hope that less money will be spent to purchase imported frozen meat. The work is under the supervision of M. Bignon, Under Secretary of State for the Mercantile Marine and Fisheries. His object is to encourage private initiative by the granting of subsidies. He has organized a Fisheries Fair at Lorient, where improvements in fishing methods are demonstrated, together with new systems of packing and transport in ice wagons.

Under the provisions of a new law the number of vessels in the trade is to be greatly increased, special fishing ports are to be built, and fish trains are to be run. During the war 210,000 tons of fishing vessels went to the bottom; these are to be replaced by modern motor-driven boats, and for their construction the State is prepared to advance funds. The building program already includes 152 fishing boats and ten "receiving vessels," which are being bought abroad. Some of these are already in commission. Attention is being given also to port facilities, for already there is overcrowding at Boulogne, Lorient and La Rochelle.

A plan has been drawn up for the construction of a special fish port at Lianne to relieve Boulogne, which will be completed in ten years; at Lorient a fish port has already been started, and at La Rochelle similar plans are far advanced. A new port is to be built near Marseilles and another probably at Port de Bouc for the Mediterranean's fisheries.

In these municipalities the chambers of commerce are to take a financial interest, while the State, which makes the necessary initial loans, will hold a certain number of founders' shares. The improvement of small ports is likewise being studied, and, whenever the local population is willing to take a share in it the work will be undertaken by the State.

No less attention is being paid to the question of cold storage wagons for inland transport and of refrigerating warehouses, says the London Times Trade Supplement in describing the plan, so that a certain quantity of fish may be preserved for subsequent sale during the period of scarcity. Warehouses are to be put up at the principal ports and in the larger cities. One at St. Pierre et Miquelon will preserve surplus fish from the Newfoundland Banks, whereas another at Lorient is to stock the produce on its arrival in France. A warehouse is being constructed at Gare d'Ivry, Paris, by the Orleans Railway Company with State support, and two more will shortly go up elsewhere in the capital. Similar steps are to be taken by the municipalities of Lyons, St. Etienne, Dijon and Strasbourg. The connecting link, an adequate supply of cold storage trains is being supplied by the State, though some trains will no doubt be formed by the railway companies independently.

PAPER GARMENTS SHOWN.

Samples from Austria Exhibited by Commerce Bureau.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has on exhibition a large assortment of Austrian paper clothing and associated paper articles collected for the information of the American clothing and other interested industries. The exhibit includes workmen's suits, table covers, collars and cuffs, laundry bags, wall decorations, twine and other articles.

In this interesting collection, says The Scientific American, there is a suit made of 40 per cent. paper, which sells in Austria for 675 crowns, or about $2.65 in American money at the present rate of exchange. A workman's all-paper suit in brown is quoted at 32 crowns, or about 13 cents in American money. A blue all-paper suit is more expensive, 120 crowns (about 55 cents) being the asking price.

The report which accompanies the paper samples states that the garments are really washable, cold water, soap, and a scrubbing brush being the proper means. It is also reported that during the past year Austrian paper goods manufacturers have exported large quantities of their output to Italy and to Turkey. A previous report spoke of about 40,000 German paper suits being on display in a store on the Strand, London. After a brief stay in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, the paper articles will be offered to clothing and other interested manufacturers for examination.

Review of 22d Engineers Tonight.

The 22d Engineers, first regiment of militia of its branch of the service to be reorganized and Federalized since the war, will be reviewed tonight in the armory at Fort Washington Avenue and 168th Street. The reviewing officers will be Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Colonel George Snyder, Colonel H. H. Treadwell, Lieut. Col. William S. Conrow, Major H. A. Finac and other officers from the Militia Bureau of the War Department.

The Past is the Key to the Future

Russell Sage said, "If you ever make money you must make it on your own judgment and foresight. When you see a good opportunity to invest, do it quickly. The fellow who waits either loses the chance altogether or pays a premium to one who thought and acted quickly."

Long before the elevated road in Ninth Ave. was extended in Columbus Ave., north of 59th St., and when the West Side of to-day was a bleak and barren waste, shrewd business men bought large parcels of lots and reaped immense profits when the building up of the West Side began.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—High pressure continued during Sunday over practically all parts of the country, but there were indications Sunday night of a disturbance over the east central Gulf of Mexico, which will probably move northeastward. Cold weather continued during Sunday generally east of the Rocky Mountains. The outlook is that the disturbance over the Gulf of Mexico will gain in intensity and move northeastward and be attended by rains and snows Monday night or Tuesday in the Middle Atlantic and New England States. The temperature will be lower Monday in the region of the Great Lakes and Tuesday in the Eastern and Southeastern States.

FORECAST TODAY AND TUESDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair in south, cloudy and colder with probably snow flurries in north portion Monday. Tuesday unsettled, probably rain or snow with lower temperature.

Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey—Partly cloudy Monday. Tuesday unsettled, probably rain or snow and colder.

Northern New England—Cloudy Monday and Tuesday; colder Tuesday.

Southern New England—Partly cloudy Monday. Tuesday unsettled with somewhat lower temperature.

Western Pennsylvania and Western New York—Cloudy Monday, followed by snow flurries and colder Monday night and Tuesday.

North of Sandy Hook will be moderate west winds, partly cloudy weather Monday.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras—Moderate variable, becoming northeast and probably increasing by Monday night; cloudy weather Monday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

MEXICAN ENVOY WINS PLEDGES OF EUROPE

Five Nations to Grant Recognition Prior to Settlement of Claims, He Says.

OIL ISSUE IGNORED THERE

Palavicini Returns and Tells of British, French, Belgian, Italian and Spanish Attitude.

European Governments are not demanding the settlement of damages to their nationals during the Mexican revolution nor changes in Mexican petroleum legislation as preliminary to recognition of the new Mexican Government, according to Felix F. Palavicini, special Ambassador of the Mexican Government to England, France, Belgium, Italy and Spain, who returned yesterday on the Cunarder Imperator.

In a statement to reporters on the liner as she was waiting for the tide to get into the pier at the foot of West Fourteenth Street, Mr. Palavicini, who is the proprietor of El Universal, a leading Mexican paper which has an office at 141 Broadway, said that throughout his negotiations, lasting five months, the alleged confiscatory petroleum legislation was not even mentioned.

The special envoy was received personally by the Kings of Spain, Italy and Belgium and by the President of France. He said that while the European Chancelleries were well informed as to the course of Mexican affairs, the press and public gave them little attention, and in this way his task was made easier, in that he had no occasion to combat false conceptions regarding Mexico resulting from erroneous reports, which, he said, had been circulated widely in the United States.

Tells of Results of Mission.

"My mission to Europe," continued the Envoy, "was not an attempt to align the old world powers with Mexico against the bugaboo of American aggression. It was pursuant to the policy which President-elect Alvaro Obregon supports—friendship with the entire world, especially with our nearest and most powerful neighbor, the United States.

"Despite a lapse of six years in diplomatic relations, the British Government assured me in writing that it was well pleased with the work accomplished by Provisional President de la Huerta, that it would aid in every way the work of reconstruction and would resume diplomatic relations with the new Government as soon as General Obregon took office on Dec. 1.

"King Albert assured me there were no points of difference between the Belgian and Mexican Governments, but a sincere desire for closer relations by Belgium. President Millerand declared the French Government was only awaiting for the proper occasion to show formally its friendship for Mexico. The King of Spain showed himself greatly interested in Mexican oil and told me he had advised Spanish bankers to invest in tankers to carry oil to Europe. The Italian Government has shown its attitude by aiding in the establishment of a direct steamship line from Genoa to Vera Cruz. It also has offered to act as a 'big brother' to Mexico in European diplomacy and is sending General Pepino Garabaldi to Mexico to return my visit and to study conditions."

British Position Stated.

With regard to dangers suffersd by British subjects during the internal disorders of the last ten years, Mr. Palavicini said that the British Government assured him it was exerting no pressure on the Mexican Government with regard to indemnification, was not insisting upon a settlement as a necessary preliminary to recognition and would take no diplomatic action in the matter until a competent Mexican Commission had passed on the claims.

"I am well satisfied with the results of my mission," he added, "especially since the outline of the new Mexican policy I explained concided with what I had urged throughout the Administration of the late President and which resulted in my expulsion from Mexico for eight months. President-elect Obregon is sincerely desirous of gaining the friendship and co-operation of all nations and I found a ready response in every European capital."

Mr. Palavicini said that he expected to arrive in Mexico City about Nov. 21 to report on the results of his mission. He was accompanied by his wife and his secretary, J. M. Durany Casatonda. Third Secretary of the Embassy in Washington, who acted as interpreter.

Military School Hall Burned.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Academic Hall, the largest building at St. John's Military School at Manlius, was destroyed by fire late today. The loss was estimated at $200,000. The flames did not reach the living quarters of the students and no one was injured.

How to bequeath "fool-proof money"

One way not to do it

A NEW YORK girl, whose father we had known in a business way many years ago, inherited a fortune. When 20 years old she married a man with a likeable personality but no business training. He was an artist by profession and a dreamer by temperament. He felt the need to make a great deal of money quickly in order to wipe out the stigma of being "a rich woman's husband."

Within a year he was eager to buy stock in a newly formed manufacturing company in the South. It seemed a sure thing. He simply needed capital. He pictured the opportunity glowingly to his wife, and within 90 days all but the few thousand dollars of her personal bank account was in his hands.

His venture was moderately successful at the start. Soon the dividends stopped coming. To reassure his wife he took out large life insurance in her favor, but failed to pay the premiums after the first year, and the policy lapsed.

Three years later he died, leaving his wife and children practically penniless. The wife found work in a Sixth Avenue store, and when last heard of was supporting herself and her little boys with great difficulty.

PARENTS who wish to prevent the misuse of money they leave their children will do well to look into a

for safeguarding money

The plan is this:

1. A Columbia Trust Fund is simply money set aside under the protection of the Columbia Trust Company and invested to provide assured income for definite objects.
2. Life insurance or any other money may be used to form the Trust Fund. We are bound by a written agreement to carry out your wishes definitely and absolutely.
3. We will make investments of the Trust Fund for you in such securities as are lawful for Trustees, or, if you prefer, you can give us definite instructions to follow.
4. Income from the Trust Fund will be paid in installments to whom you wish and when you wish and in the amount you wish.

You can take up this matter at any of our offices. Please ask for the Vice-President or Manager in charge. He will be glad to talk with you personally and promptly—of course, without obligation on your part.
